CLEMENCY CALL

Wallace, Maddox Speak To Crowd

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Two deep South political leaders, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and Lt. Gov. Lester G. Maddox of Georgia, urged in a "Rally for Calley" Friday night that the people put pressure on President Nixon to grant clemency to Lt. William L. Calley Jr.

Calley, 27, stands convicted by court-martial of deliberately murdering Vietnamese women, children and old men who were unarmed, unresisting and were pleading for mercy and screaming as they died.

He was put in the stockade here after his conviction Monday but was ordered out and back to his apartment by Nixon Thursday night in an under-guard, "confined to quarters" status. As such he could not attend the rally but could hear it on radio.

About 3,000 persons attended the affair, arranged by the American Legion post at Columbus, the city next to this base where Calley was tried. Six big wooden collection boxes were placed on the floor of municipal auditorium for donations to Calley.

"You have a cause, but you mustn't forget about it," Wallace told the audience, which gave him several standing ovations. "I believe that in the final analysis President Nixon is going to do the right thing.

"We do call on the American Congress and on the President because everyone here tonight had some loved ones in Vietnam or Korea."

Before the rally, Wallace paid a brief visit to Calley in the latter's bachelor apartment on the post, where a military policeman guards him day and night.

"Thank God for Lieutenant Calley and thank God for people like you," Maddox told the rally. "Don't write your governor, congressman, television, radio or newspapers.

"Just write President Nixon and tell him what you want and the President will respond just like he did last night, and he'll go all the way. Freedom is going to triumph in this country, or military men are going to be backed by the people and backed by the President and backed by our country, so help us God."

Wallace, who was a third party candidate for president in the last election, referred to the fact that an appeal for Calley through the military and then the federal courts could take years, perhaps five.

"There is no sense in this world to take so long for an appeal," Wallace said. "And I say the politicians in Washington better not prolong this past the next presidential election.

"The action of President Nixon (in releasing Calley) was in response to the attitude to people like you . . . because of the mass of people like you. In my judgment the silent majority is not going to be silent any longer." "When you are in combat you are thinking about yourself," Wallace said, "and the reason Lieutenant Calley was in Vietnam was because the government sent him there. He might have made an error, but when you are in combat you want to stay alive."

The witnesses at the Calley trial said there was no combat in the My Lai hamlet during the American infantry sweep of March 16, 1968.

Wallace said the Calley case was having the effect of bringing "the good people of this country together and meetings such as tonight are going to eventually straighten this country out."

The auditorium was evacuated for 25 minutes prior to the start of the program because, police said, the management got a telephone call that a bomb would go off at 8 p.m. The few hundred who were in the building at that time stood outside until 8:03 when police decided nothing was going to happen.

President Cites 'Public Interest'

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon announced Saturday that he would personally review the case of Lt. William Calley Jr. and make the final decision on the sentence in the case.

Presidential aides said Nixon had decided to exercise his discretionary powers as commander-in-chief because of the "widespread public interest" in the case of the 23-year-old officer who has been sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians in My Lai.

John D. Erli Erhlichmann, an assistant to the president, said Nixon felt it important to add "a nonlegal, nontechnical review" to the normal military review process.

He said Nixon made the decision Friday evening after consultation with several cabinet officers including defense secretary Melvin R. Laird, attorney General John Mitchell, Health, education and Welfare secretary Elliot L. Richardson and Robert Finch Counselor to the president.

Nixon Thursday ordered Calley removed from the stockade at Ft. Benning, Ga., and confined instead to his quarters while the case is reviewed. The effect of the president's action today, would be to keep Calley under house arrest until the president himself reviews the case.

"The significance of this announcement today is that before the sentence is put into operation at any stage of the review procedure the president will personally review the case and make the final decision," Ehrlichmann told newsmen at an unusual morning briefing.

"This he has the right to do under the constitution as commander-in-chief and under the code of military justice . . . as the superior conventing officer," he said.

Nixon took the action following an unprecedented outpouring of public sentiment, the only convicted so far in the My Lai massacre in which more than 100 Vietnamese civilians reportedly were killed three years ago. Ehrlichmann said there was ample precedent for the president's action. He pointed out that Abraham Lincoln intervened in several military cases during the Civil War.

"The president felt that with this case having captured the interest of the American people to the degree it has it was important for him to make clear at this time that the review procedure would contain more than the technical, legal review required," Ehrlichmann said.

When asked to amplify what other elements would go into the president's review of the case, he replied, "That's sort of in the heart of the man."

There was no immediate indication when the matter would come to the president's attention. It is estimated that 30 to 60 days will be required to prepare the records of the case for the next step in the military review process.

This step would be for the convening authority, Lt. Gen. Alfred Connor, the commander of the Third Army, to have his judge advocate examine the case and make findings on both the guilt or innocence and the sentence.

From here the case would go to the court of military review and then to the court of military appeals.

In the ordinary course of events, the case would then come to the secretary of the army for final disposition but in Calley's case, it will go to the president.

At each step in the review process, the sentence could be reduced but not increased.

The President planned to spend the rest of the weekend working on his updated report on Vietnam and further U.S. troop cuts.

Officers Killed By Ambushers

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI)—Two policemen were ambushed and killed by shotgun blasts last night when they responded to a phony report of a burglary.

"It was a set up," said Lt. Donald J. Mawn. "The officers arrived and pulled in the driveway and were shot down from ambush. The lady (who lived at the home) said she didn't call police."

Police said Paul C. Teel, 25, was hit as he stepped out of the patrol car. Leonard A. Christiansen, 30, fired three shots and managed to summon help on the car radio, but was dead by the time other officers arrived.

A shotgun believed stolen from a California Highway Patrol car burned during a disturbance here two years ago was found nearby. Three shotgun casings were also discovered.

Police issued an all points bulletin for four young men who witnesses said they saw running from the scene. They were believed to have fled in 1962 or 1963 yellow Chevrolet and were wearing "hunting" clothing—wool shirts, caps and cordoroy jackets.

All the suspects in the 9:30 p.m. shooting were believed to be Negroes.

Police said Teel and Christiansen had pulled into a driveway which was bordered by heavy foliage on each side.

Demos Assail Veto On Span Crossing

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Democrats today assailed Gov. Ronald Reagan's veto of the controversial San Francisco Bay southern crossing bill as a victory for the "highway lobby at the expense of the people."

On the Republican side, the criticism was shared by Sen. Peter H. Behr of San Rafael, who said through an aide he would vote to override the governor's veto if such a move is attempted.

Marin's assemblyman, William T. Bagley of San Rafael, also a Republican, said he was inclined to vote to override but wanted to hear arguments first.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, said there was "no need" to submit construction of the proposed bridge to a Bay Area plebiscite as proposed by Reagan.

"If the governor is sincere in his repeated demand for economy in government, he won't ask taxpayers to spend more for the privilege of restating their opposition to the bridge via the ballot box," Moretti said.

"Only five months ago the people in that area confirmed their opposition to the span by electing state representatives pledged to oppose its construction," he said.

Said Behr, "It is highly unfortunate that Governor Reagan misread the will of the overwhelming majority of the people in the Bay Area."

Reagan vetoed the bill by Democratic Assemblyman Robert Crown of Alameda yesterday and proposed that Bay Area voters decide whether the estimated $300 million to $600 million structure should be built.

Crown said he will ask the legislature to override the veto when the lawmakers return to Sacramento after their annual Easter vacation next week. It

Army Defends Actions In 'White Paper' To Units

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Army sent to its units throughout the world today a "White Paper" defending its prosecution of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. It said it had a "moral and legal obligation" to prosecute the officer for the murder of civilians at My Lai.

The document said the Army prosecuted Calley because there was an "overwhelming body of evidence" his actions at My Lai violated the Geneva conventions.

"They (the conventions) cannot be abandoned and adopted again at will by the United States armed forces, depending upon the character of the conflict or the non-observance of the conventions by the enemy," the Army said.

Calley, 27, a former infantry platoon leader, received a life sentence for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians at the hamlet March 16, 1968.

The paper described the action taken against Calley as "painful and difficult." But it said the Army would have "failed to meet its obligation to the laws of our nation had it not acted." "Congress ratified the Geneva accords and as formal treaties, they constitute part of the "supreme law of the land" under the constitution, the Army said.

"Acknowledging this responsibility to the nation and the Congress the Department of the Army has had a moral and legal obligation to adopt a continuing policy of investigating fully all allegations of violations of the laws of war involving American personnel," the paper.

High-Level Hamilton Rounds Set

A group of five Marin County officials will travel to Washington, D.C., later this month for a series of meetings with Air Force and Federal Aviation Agency representalives on possible joint civilian-military use of Hamilton Air Force Base.

The meetings — first high-level sessions between Marin and Washington officials since the way was opened officially late in 1969 for joint use at Air Force bases — are designed solely as exploratory, according to a spokesman for the county delegation.

Ray W. Foreaker, chairman of the county aviation commission, said yesterday the county group seeks to find out whether the federal government wishes to proceed on a joint-use plan for Hamilton and, if so, what kind of an operation it might envision.

Besides Foreaker, the county delegation will be made up of Louis H. Barr, chairman of the board of supervisors; supervisors John F. McInnis and Arnold M. Baptiste, and Richard Nave, another aviation commissioner.

The meetings, tentatively scheduled for two of three days the week of April 18, are being arranged by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District.

The group will take to Washington a scheme drawn up for the aviation commission that Foreaker views as a basis for discussion.

The proposal calls for construction of a 25,000-square-foot

Heavy Fighting In Central Highlands

SAIGON (UPI) — Communiques reported heavy fighting today around Fire Base 6 on South Vietnam's Central Highlands where North Vietnamese suicide squads were trying to oust U.S. and South Vietnamese defenders.

Two Americans were reported slain in the battle and U.S. headquarters in Saigon said four other U.S. soldiers were killed and six wounded Thursday in an accidental artillery attack on an outpost near the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) border.

A spokdeman said one artillery shell fired by "friendly" forces struck a night bivouac manned by troops of the U.S. 101st Airborne Division's 3rd Brigade nine miles west of Cam Lo and about four miles south of the DMZ. The incident was reported "under investigation."

Elswehwere in South Vietnam, Communist forces renewed the attack on Duc Duc, the district capital already in ruins from a terror raid a week ago.

The battle at Fire Base 6 brought the war back to the strategic Central Highlands for the first time in several weeks.

UPI Correspondent Robert E. Sullivan reported that the bodies of two Americans were found and removed from the hilltop position this morning. Sullivan said the bodies were not those of helicopter crewmen. The U.S. Command had reported Thursday that one crewman was killed and one wounded when two U.S. Army UH1 Hey copters were shot down while trying to rescue retreating South Vietnamese soldiers when the base was overrun.

Military sources said there were American advisers and a chemical "people sniffer" team at the base, 280 miles northeast of Saigon, when it was attacked, Wednesday, but had declined to say what had happened to them. Hanoi Radio reported "some" of the Americans had been captured. Sullivan's report was the first word on their fate since the Hanoi broadcast.

A military spokesman said 1,180 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed in three days of fighting in and near the base, eight miles southwest of Dak To and six miles east of the Cambodian border. South Vietnamese casualties were listed at 61 killed and 82 wounded, including 41 killed and 57 wounded in Friday's fighting.

In Cambodia, the high command reported U.S. helicopter gunships mistakenly strafed Cambodian troops last Tuesday, killing one Cambodian soldier and wounding eight. Buddhist monks said the same attack killed eight monks and 20 other civilians. The incident occurred for paying your newspaperboy promptly

It's tough for a youngster to "come back some other time" for payment. As a young businessman, your I-J carrier boy is trying to do a job for you, rain or shine, on time. He really appreciates your paying him the first time he calls to collect. Keep it up, won't you?

Miss your paper? Please phone before 6:30 p.m.

Sad Decision

BERLIN (UPI)—East Germany's refusal to open the Berlin wall over Easter to allow family reunions for the first time in five years saddened many West Berliners today.

"I thought I would be able to see my sister for the first time since 1966," Frau Ruth Finger said.

Frau Finger was one of 500,000 West Berliners with close relations in East Berlin. They have not been allowed to see them since the Whitsun Holiday in the spring of 1966.

This year their hopes were high because the East Germans themselves proposed negotiations on opening the wall.

But in three meetings between West Berlin and East German officials, the last held in East Berlin March 27, the East Germans refused to confine the talks to the issuance of Easter wall passes to West Berliners.

Water Limits

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Mexico City, faced with a water shortage, will limit supplies to its downtown office district to 10 hours a day, Mayor Alfonso Martinez Dominguez said today.

Martinez said the federal government is drilling 60 wells at a cost of $43 million to meet the capital city's needs.

Blast Nixon

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet newspapers today denounced as "disgraceful" the decision by President Nixon to delay the imprisonment of Lt. William L. Calley.

Both Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, and the Young Communist League newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, commented on the Calley case.

Pravda said U.S. military leaders are afraid that the Calley case will turn the youth against the army, and for that reason the Pentagon has organized "a campaign in support of this murderer, who has become a symbol of America's disgrace.

Reject Contract

LONDON (UPI)—Workers at one of British Ford's key plants dealt a setback today to hopes for speedy settlement of Ford's nine-week-old strike, Britain's costliest on record.

A vote at the firm's factory at Halewood, near Liverpool, rejected a management pay increase offer as Ford officials were predicting the company's 50,000 strikers would be back on the job Monday.

At a mass meeting of nearly 5,000 workers, strike organizers urged Ford Halewood employees to "continue the struggle, stay out on strike and call on the rest of the Ford workers in the country to support us."

Despite the reverse at Halewood, Ford officials said they were still confident this weekend would be the last in the long, costly walkout.

Satchmo Improves

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jazz trumpeter Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong, hospitalized with heart trouble, was reported significantly improved today after suffering a setback earlier this week.

A spokesman for Beth Israel Hospital said the 70-year-old Armstrong "made a significant improvement overnight but he still remains critically ill."

Armstrong entered the hospital's intensive care unit in critical condition March 15 but improved to the point where he sang to the hospital staff.

Pakistan Charges Harassment

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Pakistan accused India again today of interference in its internal affairs, this time charging that four Indian warships harassed a Pakistani merchant ship at sea.

Radio Pakistan, the voice of the central government, said in its morning news broadcast the government lodged a strong protest with the Indian High Commission in Islamabad, West Pakistan.

It was the latest in a series of Pakistani accusations against India of meddling in the civil war between East Pakistan and the central government, based 1,000 miles away across Indian territory in West Pakistan.

The broadcast said the Indian vessels began to harass the Pakistani freighter Ocean Endurance 70 miles west of the Indian naval base at Dawarka.

Long Trial Seen In Henderson Case

FT. MEADE, Md. (UPI)—A bombardment of motions and a flood of witnesses promises to make the court-martial of Col. Oran K. Henderson nearly as long as the just-concluded four-month trial of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. (See Calley story, page 1.)

Henry B. Rothblatt, New York attorney and chief civilian counsel for Henderson, said before the 90-minute opening session Friday that he would "bombard the court with motions" in an attempt to get dismissal of the charges.

His first five motions caused the judge, Col. Peter S. Wondolowski, to adjourn the first day of preliminary hearings after only 90 minutes and set the next session for Tuesday.

Henderson, 50, highest-ranking officer still charged with My Lai crimes, is accused of covering up the My Lai massacre and lying to a special Pentagon inquiry into it. He was commander of the American Division's 11th Brigade which made the sweep into My Lai.

Lt. Col. Frank J. Dorsey, chief military counsel for the defense, said after the Friday session: "Almost everybody who was in the American Division, is a prospective witness" in the court-martial.

He also told the judge during the proceedings that because of defense motions, the preliminary hearings probably would last for 45 to 60 days, overlapping the court-martial of Capt. Ernest Medina, which begins May 24 at Ft. McPherson, Ga.

The government, represented by Maj. Carroll J. Tichenor, already has submitted a list of 78 prospective witnesses, including Capt. Hugh C. Thompson, a helicopter pilot who made the first report of civilians killed at My Lai.

First Lindsay For President Office Opened By Young Demos

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The first John Lindsay for President headquarters was opened yesterday with appropriate hoopla — but nary a word from the New York mayor.

A Stanford University coed cut the blue ribbon on the financial district office and three dozen young Democrats celebrated with punch and chocolate-chip cookies.

Then the Lindsay supporters placed a pre-planned telephone call to the Republican mayor. But an aide told them Lindsay was visiting a day care center and couldn't take the call.

Neil Macey, 23, cochairman of the youthful organization trying to get Lindsay to seek the Democratic presidential nomination, was undaunted.

He said a mayor's aide told him on the phone "they knew all about our organization. I received a very positive response."

Macey, a Stanford graduate student, and Carl Nes, his co-chairman and long-time friend, rented the headquarters over a barber shop for $150 a month. They hope to open a second in San Jose, Calif., later this month and organize a "March on the Nation" in June. The "march" would be a cross-country bus trip to New York where they hope Lindsay will receive them.

"You've got to start small when you have a candidate who is not even a member of the party," said Nes, 23.

In New York, another group of young people held a news conference Friday to urge Lindsay's candidacy. They wore buttons saying the mayor should "switch and fight."

The enthusiasm of the young Lindsay supporters wasn't shared by most top California Democrats. They'd prefer the mayor didn't switch parties and run in the state's crucial presidential primary.

"There's too much support, deep and ingrained, for candidates we already have," said State Senate majority leader George Moscone. "It's too much for John Lindsay to overcome.

"The real problem Democrats have is choosing which of our heavies should get the nomination."

However, former congressman George Brown Jr., who has a big following among California's young, peace-oriented Democrats, has agreed to speak April 30 at a Lindsay rally in San Jose.

Brown said he was encouraging Lindsay to run, but added: "That doesn't mean I'll wind up supporting him." He said the mayor's candidacy would "contribute to the dialogue and help people find out what the issues really are."

First Shells Across Canal Since Mideast Truce Ended

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian and Israeli forces exchanged gunfire across the Suez Canal cease-fire line for the first time since the end of the truce arrangement on the waterway, the semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said today.

The newspaper also said President Anwar Sadat believes this month will determine whether there will be renewed fighting in the Middle East.

Diplomatic sources said meanwhile that Israel has decided at the urging of the United Nations to come up with a proposal of its own for reopening the Suez Canal as a first step toward Middle East peace.

In Amman, Arab guerrillas accused the Jordanian army of shelling a refugee camp north of the capital and King Hussein's government underwent a barrage of criticism from various regimes throughout the Arab world. A Palestinian spokesman said Army troops attacked the town of Jerash, north of Amman with machineguns, mortars and other weapons.

The newspaper Al Ahram said the cross-canal gunfire exchange occurred "recently" in the Roso El-Ish area when an Israeli patrol of two frogmen tried to cross the canal into the Egyptian-held west bank.

The report said Egyptian forces discovered the Israelis and let them approach the Egyptian side of the canal in an attempt to capture them but the frogmen discovered they were watched and dived back into the canal in an attempt to return to the other side under cover of Israeli fire. Egyptian forces returned fire.

Although Al Ahram did not give a date, political sources said it was referring to a Monday incident reported by the U.N. truce supervision organization. It was the first firing since the truce ended March 7.

The newspaper said Sadat "feels that the present month will be, to use his words, the dividing month between a political solution and war because during this month all positions will emerge clearly, leaving no room for doubt."

The item in Al Ahram came shortly after a letter from President Nixon to Sadat which according to diplomatic sources reassured Egypt the U.S. will persevere in efforts to break the Middle East deadlock.

Novato Pair Fined For Pot Possession

Mark Robert Topper and Eugenia Henriette Polos, both of Novato, have been fined $200 each in Marin Municipal Court after pleading guilty to a misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana.

Judge David Menary Jr. also placed the pair on probation for one year. The charge was reduced from a felony count. A charge of cultivating the weed was dismissed.

Board Of Education To Study Teacher Pay Plan

The Marin County Board of Education, meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at the district office in Corte Madera, will receive a teachers salary proposal calling for a 5 per cent cost-of-living increase.

The teachers also are asking that two more steps be added to their eight step salary schedule thus establishing higher experience level pay.

Currently the eight-step schedule ranges from $8,185 to $13,816 per year.

The teachers' 10-step proposal, including the 5 per cent increase, would establish a range from $8,594 to $15,280 per year and would offer a $500 per year bonus for a masters degree. Total cost of their salary package would total about $58,000, teachers say.

The board also will consider preliminary plans for a $300,000 school for deaf children. To be located adjacent to Adaline E. Kent School in Kentfield, the school has been wrapped in red tape since 1966. If plans proceed on schedule, it should open in spring 1972 to about 30 students.

Other agenda items call for board consideration of an environmental education study program for Marin and further review of the county schools office special education budget. That budget totals about $4 million of which $1.3 million is paid with county funds.

Skylab To Watch Earth's Life, Says Shepard

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The manned satellite Skylab, to be launched in 1973, will be able to measure the growth and movement of life on the earth, astronaut Alan B. Shepard says.

It will be equipped with infra red cameras which will monitor worldwide crop and timber growth and the migrations of birds and animals, the astronaut declared Wednesday in a talk before the Commonwealth Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Shepard was crew commander during the Apollo 14 mission.

Harlan Center Will Be Opened For Limited Use This Month

Harlan Center, built on the site which once housed the College of Marin's historic Harlan Hall, will be opened for limited use April 12 — months before completion.

The decision was made Thursday by the Marin Junior College District board in order to aleviate over-crowding at other college buildings, Earlene Jones, college publicist, said yesterday.

The new building, under construction since November 1969 at a cost of about $1 million, is finished inside but much exterior work remains, she said.

Exterior walkways, landscaping and outside construction work remain unfinished, Mrs. Jones said, adding that the district will not formally accept the building until construction ends.

The old Harlan Hall, with its mission architecture, was demolished in 1969 after standing as the unofficial symbol of the college for 40 years.

When the college opened in 1926, classes were held in the converted Butler mansion in Kentfield with an enrollment of 125 students.

Three years later, trustees opened bids for what was referred to as "the new classroom building" and the job went to the firm of Younger and Horstmeyer at a cost of $53,594.

It, like the new Harlan Center, was named after the late George H. Harlan Sr., first college board president and a leader in the creation of the junior college district.

The Marin Junior College District board also:

PRESIDENT -- Entered closed session to discuss with its selection committee the appointment of a president for the north campus. No decision was made and the board will consider the matter again Monday following a scheduled workshop.

LIBRARY GRANT — Authorized applying for a $14,499 library grant for materials.

ROCK CONCERT — Continued to its next meeting an evaluation of the rock concert held at the College of Marin gymnasium in February.

DROPOUT — Received a report on students who leave the college indicating the dropout rate decreased from 7 per cent in fall 1969 to 6 per cent in fall 1970. The report listed student financial difficulties as the major reason for student withdrawals.

GRADUATION — Set June 18 at 8 p.m. for graduation ceremonies. Board President Elizabeth M. Deedy will be the commencement speaker.

WORKSHOP — Set April 29 at 7:30 p.m. for a special meeting to study educational specifications and master-planning of the north campus. Meeting place will be announced.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to Monday at 8 p.m. at the College of Marin testing office for a special session to study fiscal 1971-72 budget proposals and to continue its closed session to select a president for the north campus.

Traffic Changes Set In Petaluma

The Petaluma Police Department will begin enforcing two new traffic signs next week.

The right lane of westbound traffic on East Washington Street at North McDowell Boulevard has been changed to a right turn only lane. Arrows signaling the right turn have been painted on the roadway.

A stop sign has been located at South McDowell Boulevard at Casa Grande Road. Southbound traffic must stop before entering Casa Grande Road.

Behr Not For Cutting PUC Budget

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, yesterday joined the five Democratic members of a Senate committee in urging no cut in the Public Utilities Commission budget.

The six members of the public utilities and corporations committee, in a letter to the Senate Finance Committee, urged restoration of $300,000 cut from the PUC's budget by the Reagan administration.

Behr is cochairman of the public utilities and corporations committee. Its seventh member, Republican George Deukmejian of Long Beach, did not sign the letter.

The six senators wrote that "at a time when over $400 million in rate increase applications are before the commission, proper analysis demands proper funding."

The Reagan administration's budget for the PUC next year is $12.4 million, over $300,000 under the current fiscal year.

Signing the letter were Behr and Alfred E. Alquist of San Jose, Ralph Dills of San Pedro, Arlen Gregorio of San Mateo, Lawrence Walsh of Huntington Park and Senate President pro tem James R. Mills of San Diego.

WAITING FOR THE AMBULANCE

Jack W. Martin of 168 Montego Key, Bel Marin Keys, waits to be taken to Marin General Hospital after his small foreign car was involved in a three-car crash at 10:15 a.m. yesterday at Third and Heatherton streets in San Rafael. Police said a car driven by Carmela M. Garcia, 65, of 16 South Knoll Road, Mill Valley, collided with Martin's vehicle after first striking a car operated by Gerald B. Renner, 41, of 586 Kernberry Drive, San Rafael. Martin was treated for forehead and shoulder cuts.

Board Of Education To Study Teacher Pay Plan

The Marin County Board of Education, meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at the district office in Corte Madera, will receive a teachers salary proposal calling for a 5 per cent cost-of-living increase.

The teachers also are asking that two more steps be added to their eight step salary schedule thus establishing higher experience level pay.

Currently the eight-step schedule ranges from $8,185 to $13,816 per year.

The teachers' 10-step proposal, including the 5 per cent increase, would establish a range from $8,594 to $15,280 per year and would offer a $500 per year bonus for a masters degree. Total cost of their salary package would total about $58,000, teachers say.

The board also will consider preliminary plans for a $300,000 school for deaf children. To be located adjacent to Adaline E. Kent School in Kentfield, the school has been wrapped in red tape since 1966. If plans proceed on schedule, it should open in spring 1972 to about 30 students.

Other agenda items call for board consideration of an environmental education study program for Marin and further review of the county schools office special education budget. That budget totals about $4 million of which $1.3 million is paid with county funds.

Skylab To Watch Earth's Life, Says Shepard

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The manned satellite Skylab, to be launched in 1973, will be able to measure the growth and movement of life on the earth, astronaut Alan B. Shepard says.

It will be equipped with infra red cameras which will monitor worldwide crop and timber growth and the migrations of birds and animals, the astronaut declared Wednesday in a talk before the Commonwealth Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Shepard was crew commander during the Apollo 14 mission.

One Couple Reduces Request On Damages

One of two feuding Tiburon couples suing each other in Marin Superior Court yesterday reduced its request for damages from $75,000 to $5,100.

James Murray, attorney for James L. and Claire Green of 2300 Vista Del Mar Lane, made the change in Judge Thomas F. Keating's court without explanation.

The Greens are suing their neighbors, Nathaniel and Violet Marans, who live above at 2312 Spanish Trail Lane. The Marans, meanwhile, are asking Keating to determine a common boundary between the properties and to award them $5,660 in damages.

The suits are for damages allegedly suffered in a feud between the couples which dates back to 1967, according to the Marans, and to 1965, according to the Greens.

Green took the stand in the case yesterday, describing himself as a "fairly intelligent and very reasonable person."

"Never on any occasion have I attempted to harass them," he said.

The Marans allege they have been the victims of ripped up fence posts, vines and a tree and have had 400-watt floodlights aimed at their home and dog manure thrown on their car.

Green has said that Marans threatened him many times and once pulled out a gun.

William O. Weissich, attorney for the Marans, caused a stir in court when he pulled out a gun to ask Green if it was the one with which he had been threatened by Marans.

"You're not going to hand it around to these combatants, are you?" Keating asked.

Green said it was not the controversial weapon.

Testimony will continue Monday.

takes a two-thirds vote of each house to overturn a veto.

The bill would have prohibited the state Toll Bridge Authority from building a Southern Crossing over the bay without the express permission of the legislature.

Moretti charged the veto "represents another victory for the state's highway lobby at the expense of the people."

Reagan said the "divergence of opinion is so great and the matter so important" that voters in the counties directly affected should decide its ultimate fate.

He also issued an executive order freezing further design work on the project for six months. He said this would give the legislature time to approve a special election.

The bill overwhelmingly passed both houses on a bipartisan vote. Sen. Clark Bradley, R-San Jose, was the only Bay Area lawmaker to vote against it.

Senate Democratic leader George Moscone of San Francisco, a potential contender for governor in 1974, said he was "rather astonished" that Reagan rejected the bill and said the veto stood a "very good chance" of being overridden.

"He should have been honest about it," Moscone said of Reagan's veto, "and just said he is committed to those people who are committed to building, building, building regardless of the social consequences."

Said Assemblyman William T. Bagley, "I'm inclined to vote for an override of the veto but as always I would certainly give the other side a chance to state their case."
their case."

Bradley declared himself "very pleased" with Reagan's action and disclosed he had encouraged Reagan to veto the bill.

"When it is submitted to the voters and the facts are properly brought out, the people will approve it by a substantial majority," he forecast, adding he believed the "ecological argument" against the bridge wasn't based on facts.

Conservationists had asserted the bridge would have the effect of contributing to air pollution by encouraging the use of smog-producing automobiles.

Instead, he said the span would "reduce air pollution because it will provide for better circulation of traffic. The less that a truck or car has to stand and idle the less air pollution is produced. A car or truck is at its lowest efficiency when it is idling."

Several years ago the legislature appropriated about $10 million for planning and design of the span. The state Department of Public Works reported about half that sum has been spent.

First bids for initial construction had been scheduled for issuance late this year. Construction was expected to take about four years to complete.

Auto Stolen From Used Vehicle Lot

Dexter Toyota told San Rafael police yesterday that a station wagon was stolen from its used car lot at 445 Francisco Boulevard during the past four months.

The auto was described as a 1964 blue Pontiac, license MXY-381.

passenger terminal east of the present runway, a new taxiway and an access road to the terminal area from Bel Marin Keys Boulevard. An estimate of the cost is $3.1 million, including $550,000 for the terminal.

The proposal, which Foreaker stressed has not been adopted by either the aviation commission or the board of supervisors, was prepared last summer as an outgrowth of a study by civil engineer Winfield O. Salter of San Rafael on the prospects of joint use.

Foreaker said that if the response from the federal government is favorable as to joint use, "We would begin to do some additional study work — what to do, what would it cost, how would it be paid for. We want to know whether we are spinning our wheels."

Critical of the county delegation's trip is Benjamin R. Ostlind, a former aviation commissioner and chairman of the airport development committee of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

Ostlind, who advocates a more elaborate joint-use plan that would involve county purchase of private property for an industrial park, said yesterday the new scheme would provide the county with no direct revenue from passenger service.

Landing fees, he said, would go to the Air Force. "The passenger service is a bonus," Ostlind said, "but the county has lost site of the goal — you make money on the lease and sale of land nearby that is made valuable because of the airport."

The cost of Ostlind's plan, which also would include a second runway, has been estimated to run at least $11 million. Said Foreaker while holding open the door to major development, "It would be foolish to get into this venture" until exploring the federal government's stance on joint use.

Ostlind retorted that channels have been opened within the Department of Defense, apart from the Air Force itself and the FAA, through which to work on a master plan for full development. Because of this, he said, the Washington trip later this month "can only hurt."

The joint-use concept was spelled out as part of Air Force policy as late as 1966, but it was not until official Defense Department encouragement of such operations late in 1969 that Marin began to plan for the day when commercial jets would be sharing space with military aircraft.

The aviation commission is on record favoring use of Hamilton for scheduled airlines, primarily California carriers. Golden West Airlines currently is seeking permission to use Hamilton.

Fine Against Union Is Upheld

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—California's Supreme Court has upheld a $55,000 fine Thursday for the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

A San Bernardino County Court had found the union guilty of illegal strike activity there at the American Potash Chemical Corp.'s plant.

The trial court said that the union violated injunctions against excessive picketing and intimidation of employes and customers.

In its appeal, the ILWU contended it was not responsible for the acts of the local involved in the walkout.

New Kidnap Bill In The Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill making the kidnap of an elected official punishable by death or life imprisonment has been proposed by a Republican lawmaker who said the measure was sought by the Reagan Administration.

Assemblyman Charles Conrad of Sherman Oaks said Friday that he was asked by Gov. Ronald Reagan's staff to introduce the measure "although the governor hasn't made a speech about it and I don't want any hullabuloo about it."

Gromyko Sees Better Relations

MOSCOW (UPI)—Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union said today the Soviets favored better relations with the United States, but he criticized negotiations that resembled a "fencing contest."

Gromyko discussed Soviet foreign policy during the last major speech before a weekend recess in the 24th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party.

Gromyko, like several other speakers this week, praised the "great logical force" of a six-hour report delivered Tuesday by Leonid I Brezhnev, the party's General Secretary.

"Washington should weigh with all seriousness what was said by Leonid Brezhnev in his report," Gromyko said. "The Soviet Union comes out for normal relations with the United States. It considers it possible to improve Soviet-American relations.

"However," he added, "Washington must back up its statements with concrete deeds. We are not for negotiations that resemble a fencing contest. We are for serious negotiations."

Gromyko's remarks, carried in summary by the Soviet news agency Tass, also included a sharp reference to China that reflected Brezhnev's remarks.

"The improvement of Soviet-Chinese relations would be of great importance for the struggle against imperialism and aggression" he said. "It depends on the Chinese leaders and the Chinese side which direction the development of relations between the USSR and the Chinese Peoples Republic will take."

Gromyko also called for steps to improve the situation in Europe. He said necessary steps included the covening of an all-European security conference and "the completion of talks on West Berlin."

"We have no territorial demands on any state," he said. "We have no intention of inflicting damage on anybody's lawful rights and interests. We demand the same in reference to our country.

Gromyko said relations with both Frnace and Italy have improved steadily, and he praised the conclusion of treaties by Poland and the Soviet Union with West Germany.

PAPER

and telegrams from persons commenting on Calley's conviction continued to pour into the Pentagon Friday. One office said about one-third of the comments it received supported the Army court's action at Ft. Benning, Ga., this week.

Spokesmen said the White Paper would be distributed throughout the world.

"It amounts to telling the army why we did this, why we had the trial," a spokesman said.

The White Paper said the My Lai incident "as tragic as its consequences have been for the victims, their survivors and the army unit and men implicated in the allegations" fitted clearly under the provisions of the Geneva Conventions.

"When the allegations became known, the Army had only one legal course of action —to investigate the allegations and prosecute the accused if the evidence so warranted," the statement said.

at Kampot, 80 miles south-southwest of Phnom Penh.

Maj. Gen. Ngo Dzu, commander of South Vietnam's 2nd Military Region, said Fire Support Base No. 6 is vital because if it is lost, "Dak To will be under siege.

Dzu described the North Vietnamese attackers around Fire Support Base No. 6 as "suicide men."

Dzu said documents captured from North Vietnamese indicated the border Ranger bases of Ben Het and Dak To were the primary objectives of the communists with Duc Lap and Bu Prang—other border ranger outposts 150 miles to the south—as secondary objectives. He said the documents also indicated the Communists hoped to cut Highways 14 and 19.

Dzu suggested the North Vietnamese were trying to tie up South Vietnamese troops "so we cannot send any more into laos."

In Saigon, South Vietnamese spokesmen said communist gunners fired 100 rounds of mortar fire into Duc Duc, 350 miles northeast of Saigon on South Vietnam's upper coast.

Cultural Center Plea Scheduled

Members of the Third Way House of Petaluma will meet Monday to discuss ways to get community support for the organization's proposed cultural center for youth.

The group will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Kenilworth Junior High School.

The Third Way House is a nonprofit organization consisting of adults and youth seeking to help teen-agers solve their problems.

Tests Urged On Food Chemicals

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., says more than 1,000 chemical regularly added to foods have never been tested for their potential to cause cancer, birth defects or gene damage.

Ribicoff said Friday his Senate executive reorganization subcommittee had gathered the information on food additives and would hold hearings on the subject next week.

He said hundreds of chemicals on the government's generally recognized as "safe" list have not been fully tested for harmful effects.

Vandals Break Bank's Window

Vandals broke a $200 window in a bank yesterday or today and shattered the rear window of a car parked at 220 Belle Avenue, San Rafael police said.

The window of the Redwood Bank, 1435 Fourth Street, was smashed between 5 p.m. yesterday and 1:30 a.m. today, police said.

The window in the car belonging to Dexter Toyota was broken shortly after 10 p.m. yesterday, police said.

Minor Injuries In Cycle Crash

Two 18-year-old Petalumans sustained minor injuries last night when the motorcycle they were riding ran into a drainage ditch on Novato Boulevard near San Marin Drive, outside Novato.

The California Highway Patrol said David Jennerman and Donna Jennerman, both of 1200 D Street, were treated for cuts at the Hamilton Air Force Base hospital. Officers said the accident occurred about 9: 30 p.m.

Terra Linda CSD To Work On Big Study

The Terra Linda Community Services District board last night officially agreed to aid and participate in a study to help determine the future of the Terra Linda, Marinwood and Lucas Valley area.

The Terra Linda and Marinwood service district boards and the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association had unofficially decided Wednesday to find an alternative to annexing with the city of San Rafael. Each of the boards was asked to ratify last week's unofficial decision as soon as possible and the Terra Linda district board last night became the first to do so.

The first major step in the plan calls for representatives from the groups to ask the Fireman's Fund American Insurance Co. — which has planned a development on the Lucas Green property — not to seek annexation to the city.

The Terra Linda board last night authorized a letter to the insurance company asking it to meet with the Terra Linda district board before making a final decision.

Damaged Galaxy To Be Scrapped

WASHINGTON (UPI)"-A $39.4 million C5A Galaxy jet transport—the world's largest plane—which was damaged by fire last spring at Palmdale, Calif., will be scrapped rather than repaired.

The Air Force announced the decision Friday, saying major parts would be salvaged for use on later model. Investigators traced the fire to a motor in a hydraulic system. The crew members escaped the fire, which broke out as the plane was being taxied for takeoff.

The Air Force now has 79 of the giant planes. It has spent more than $3 billion on the planes plus an additional $1.3 billion for spare parts and maintenance equipment.

A New Chapter In Manson Case

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Another chapter in the Manson family murder mystery opened Friday when Charles Manson and three of his followers went on trial for two more murders.

Manson and Susan Atkins, already convicted of the seven Tate-Labianca slayings, and Manson followers Bruce Davis, 27, and Stephen Grogan, 19, are the defendants in the latest action.

Manson, Davis and Miss Atkins, 22, are accused of killing musician Gary Hinman. Another Manson follower, Robert Beausoleil, already has been convicted and sentenced to death in that case.

OBITUARIES

Memorial For John Wollak

Memorial service for John J. Wollak, San Anselmo food broker who died Thursday in a local hospital after a long illness, will be at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

Wollak, whose home was at 9 Alpine Lane, had lived in Marin for the past 22 years.

A native of Switzerland, he came to this country when he was 7 years old, living first in New York. For many years he headed the firm, John J. Wollak Inc., in San Francisco. At the time of his death he was vice president and chairman of the board of directors of the company.

Wollak was a member of Marin Commandry No. 73, Knights Templar; Islam Temple, San Francisco; Euclid Lodge No. 136, Free and Accepted Masons, Hoboken, N.J.; Royal Arch Masons of California, Chapter No. 102, Marin County Shrine Club, Pacific Dairy and Poultry Association, California Cheese and Butter Association, and was a past vice president of the Tolibia Cheese Association and a director of the Italian-American Chamber of Commerce.

He is survived by his wife, Kermit; three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Ashe of Santa Rosa, Mrs. Anthony Willegal of Whitehead, Wis., and Mrs. Shirley Cooper of Hayward; a son, John Cook of Santa Ana; a sister, Mrs. Mel Rodermond of York, Pa., 11 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

DANIEL LINGWOOD

Daniel Lingwood of 1323 Leafwood Drive, Novato, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 75.

Lingwood was born in Los Angeles and lived most of his life in Bakersfield, where he was a driller in the oil fields. He retired at 60 after operating a service station in Los Angeles, and moved to Marin one year ago.

He is survived by a daughter, Dorothy J. Endicott of San Rafael; a son, Cleon M. Lingwood of Bakersfield; a sister, Maude B. Soule, and a brother, Edward of Bakersfield, and another brother, James of Los Angeles.

Funeral will be Tuesday in Bakersfield, with burial at Union Cemetery.

OLGA MAYORGA

Olga Mayorga, 58, who died in a local convalescent home Monday, will be buried in her native country of Nicaragua.

Mrs. Mayorga, the mother of Cristina Simmons of Terra Linda, had lived in Marin County the past two years. She had been in this country 11 years.

She was a housewife and a widow.

AUSTIN DILL

Austin Earl Dill of San Anselmo, a custodian at San Rafael High School for 10 years, died yesterday at a San Francisco hospital after a long illness.

Dill, 65, of 17 Park Drive, had been retired for three years. He had been a resident of Marin County for 15 years.

He is survived by his father, W. W. Dill; a sister, Elizabeth Martin, a brother, Clyde, all of South Bend, Ind.

Funeral will be held in Mississippi.

Arrest Made In Stolen Property Probe

A 22-year-old San Francisco man was arrested by San Rafael police yesterday on suspicion of concealing stolen property after a garage mechanic became suspicious of his actions.

David Eldon Schoeder, who has been known to use at least five other names, was arrested shortly after he was seen by the mechanic near a toolbox in the service department of Marin Automobile Co., 1504 Fourth Street, police said.

Police stopped Schoeder on Shaver Street and recovered two air impact wrenches believed to have been stolen yesterday from Cain's Tire, 1531 Fourth Street, and from R and R Automatic Transmissions Repair, 1542 Fourth Street.

Schoeder — also known as David Finocchi, David Ortega, David Palmer, George Henkiez and John Paul Luther — was booked into Marin County Jail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Cape's Morale Is Questioned

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 15 workers are having problems with the lunar landing craft, and astronaut James B. Irwin thinks it might be a result of slipping morale at Cape Kennedy.

Irwin said Friday recent technical problems with the moon landing spacecraft are "a function of a lot of trained people leaving. I think maybe majorale is slipping perhaps."

Apollo 15 commander David R. Scott, however, said in a separate interview he was concerned about the bugs but was confident the Cape workers would overcome the problems and meet the July 26 launch date.

One Couple Reduces Request On Damages

One of two feuding Tiburon couples suing each other in Marin Superior Court yesterday reduced its request for damages from $75,000 to $5,100.

James Murray, attorney for James L. and Claire Green of 2300 Vista Del Mar Lane, made the change in Judge Thomas F. Keating's court without explanation.

The Greens are suing their neighbors, Nathaniel and Violet Marans, who live above at 2312 Spanish Trail Lane. The Marans, meanwhile, are asking Keating to determine a common boundary between the properties and to award them $5,660 in damages.

The suits are for damages allegedly suffered in a feud between the couples which dates back to 1967, according to the Marans, and to 1965, according to the Greens.

Green took the stand in the case yesterday, describing himself as a "fairly intelligent and very reasonable person."

"Never on any occasion have I attempted to harass them," he said.

The Marans allege they have been the victims of ripped up fence posts, vines and a tree and have had 400-watt floodlights aimed at their home and dog manure thrown on their car.

Green has said that Marans threatened him many times and once pulled out a gun.

William O. Weissich, attorney for the Marans, caused a stir in court when he pulled out a gun to ask Green if it was the one with which he had been threatened by Marans.

"You're not going to hand it around to these combatants, are you?" Keating asked.

Green said it was not the controversial weapon.

Testimony will continue Monday.

takes a two-thirds vote of each house to overturn a veto.

The bill would have prohibited the state Toll Bridge Authority from building a Southern Crossing over the bay without the express permission of the legislature.

Moretti charged the veto "represents another victory for the state's highway lobby at the expense of the people."

Reagan said the "divergence of opinion is so great and the matter so important" that voters in the counties directly affected should decide its ultimate fate.

He also issued an executive order freezing further design work on the project for six months. He said this would give the legislature time to approve a special election.

The bill overwhelmingly passed both houses on a bipartisan vote. Sen. Clark Bradley, R-San Jose, was the only Bay Area lawmaker to vote against it.

Senate Democratic leader George Moscone of San Francisco, a potential contender for governor in 1974, said he was "rather astonished" that Reagan rejected the bill and said the veto stood a "very good chance" of being overridden.

"He should have been honest about it," Moscone said of Reagan's veto, "and just said he is committed to those people who are committed to building, building, building regardless of the social consequences."

Said Assemblyman William T. Bagley, "I'm inclined to vote for an override of the veto but as always I would certainly give the other side a chance to state their case."
their case."

Bradley declared himself "very pleased" with Reagan's action and disclosed he had encouraged Reagan to veto the bill.

"When it is submitted to the voters and the facts are properly brought out, the people will approve it by a substantial majority," he forecast, adding he believed the "ecological argument" against the bridge wasn't based on facts.

Conservationists had asserted the bridge would have the effect of contributing to air pollution by encouraging the use of smog-producing automobiles.

Instead, he said the span would "reduce air pollution because it will provide for better circulation of traffic. The less that a truck or car has to stand and idle the less air pollution is produced. A car or truck is at its lowest efficiency when it is idling."

Several years ago the legislature appropriated about $10 million for planning and design of the span. The state Department of Public Works reported about half that sum has been spent.

First bids for initial construction had been scheduled for issuance late this year. Construction was expected to take about four years to complete.

Auto Stolen From Used Vehicle Lot

Dexter Toyota told San Rafael police yesterday that a station wagon was stolen from its used car lot at 445 Francisco Boulevard during the past four months.

The auto was described as a 1964 blue Pontiac, license MXY-381.

TALKS

passenger terminal east of the present runway, a new taxiway and an access road to the terminal area from Bel Marin Keys Boulevard. An estimate of the cost is $3.1 million, including $550,000 for the terminal.

The proposal, which Foreaker stressed has not been adopted by either the aviation commission or the board of supervisors, was prepared last summer as an outgrowth of a study by civil engineer Winfield O. Salter of San Rafael on the prospects of joint use.

Foreaker said that if the response from the federal government is favorable as to joint use, "We would begin to do some additional study work — what to do, what would it cost, how would it be paid for. We want to know whether we are spinning our wheels."

Critical of the county delegation's trip is Benjamin R. Ostlind, a former aviation commissioner and chairman of the airport development committee of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

Ostlind, who advocates a more elaborate joint-use plan that would involve county purchase of private property for an industrial park, said yesterday the new scheme would provide the county with no direct revenue from passenger service.

Landing fees, he said, would go to the Air Force. "The passenger service is a bonus," Ostlind said, "but the county has lost site of the goal — you make money on the lease and sale of land nearby that is made valuable because of the airport."

The cost of Ostlind's plan, which also would include a second runway, has been estimated to run at least $11 million. Said Foreaker while holding open the door to major development, "It would be foolish to get into this venture" until exploring the federal government's stance on joint use.

Ostlind retorted that channels have been opened within the Department of Defense, apart from the Air Force itself and the FAA, through which to work on a master plan for full development. Because of this, he said, the Washington trip later this month "can only hurt."

The joint-use concept was spelled out as part of Air Force policy as late as 1966, but it was not until official Defense Department encouragement of such operations late in 1969 that Marin began to plan for the day when commercial jets would be sharing space with military aircraft.

The aviation commission is on record favoring use of Hamilton for scheduled airlines, primarily California carriers. Golden West Airlines currently is seeking permission to use Hamilton.

Fine Against Union Is Upheld

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—California's Supreme Court has upheld a $55,000 fine Thursday for the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

A San Bernardino County Court had found the union guilty of illegal strike activity there at the American Potash Chemical Corp.'s plant.

The trial court said that the union violated injunctions against excessive picketing and intimidation of employes and customers.

In its appeal, the ILWU contended it was not responsible for the acts of the local involved in the walkout.

New Kidnap Bill In The Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill making the kidnap of an elected official punishable by death or life imprisonment has been proposed by a Republican lawmaker who said the measure was sought by the Reagan Administration.

Assemblyman Charles Conrad of Sherman Oaks said Friday that he was asked by Gov. Ronald Reagan's staff to introduce the measure "although the governor hasn't made a speech about it and I don't want any hullabuloo about it."

Gromyko Sees Better Relations

MOSCOW (UPI)—Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union said today the Soviets favored better relations with the United States, but he criticized negotiations that resembled a "fencing contest."

Gromyko discussed Soviet foreign policy during the last major speech before a weekend recess in the 24th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party.

Gromyko, like several other speakers this week, praised the "great logical force" of a six-hour report delivered Tuesday by Leonid I Brezhnev, the party's General Secretary.

"Washington should weigh with all seriousness what was said by Leonid Brezhnev in his report," Gromyko said. "The Soviet Union comes out for normal relations with the United States. It considers it possible to improve Soviet-American relations.

"However," he added, "Washington must back up its statements with concrete deeds. We are not for negotiations that resemble a fencing contest. We are for serious negotiations."

Gromyko's remarks, carried in summary by the Soviet news agency Tass, also included a sharp reference to China that reflected Brezhnev's remarks.

"The improvement of Soviet-Chinese relations would be of great importance for the struggle against imperialism and aggression" he said. "It depends on the Chinese leaders and the Chinese side which direction the development of relations between the USSR and the Chinese Peoples Republic will take."

Gromyko also called for steps to improve the situation in Europe. He said necessary steps included the covening of an all-European security conference and "the completion of talks on West Berlin."

"We have no territorial demands on any state," he said. "We have no intention of inflicting damage on anybody's lawful rights and interests. We demand the same in reference to our country.

Gromyko said relations with both Frnace and Italy have improved steadily, and he praised the conclusion of treaties by Poland and the Soviet Union with West Germany.

PAPER

and telegrams from persons commenting on Calley's conviction continued to pour into the Pentagon Friday. One office said about one-third of the comments it received supported the Army court's action at Ft. Benning, Ga., this week.

Spokesmen said the White Paper would be distributed throughout the world.

"It amounts to telling the army why we did this, why we had the trial," a spokesman said.

The White Paper said the My Lai incident "as tragic as its consequences have been for the victims, their survivors and the army unit and men implicated in the allegations" fitted clearly under the provisions of the Geneva Conventions.

"When the allegations became known, the Army had only one legal course of action —to investigate the allegations and prosecute the accused if the evidence so warranted," the statement said.

at Kampot, 80 miles south-southwest of Phnom Penh.

Maj. Gen. Ngo Dzu, commander of South Vietnam's 2nd Military Region, said Fire Support Base No. 6 is vital because if it is lost, "Dak To will be under siege.

Dzu described the North Vietnamese attackers around Fire Support Base No. 6 as "suicide men."

Dzu said documents captured from North Vietnamese indicated the border Ranger bases of Ben Het and Dak To were the primary objectives of the communists with Duc Lap and Bu Prang—other border ranger outposts 150 miles to the south—as secondary objectives. He said the documents also indicated the Communists hoped to cut Highways 14 and 19.

Dzu suggested the North Vietnamese were trying to tie up South Vietnamese troops "so we cannot send any more into laos."

In Saigon, South Vietnamese spokesmen said communist gunners fired 100 rounds of mortar fire into Duc Duc, 350 miles northeast of Saigon on South Vietnam's upper coast.

Cultural Center Plea Scheduled

Members of the Third Way House of Petaluma will meet Monday to discuss ways to get community support for the organization's proposed cultural center for youth.

The group will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Kenilworth Junior High School.

The Third Way House is a nonprofit organization consisting of adults and youth seeking to help teen-agers solve their problems.

Tests Urged On Food Chemicals

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., says more than 1,000 chemical regularly added to foods have never been tested for their potential to cause cancer, birth defects or gene damage.

Ribicoff said Friday his Senate executive reorganization subcommittee had gathered the information on food additives and would hold hearings on the subject next week.

He said hundreds of chemicals on the government's generally recognized as "safe" list have not been fully tested for harmful effects.

Vandals Break Bank's Window

Vandals broke a $200 window in a bank yesterday or today and shattered the rear window of a car parked at 220 Belle Avenue, San Rafael police said.

The window of the Redwood Bank, 1435 Fourth Street, was smashed between 5 p.m. yesterday and 1:30 a.m. today, police said.

The window in the car belonging to Dexter Toyota was broken shortly after 10 p.m. yesterday, police said.

Minor Injuries In Cycle Crash

Two 18-year-old Petalumans sustained minor injuries last night when the motorcycle they were riding ran into a drainage ditch on Novato Boulevard near San Marin Drive, outside Novato.

The California Highway Patrol said David Jennerman and Donna Jennerman, both of 1200 D Street, were treated for cuts at the Hamilton Air Force Base hospital. Officers said the accident occurred about 9: 30 p.m.

Terra Linda CSD To Work On Big Study

The Terra Linda Community Services District board last night officially agreed to aid and participate in a study to help determine the future of the Terra Linda, Marinwood and Lucas Valley area.

The Terra Linda and Marinwood service district boards and the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association had unofficially decided Wednesday to find an alternative to annexing with the city of San Rafael. Each of the boards was asked to ratify last week's unofficial decision as soon as possible and the Terra Linda district board last night became the first to do so.

The first major step in the plan calls for representatives from the groups to ask the Fireman's Fund American Insurance Co. — which has planned a development on the Lucas Green property — not to seek annexation to the city.

The Terra Linda board last night authorized a letter to the insurance company asking it to meet with the Terra Linda district board before making a final decision.

Damaged Galaxy To Be Scrapped

WASHINGTON (UPI)"-A $39.4 million C5A Galaxy jet transport—the world's largest plane—which was damaged by fire last spring at Palmdale, Calif., will be scrapped rather than repaired.

The Air Force announced the decision Friday, saying major parts would be salvaged for use on later model. Investigators traced the fire to a motor in a hydraulic system. The crew members escaped the fire, which broke out as the plane was being taxied for takeoff.

The Air Force now has 79 of the giant planes. It has spent more than $3 billion on the planes plus an additional $1.3 billion for spare parts and maintenance equipment.

A New Chapter In Manson Case

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Another chapter in the Manson family murder mystery opened Friday when Charles Manson and three of his followers went on trial for two more murders.

Manson and Susan Atkins, already convicted of the seven Tate-Labianca slayings, and Manson followers Bruce Davis, 27, and Stephen Grogan, 19, are the defendants in the latest action.

Manson, Davis and Miss Atkins, 22, are accused of killing musician Gary Hinman. Another Manson follower, Robert Beausoleil, already has been convicted and sentenced to death in that case.

Hanna Center Asks Use Permit

A use permit for a group home for boys sponsored by the Hanna Boys Center will be considered at the Petaluma Planning Commission meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

The center plans to establish a supervised home for boys at 47 Sixth Street.

OBITUARIES

Memorial For John Wollak

Memorial service for John J. Wollak, San Anselmo food broker who died Thursday in a local hospital after a long illness, will be at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

Wollak, whose home was at 9 Alpine Lane, had lived in Marin for the past 22 years.

A native of Switzerland, he came to this country when he was 7 years old, living first in New York. For many years he headed the firm, John J. Wollak Inc., in San Francisco. At the time of his death he was vice president and chairman of the board of directors of the company.

Wollak was a member of Marin Commandry No. 73, Knights Templar; Islam Temple, San Francisco; Euclid Lodge No. 136, Free and Accepted Masons, Hoboken, N.J.; Royal Arch Masons of California, Chapter No. 102, Marin County Shrine Club, Pacific Dairy and Poultry Association, California Cheese and Butter Association, and was a past vice president of the Tolibia Cheese Association and a director of the Italian-American Chamber of Commerce.

He is survived by his wife, Kermit; three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Ashe of Santa Rosa, Mrs. Anthony Willegal of Whitehead, Wis., and Mrs. Shirley Cooper of Hayward; a son, John Cook of Santa Ana; a sister, Mrs. Mel Rodermond of York, Pa., 11 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

DANIEL LINGWOOD

Daniel Lingwood of 1323 Leafwood Drive, Novato, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 75.

Lingwood was born in Los Angeles and lived most of his life in Bakersfield, where he was a driller in the oil fields. He retired at 60 after operating a service station in Los Angeles, and moved to Marin one year ago.

He is survived by a daughter, Dorothy J. Endicott of San Rafael; a son, Cleon M. Lingwood of Bakersfield; a sister, Maude B. Soule, and a brother, Edward of Bakersfield, and another brother, James of Los Angeles.

Funeral will be Tuesday in Bakersfield, with burial at Union Cemetery.

OLGA MAYORGA

Olga Mayorga, 58, who died in a local convalescent home Monday, will be buried in her native country of Nicaragua.

Mrs. Mayorga, the mother of Cristina Simmons of Terra Linda, had lived in Marin County the past two years. She had been in this country 11 years.

She was a housewife and a widow.

AUSTIN DILL

Austin Earl Dill of San Anselmo, a custodian at San Rafael High School for 10 years, died yesterday at a San Francisco hospital after a long illness.

Dill, 65, of 17 Park Drive, had been retired for three years. He had been a resident of Marin County for 15 years.

He is survived by his father, W. W. Dill; a sister, Elizabeth Martin, a brother, Clyde, all of South Bend, Ind.

Funeral will be held in Mississippi.

Arrest Made In Stolen Property Probe

A 22-year-old San Francisco man was arrested by San Rafael police yesterday on suspicion of concealing stolen property after a garage mechanic became suspicious of his actions.

David Eldon Schoeder, who has been known to use at least five other names, was arrested shortly after he was seen by the mechanic near a toolbox in the service department of Marin Automobile Co., 1504 Fourth Street, police said.

Police stopped Schoeder on Shaver Street and recovered two air impact wrenches believed to have been stolen yesterday from Cain's Tire, 1531 Fourth Street, and from R and R Automatic Transmissions Repair, 1542 Fourth Street.

Schoeder — also known as David Finocchi, David Ortega, David Palmer, George Henkiez and John Paul Luther — was booked into Marin County Jail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Cape's Morale Is Questioned

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 15 workers are having problems with the lunar landing craft, and astronaut James B. Irwin thinks it might be a result of slipping morale at Cape Kennedy.

Irwin said Friday recent technical problems with the moon landing spacecraft are "a function of a lot of trained people leaving. I think maybe majorale is slipping perhaps."

Apollo 15 commander David R. Scott, however, said in a separate interview he was concerned about the bugs but was confident the Cape workers would overcome the problems and meet the July 26 launch date.

The State's Jobless Rate Climbs

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate climbed to 7.1 per cent last month to outstrip the national figure of 6 per cent.

The Reagan administration said Friday that the state's rate for February was 6.7 per cent and the rise was mainly due to "the continued decline of the aerospace industry."

The month of March actually saw a slight increase in the employed ranks and a pencil-thin drop in the jobless number "but the gains were less than normal for this time of the year so the rate showed an increase," according to the state Human Resources Development Department.

The national rate for February was 5.8 per cent.

HRD Director Gilbert L. Sheffield said California's rate has averaged 7 per cent since last September with the exception of February which included "an unusually long dry spell that produced more construction jobs and a 4-day holiday that may have had a temporary effect on the number reporting as unemployed."

Statistics showed that employment was 7.94 million in March, up 18,000 from February. Jobless were 675,000 persons, a decline of 21,000.

The director explained the employment total was less than usual "chiefly because of a decrease in manufacturing which normally shows a rise at this time of the year.

"This can be mainly attributed to the continued decline of the aerospace industry, compounded by several trade disputes and the after-effects of the earthquake in the Los Angeles area."

California's unemployment rate was 5.2 per cent in March 1970.

HRD gave this area breakdown for March:

—Los Angeles County, 7.5 per cent in comparison with 7.1 per cent in February. Jobless were 264,900 persons—a rise of 900.

— San Francisco-Oakland area, 5.8 per cent in comparison with 5.1 per cent in February. Jobless were 92,100 in comparison with 90,500 in February.

—San Diego, 7.1 per cent in comparison with 7.2 per cent the month before. The March figure was 442,400 as compared to 441,500 the previous month.

—San Jose, 7.5 per cent for both months. The number of unemployed rose from 419,700 to only 422,200.

Mill Valley Pair Hurt In Crash

Two Mill Valley women suffered injuries in an auto accident Thursday near Novato.

Helen Gubka, 58, of 71 Woodside Lane, was reported in satisfactory condition today with a spinal fracture at Marin General Hospital. Ann Lowery, 57, of 286 Shoreline Highway, was treated for scrapes on her arms.

The hospital reported that the women were brought to the hospital about 12:40 p.m., but details of the accident were not available today.

$400 Dory Stolen At Gate Six Berth

A dory, valued at $400, was stolen from near a houseboat at Gate 6 Tuesday, Marin County Sheriff's Office reported yesterday.

The boat was owned by Oscar Erion, who was asleep on his houseboat at the time of the theft, deputies said.

Plea For Angela To Be Released

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The head of the Angela Y. Davis defense committee said yesterday Miss Davis should be freed on bail pending her trial because Lt. William Calley was released during his appeal.

"Even though Calley is a convicted felon, he was freed pending appeal by President Nixon while Angela Davis is spending her 100th day in Marin County jail," Franklin Alexander, head of the National United Committee to free Angela Davis, said at a news conference.

Miss Davis, 27, Communist and former teacher at the University of California at Los Angeles, is accused of murder, kidnaping and conspiracy in a courthouse shoot-out last Aug. 7 in San Rafael which left four men dead, including Judge Harold J. Haley of Marin Superior Court.

She has filed a motion asking for bail pending her trial, but efforts to disqualify judges assigned to the case have prevented a ruling on it. Her codefendant, Ruchell Magee, 32, a San Quentin convict, got a judge to disqualify himself last month on grounds of bias.

Miss Davis's attorneys moved Thursday to have Judge Alan Lindsay, 54, of Oakland, disqualified for alleged racial prejudice.

Court aides said yesterday that Lindsay intends to challenge the contention he is a "white racist" and is spending most of his time researching counterarguments with the assistance of both Marin and Alameda County counsels.

Lindsay has until April 11 to file a countermotion. Then the State Judicial Council will assign a judge to hear evidence on whether Lindsay is prejudicial or not and decide whether he can remain on the case.

Alexander noted yesterday that thousands of Americans had written the President protesting the Calley verdict and sentence.

Miss Davis, he said, had received "millions" of letters supporting her. Alexander said they were arriving at the rate of 40 bags a week.

"Professor Davis has not been convicted of any crime whatsoever and she is presumed to be entirely and completely innocent of the charges leveled against her by the state of California," added Margaret Burnham, one of her attorneys.

Miss Davis is accused, under a California law which holds an accomplice equally guilty, of buying the guns brought into the courtroom of Judge Haley last August. Magee is charged with firing a shotgun blast which killed the judge after he and four others were taken hostage.

Poindexter Trial Set For Monday

NEW YORK (UPI)—The U.S. attorney's office has subpoenaed newsmen here and in Chicago and Detroit as witnesses at the Trial of David R. Poindexter which opens Monday, it was learned yesterday.

Poindexter was arrested last October with Angela Davis, a black militant being tried on charges of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy stemming from the Marin Hall of Justice shootout last summer. He was charged with harboring a fugitive.

The news media representatives are to present news stories and broadcasts to counter a possible defense that it was not known generally Miss Davis was wanted, a spokesman said. Miss Davis was on the FBI's most wanted list when she was apprehended.

Subpoenas were issued to representatives of the New York Times, Time-Life, Newsweek and three television networks with headquarters in New York, newspapers and three television stations in Chicago and two papers and three television stations in Detroit.

Welfare Package Backed By Supervisors On File

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — County supervisors-supported legislation rivaling Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare revision plan is before the Assembly.

Assemblymen Peter Schabarum, R-Covina, and Ken MacDonald, D-Ojai, filed their proposal Friday and said the program is aimed at reducing welfare costs without shifting the burden to the county property taxpayers.

The four-bill package is sponsored by the County Supervisors Association of California which previously expressed concern that the governor's proposal would increase property taxes. Reagan denied this.

A key provision of the supervisors' program—some of which parallels Reagan's—would transfer from the Department of Social Welfare to the Department of Human Resources Development the unemployed fathers' aid category.

This would be aimed at finding jobs for able-bodied recipients. The measure would also set a ceiling of $50 plus costs of child care on the amount of work-related expenses paid a recipient.

Like Reagan's proposal, the supervisors' bill calls for consolidating old age assistance, aid to the blind and aid to the disabled and automating their grant payments as is currently done in the federal social security system.

Two Injured As Car Rolls Over

A San Francisco man and woman suffered minor injuries in a one-car crash at 2:30 p.m. Thursday eastbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, west of San Geronimo Valley Drive, the California Highway Patrol reported.

The driver, Robert Bates, 28, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple bruises and scrapes. A passenger, Nancy Rifkin, 28, was treated for head bruises, neck strain and a cut thumb.

Officers said Bates failed to negotiate a curve and the auto rolled over and hit an embankment.

Sixth Worker Dies From Acid Fumes

BERWICK, Maine (UPI)—A sixth man died early today from deadly fumes released at a tannery when faulty directions were given to the driver of a chemical tanker truck.

James F. Royce, 18, of Farmington, N.H., died about 6 a.m. at Frisbie Memorial Hospital in Rochester, N.H., where he had been under intensive care since the accident Friday morning in Berwick which also claimed his father's life.

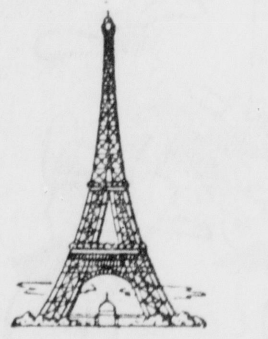
THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Celebration For 100th Birthday

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. R. F. Howard, who was born April 2, 1871, in Virginia City, Nev., is being honored this evening at a party at the home of her grandson and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Stinchcomb, in San Anselmo.

Louise Howard's father was a miner, and her mother was a trapeze artist, and an interpreter for the early Virginia City Courts who spoke English, Spanish, French, Italian, Chinese and the local Indian dialect.



The former Louise Bennett was graduated from high school in Virginia City, taught piano and played for the dances in town. After her father's death her mother was married to Peter Bellani, and the family owned and managed the Peter Bellani Hotel in Virginia City until they moved to San Francisco in 1903.

Grandma Lou, as the honoree is known, was wed to a cowboy, R. F. Howard, who gave up "the wild life" to become a carpenter and moved his family to a home at Sixth and Folsom Streets in San Francisco, which was destroyed by the fire, which resulted from the 1906 earthquake.

Relatives who will attend the 100th birthday party are Mrs. Howard's daughters, Mrs. Clarence Abbott and Mrs. Jack Lehman, both of San Francisco; her three great grandsons; and four great-great grandchildren.

SURPRISED SUNDAY when 50 friends and relatives appeared at their home were Mr. and Mrs. James L. Regalia Jr. and James L. Regelia Sr. of Novato.

The trio is on a six-week's tour of Europe, and the party, hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Michael T. Rains, also of Novato, the junior Regalias' daughter and son-in-law, was to say bon voyage.

Countries the Regalias plan to visit are Germany, Switzerland, Austria, France and Italy, where they will stay with relatives.

MRS. EDNA Schumacher of Mill Valley has as her house guest Mrs. Helen Eldridge from Ketchikan, Alaska. This is their first meeting in 35 years.

LITTLEST SLUGGER

Little players can dream about sliding home in baseball uniform pajamas of durable press cotton knit by Carter's. The matching terry cloth slippers are also machine washable. Baseball cap and bat are optional extras.

SEW SIMPLE

Adjustment Eases The Back

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I don't have many adjustments to make on a pattern. However, I am wide across the back, and If I get a larger size pattern so that the back doesn't pull, the neckline and shoulders are too large. Please tell me what to do for more ease in the back.

MRS. H.S.

DEAR MRS. H.S.,

This is rather a simple adjustment to make. Draw a straight line on your pattern from the shoulder to the waistline. If the dress doesn't have a waistline seam, continue the line well into the skirt. This line should be at the center of the width of the shoulder but not through any dart if there is one.

Cut your pattern and spread it slightly, depending on the ease you need, usually ¼ to ½ inch is the most that would be needed. Since the Front of the shoulder is the correct width, you will have to take a small fold out of the back of your pattern within the shoulder area, similar to a dart, about 3 inches long, tapering to nothing at the end. Now you will have the room you need across the back but the shoulder should be the original width and will then fit the front shoulder properly. The size of this small fold in your pattern would depend on the width you added to the back; they must be the same.

MRS. JOY Benson, Hnolulu, Hawaii, is the Tailor Trix pressing board winner this week for her sewing suggestion:

"One day when I was writing in the families appointments on the calender, I made a few for myself. Now the whole family knows when my sewing day is here, and the cooperation is beautiful. I keep the appointment with enthusiasm as never before. What a great way to accomplish all those outfits I want to make without feeling guilty about letting other things go."

DEAR EUNICE,

My material has one inch stripes, and the dress I have chosen will have a chevron effect in the front because the front seam is cut at an angle. Since all women are conscious of their size, please tell me which way these stripes should go. Should they angle up like a "V" or come down like a triangle?

MRS. B.A.

DEAR MRS. B.A.,

Whenever you are in doubt about a problem concerning stripes or plaids, take a piece of ruled paper, if it's plaid, add the vertical lines. Then place the small pieces of the pattern given in the cutting guide of your pattern, on the paper which in turn will represent your pattern. This is a very simple way to see just exactly how the stripes or plaids will look when the garment is complete.

I tried this when I was working out your problem and it seemed to me that the dress would have slimmer lines if the stripes pointed up to the shoulders, in other words, forming a "V" at the center front.

DEAR EUNICE,

I recently bought a piece of striped polyester knit, and even though the salesgirl cut it exactly on the woven line of the knit, it simply won't lie smooth when I try to place it even on the fold. One end goes up hill and when I try to smooth the ends straight there is a large diagonal ripple in the middle. This was an expensive piece of knit, and the shop has only the finest fabrics. Was there a defect in the knit? I thought when stripes were woven instead of printed, they would always end up even.

MRS. G.H.W.

DEAR MRS. G.H.W.,

There is always a chance that a woven stripe will be more even than a printed one. However this is not the problem in your case. The polyester knits are "heat-set" after they have been woven. A great deal of care is taken to be sure the fabric is perfectly even on grain, but in this case there was probably one end that fed into the rollers faster than the other end. This piece of knit will probably never lie nice and smooth even if you washed it, because of the heat-set process. Return your merchandise to your shop, and they in turn will send it back to the manufacturer. I have recently gone through one of our finest knits mills in the East and was amazed about the operation. There is every possible precaution taken in inspection, finishing, etc. to insure you a perfect piece of fabric. Naturally, the price of the fabric is some indication of the finished product, but no one would knowingly sell a piece of fabric they knew wasn't perfect.

Informal Rites Save Fuss, Time

NEW YORK (UPI)—In a survey, the 27 per cent of young brides who opt for an informal wedding said they did so for these reasons: Financial, time and fuss.

They either didn't have the money for a large wedding or, if they had, wanted to spend it on something else. The time necessary to plan for a large wedding was not available. The young brides were turned off by the prospect of all the fussing that goes on in connection with a large or formal wedding.

'Nice Guy' Protects His Own Interests First, Then Is Silent

DEAR HELEN:

We all know him too well — the "nice guy" who goes along with what he thinks is most popular so people will like him. He doesn't have opinions strong enough to stand up against criticism. He's the perennial "yes man."

Here's my definition of a nice guy. How many fit that image?

A "nice" guy keeps silent about deeper invasions into Indochina because "we've always had war" and "those guys must know what they're doing." Besides, it isn't his neck — he's over draft age, and has a defense plant job.

A nice guy shrugs off My Lai and remains silent on the war in general.

He protects his only interest (himself) and has never made history. He seldom has the guts to speak out, fearing he might offend somebody (who could help him later on if he remains ingratiating).

Throughout history, he has never invented anything, led a revolution, or challenged the status quo.

A nice guy needs security from the constant winning of smiles, more handshakes and a paternal slap on the back.He feels desperately that people must "love" him. He needs garnished compliments and flowery praise.

He may have daydreams about being a "man," but if it means speaking out, he soon begins to squeak like a mouse.

The nice guy is apt to say "Some of my best friends are Negroes . . ." but puts his house up for sale if one moves into the neighborhood.

When minority groups ask for something more, he's all sympathy — until they come too close.

The nice guy will never get fired from his job. He doesn't have the courage to stand up and be counted for any ideal. To do so may hurt his "don't rock the boat" image.

Often the nice guy survives only through the props of ego building from his patient wife or family, who know when to apply soft soap.

He will be paraded through a corridor of lilies at his death, with a smile on his face, his only mission in life accomplished: that everyone sing out his praises and cast their eyes adoringly on —the loved one. (Could be they're relieved to be done with him.)

A nice guy is a neuter, sexless creature with a charming personality. He is too "nice" to cry out against the inhumanity of war, racism or injustice. Behind his charm lies a character nurtured with so much saccharine, it has turned him into a docile heap of rubble.

A nice guy gains his goal of collective love at the expense of the world which has paid dearly for his needs, while real men have struggled and died.

A "nice" guy is the opposite of a "MAN." And the world is all to full of nice guys. — LYNN.

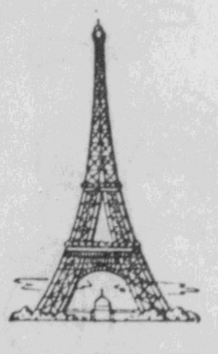
THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Celebration For 100th Birthday

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. R. F. Howard, who was born April 2, 1871, in Virginia City, Nev., is being honored this evening at a party at the home of her grandson and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Stinchcomb, in San Anselmo.

Louise Howard's father was a miner, and her mother was a trapeze artist, and an interpreter for the early Virginia City Courts who spoke English, Spanish, French, Italian, Chinese and the local Indian dialect.



The former Louise Bennett was graduated from high school in Virginia City, taught piano and played for the dances in town. After her father's death her mother was married to Peter Bellani, and the family owned and managed the Peter Bellani Hotel in Virginia City until they moved to San Francisco in 1903.

Grandma Lou, as the honoree is known, was wed to a cowboy, R. F. Howard, who gave up "the wild life" to become a carpenter and moved his family to a home at Sixth and Folsom Streets in San Francisco, which was destroyed by the fire, which resulted from the 1906 earthquake.

Relatives who will attend the 100th birthday party are Mrs. Howard's daughters, Mrs. Clarence Abbott and Mrs. Jack Lehman, both of San Francisco; her three great grandsons; and four great-great grandchildren.

SURPRISED SUNDAY when 50 friends and relatives appeared at their home were Mr. and Mrs. James L. Regalia Jr. and James L. Regelia Sr. of Novato.

The trio is on a six-week's tour of Europe, and the party, hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Michael T. Rains, also of Novato, the junior Regalias' daughter and son-in-law, was to say bon voyage.

Countries the Regalias plan to visit are Germany, Switzerland, Austria, France and Italy, where they will stay with relatives.

MRS. EDNA Schumacher of Mill Valley has as her house guest Mrs. Helen Eldridge from Ketchikan, Alaska. This is their first meeting in 35 years.

LITTLEST SLUGGER

Little players can dream about sliding home in baseball uniform pajamas of durable press cotton knit by Carter's. The matching terry cloth slippers are also machine washable. Baseball cap and bat are optional extras.

SEW SIMPLE

Adjustment Eases The Back

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I don't have many adjustments to make on a pattern. However, I am wide across the back, and If I get a larger size pattern so that the back doesn't pull, the neckline and shoulders are too large. Please tell me what to do for more ease in the back.

MRS. H.S.

DEAR MRS. H.S.,

This is rather a simple adjustment to make. Draw a straight line on your pattern from the shoulder to the waistline. If the dress doesn't have a waistline seam, continue the line well into the skirt. This line should be at the center of the width of the shoulder but not through any dart if there is one.

Cut your pattern and spread it slightly, depending on the ease you need, usually ¼ to ½ inch is the most that would be needed. Since the Front of the shoulder is the correct width, you will have to take a small fold out of the back of your pattern within the shoulder area, similar to a dart, about 3 inches long, tapering to nothing at the end. Now you will have the room you need across the back but the shoulder should be the original width and will then fit the front shoulder properly. The size of this small fold in your pattern would depend on the width you added to the back; they must be the same.

MRS. JOY Benson, Hnolulu, Hawaii, is the Tailor Trix pressing board winner this week for her sewing suggestion:

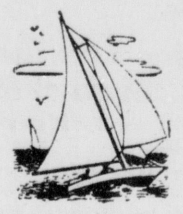
Second in the series of five Friday forenoons, sponsored by the Moya Library Guild of the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross, will feature a talk, "The Great Renaissance, What and Why?" by John Bissinger, a docent at the de Young Museum in San Francisco. He will speak at 11 a.m. in the Jose Moya del Pino Library in the Octagon House at the center.

A luncheon will follow.



MEMBERS OF San Rafael Assembly International Order of the Rainbow for Girls are leaving tomorrow to attend a four-day grand assembly in Fresno.

They will be accompanied by Jane Van Dyke and Marsha Wagner.

PARADISE HARBOR Yacht Club in Tiburon is having a farewell cruise around the light ship outside the Golden Gate tomorrow. The light ship is being replaced by automation.

Commodore Stan Behrens and Charles Siani will lead the cruise.

Members will invite guests on the cruise and to the clubhouse for festivities afterward.

Women Best Car Buyers

The female, not the male, of the household should be the family's used-car buyer, or at least the shopper; a national magazine asserted today.

Women are more used to shopping and more apt to like it, asserted the April issue of American Home magazine. "And shopping is what it takes to turn up a good buy in a used car."

"Too many men can be intimidated by a salesman who senses their ignorance and plays on it. Women, with no automotive myths to live up to, are free to ask all the 'dumb' questions they want, and maybe turn up some important answers," it says.

Here are some hints on used-car buying given in the magazine.

Include $150 to $250 in your budget for getting the car into top shape. "This repair reserve might save you major headaches, which can be acquired trying to avoid minor ones," asserted the article.

Decide beforehand if you plan to keep the car for some time or resell it soon. A car that "holds its price" might not be a good buy since you, after all, are paying the price it "held."

The best time to buy a used car is when new cars are selling well, generally in spring and early summer. More used cars are available then because they are being taken in as trades.

"Generally, four-door sedans offer the best value as used cars because they depreciate faster than their fancier relatives — and, too, the fancier cars have more gadgetry to go haywire." "A good rule of thumb is: The older the car you buy the simpler it should be, for there will be less likelihood of something going wrong with it."

German Women Play It Safe

When it comes to investing savings, German women want to play it safe. This is the conclusion of an unusual study conducted by a marketing analysis group in Nuremberg, West Germany.

When the German woman thinks about tying up savings, she opts first and foremost for security. The profit motive plays only a secondary role.

Seventy-five percent of the women surveyed viewed the stock market as a sheer speculative affair. Eighty percent equated the stock market with quick profits or quick losses. Most women had next to no idea about bonds and similar obligations.

The study concluded the German woman's instinct is oriented toward holding onto what she has and multiplying it with a go-slow attitude.

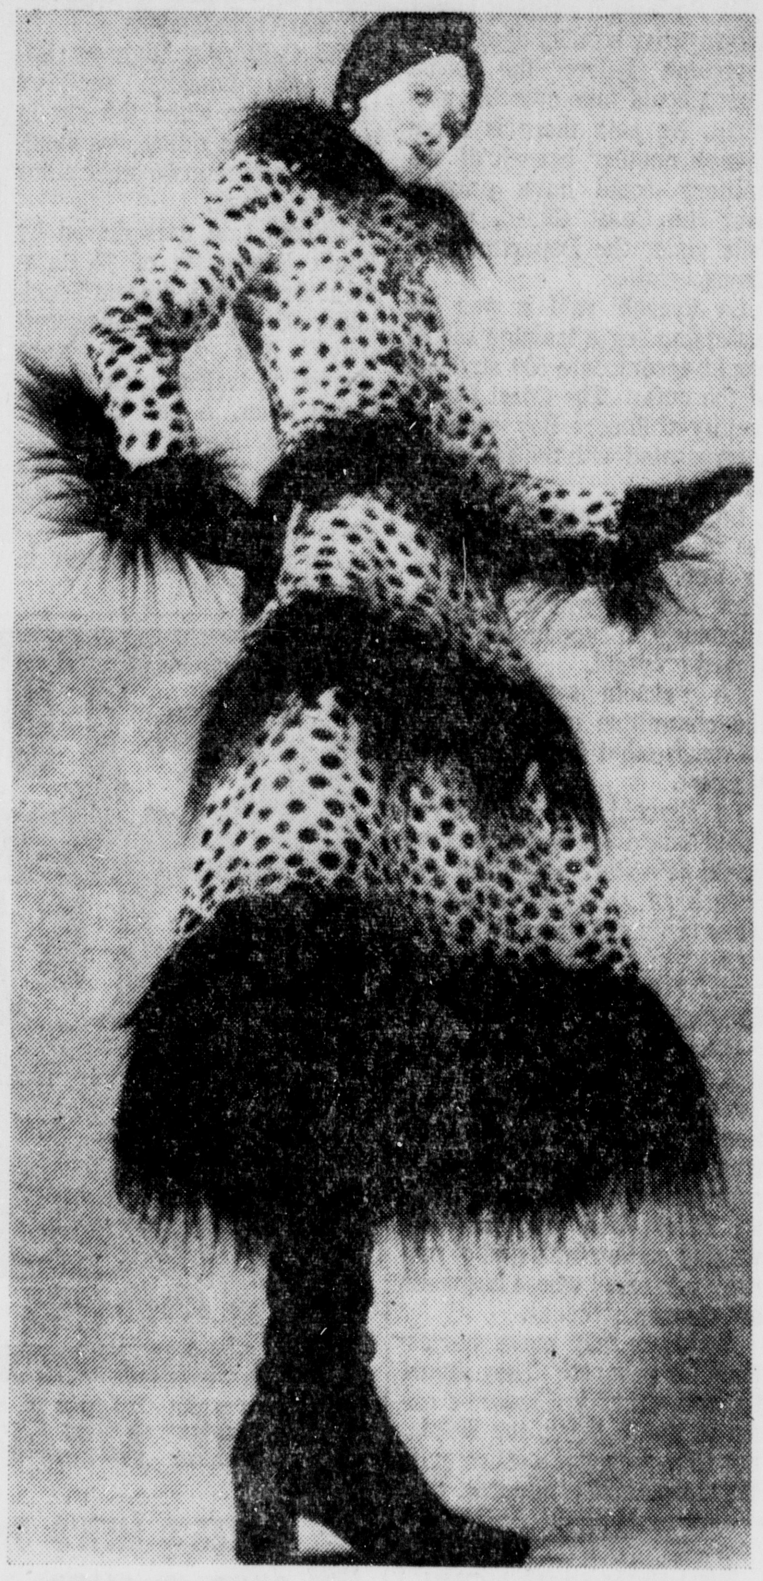
Conservationists Plea To Furriers

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—The movement to conserve rare animals is spreading. Now it affects top couturier houses of this world fashion center.



THIS SOMALILAND cheetah coat inlayed with horizontal stripes in black monkey from Christian Dior's '71-'72 winter collection is likely to be one of the last made from the fur of an endangered species. The International Fur Federation, a trade group with furrier members in 17 countries, has agreed to stop buying furs of Bengal tigers, leopards and cheetah and is asking members to take a three-year-moratorium on other animals' fur while the conservation union studies whether they are endangered also.

(UPI telephoto)

The fur shows that have been underway here include coats of Bengal tiger, leopard and cheetah, all endangered species. But the pressure to keep the skins on the animals themselves is growing, just as it did two years ago in the United States when the fur industry moved to stop importing or using furs of these rapidly disappearing wild beasts.

Now the pressure is on Paris from the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and from customers and the press.

THE INTERNATIONAL Fur Federation, a trade group with furrier members in 17 countries including France, says it has agreed to the conservation union's demand that the federation recommend to members in May that they stop buying certain skins.

The conservation union lists as on the brink of extinction the Bengal tiger, the snow leopard, the cloudy leopard, the giant otter and the la plata (South American) otter.

The federation said it also agreed to ask members to take a three-year moratorium on other kinds of leopards and cheetahs while the conservation union conducts a scientific study to determine extent of endangerment to them.

The federation refused to agree on recommending bans on jaguar and ocelot coats and "we have no funds for a survey to prove the danger to these animals," a spokesman for the union, headquartered in Morges, Switzerland, said. He added that "more than 200,000 ocelots were killed for coats in 1969 alone."

THE CONSERVATION union is supported in part by funds from the United Nations scientific, educational and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). Whether the federation's recommendation to its members will empty Paris high fashion salons of some of the rare furs is not yet known. A federation spokesman said it could only recommend, not compel.

The news media and public opinion only recently have taken up the fur conservation cause. French television recently featured a debate between designers and conservationists and Animal Magazine campaigned with such slogans as "Leopard skin coats look better on leopards."

Federic Castet, chief fur designer for Christian Dior, said the luxury coats of cheetah, Bengal tiger, ocelot, jaguar and panther in his recent show came from "old skins in our stocks for several years."

Most of the Dior designs were made from animals such as mink that is commercially bred and not endangered.

Castet said the firm was not buying tiger and leopard now. "We do not want to kill these species, that would not be in our interest" said the designer whose clientele includes some of the world's wealthiest women.

"However we think they should be controlled (and not banned). . A certain number would die anyway from other means such as illness."

Castet has another plan which under the power of the Dior name could influence the whole fur industry. He is working on a method of imitating fur of the rare cats by painting tiger stripes and leopard stripes on non-rare or artificial skins "since some women always will want this type of fur."

TO PUBLISH ENGAGEMENT AND WEDDING STORIES IN THE I-J

Forms for engagement and wedding story information to be printed in the Independent-Journal are available from the I-J offices in San Rafael, Novato, Mill Valley and Southern Sonoma

Wedding forms should be returned promptly to the I-J office in your area and information will be printed immediately after the wedding. Photographers should be urged to submit a print of the wedding picture promptly. Color photographs cannot be used.

The Independent-Journal does not print wedding stories or photographs received more than seven days after the wedding.

An engagement form may be accompanied by a professional black and white photograph, which may be picked up at the I-J office after publication. Snapshots, polaroid or color pictures are not suitable.

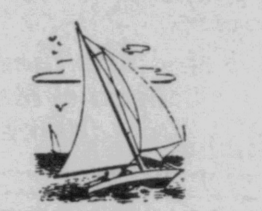
ON THE AGENDA

'The Great Renaissance, What And Why?' Is Forenoon Topic

Second in the series of five Friday forenoons, sponsored by the Moya Library Guild of the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross, will feature a talk, "The Great Renaissance, What and Why?" by John Bissinger, a docent at the de Young Museum in San Francisco. He will speak at 11 a.m. in the Jose Moya del Pino Library in the Octagon House at the center.

A luncheon will follow.



MEMBERS OF San Rafael Assembly International Order of the Rainbow for Girls are leaving tomorrow to attend a four-day grand assembly in Fresno.

They will be accompanied by Jane Van Dyke and Marsha Wagner.

PARADISE HARBOR Yacht Club in Tiburon is having a farewell cruise around the light ship outside the Golden Gate tomorrow. The light ship is being replaced by automation.

Commodore Stan Behrens and Charles Siani will lead the cruise.

Members will invite guests on the cruise and to the clubhouse for festivities afterward.

Women Best Car Buyers

The female, not the male, of the household should be the family's used-car buyer, or at least the shopper; a national magazine asserted today.

Women are more used to shopping and more apt to like it, asserted the April issue of American Home magazine. "And shopping is what it takes to turn up a good buy in a used car."

"Too many men can be intimidated by a salesman who senses their ignorance and plays on it. Women, with no automotive myths to live up to, are free to ask all the 'dumb' questions they want, and maybe turn up some important answers," it says.

Here are some hints on used-car buying given in the magazine.

Include $150 to $250 in your budget for getting the car into top shape. "This repair reserve might save you major headaches, which can be acquired trying to avoid minor ones," asserted the article.

Decide beforehand if you plan to keep the car for some time or resell it soon. A car that "holds its price" might not be a good buy since you, after all, are paying the price it "held."

The best time to buy a used car is when new cars are selling well, generally in spring and early summer. More used cars are available then because they are being taken in as trades.

"Generally, four-door sedans offer the best value as used cars because they depreciate faster than their fancier relatives — and, too, the fancier cars have more gadgetry to go haywire." "A good rule of thumb is: The older the car you buy the simpler it should be, for there will be less likelihood of something going wrong with it."

German Women Play It Safe

When it comes to investing savings, German women want to play it safe. This is the conclusion of an unusual study conducted by a marketing analysis group in Nuremberg, West Germany.

When the German woman thinks about tying up savings, she opts first and foremost for security. The profit motive plays only a secondary role.

Seventy-five percent of the women surveyed viewed the stock market as a sheer speculative affair. Eighty percent equated the stock market with quick profits or quick losses. Most women had next to no idea about bonds and similar obligations.

The study concluded the German woman's instinct is oriented toward holding onto what she has and multiplying it with a go-slow attitude.

'THE TENTH MAN'

Ellen Ernst and Gerald Genese appear in a scene from "The Tenth Man," a play by Paddy Chayefsky, the current theater bill at the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts. Opened last weekend, the play will be presented today at 8:30 p.m. and also April 16 and 17 and April 23 and 24. The play has been called a "rare blend of humor, the occult and concern for the human condition. It is being directed by Robert Adler.

OVER 200,000

Calley Record Sales Booming

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—A song set to the tune of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and entitled "the Battle Hymn of Lt. Calley" has sold more than 200,000 records since the conviction of Lt. William L. Calley, a record company says.

A spokesman for Shelby Singelton Productions, Inc., said the demand for the record, a country and western-type rendition, is "absolutely fantastic."

The record was released about 10 days before Calley's conviction Monday for murdering 22 Vietnamese women, children and old men at My Lai. It got off to a slow start.

"On Tuesday we sold 10,000 copies," said Miss Bobbye Hinson of Singelton. "Wednesday sold about 40,000 and Thursday we sold 154,000."

The figures for Friday were not immediately available.

"It has been doing absolutely fantastic. Some radio stations are playing it for an entire hour without interruption. People are using it as a means to protest the verdict, I think.

"The phones are ringing off the wall. We have had to press an additional 5,000 records this week just for promotional purposes."

The song was written by two amateur songwriters,

Coast Guard Seeks Two Rock Station

The Coast Guard, with the support of a special study group, wants to acquire the Two Rock Ranch Army Station west of Petaluma for use as a training school.

Arthur La Franchi, Petaluma Chamber of Commerce president, said yesterday the coast guard has sent a survey team to the post, due to be closed June 30 under a Defense Department economy move.

La Franchi said it is not known what hurdles need to be overcome before the Coast Guard could take over the property. He said there is some chance another branch of the military could have priority over the Coast Guard, which falls under the Department of Transportation.

La Franchi said it was his understanding a training school would accomodate 500 students at the outset. The Coast Guard facility at Bodega Bay would be incorporated with the school, he said.

La Franchi leads a committee of 17 Petalumans, selected by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District, which voted unanimously to support the Coast Guard proposal.

La Franchi said, however, the committee would continue to weigh other ideas for use of the post.

La Franchi said he believed Coast Guard use of the property would be a stable one since that branch of the service is not necessarily controlled by the effects of war and peace and would bring a good calibre of residents.

Other uses suggested for the post have included a law enforcement training center, national cemetery, Head Start training center, secondary vocational training institute, Indian reservation and military waiting station for wives of military personnel whose husbands are serving overseas.

Residents may make suggestions for new uses. They should be sent either to Clausen's office in Santa Rosa, the Petaluma City manager's office or to the chamber of commerce.

Pharmacy Cigarette Ban Likely

The president of the Marin County Pharmaceutical Association said yesterday that the expects Marin pharmacists to go along with a proposal of the American Pharmaceutical Association that members not sell cigarettes in their stores.

"There's no doubt about it," Paul Lofholm said when asked whether tobacco product sales would be ended in Marin drug stores.

He said that he was a delegate to the convention in San Francisco Thursday where members voted to ban sales.

Despite Lofholm's enthusiasm for the proposal, other pharmacists said privately they did not agree with the ban on cigarettes.

A San Rafael druggist said that he thought it was unfair to put pressure on one type of retailer to end sales. "They'll just go somewhere else to buy cigarettes," he said, referring to smokers, and suggested that a federal ban on the manufacturer of cigarettes as the only effective control.

Goldwater Views My Lai Incident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If Sen. Barry Goldwater had commanded the Army at the time of the My Lai massacre, he would have "written it off" as part of the brutality of war.

Civilian noncombatants have always suffered most in war, the Arizona Republican, a retired major general in the Air Force reserve, said Friday in a statement.

"I can't speak for others, but had I been the commanding general of the Army at the time of the My Lai incident, I would have admitted such an incident did occur, expressed my deep and profound regret and then written it off as part of the brutality and uselessness and waste which are natural ingredients in any war," Goldwater said.

Driver Hurts Back In Crash

Walter Langdon, 59, of 30 Rosemont Drive, San Anselmo, was listed in good condition today in the Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael after being injured yesterday in a three-car collision on Highway 101 near Corte Madera.

The California Highway Patrol said Langdon received back injuries when the car in which he was riding was sandwiched between two other autos about 4:50 p.m.

Officers said cars driven by Paula Evens, 20, of 30 Rosemont Drive, and Vincent Sancimino, 65, of 146 Meadowcroft Drive, San Anselmo, were stopped in traffic in the northbound lanes. A car driven by Marvin H. Meyer, 21, of Moscow, Ida., hit the rear of the Evens car, causing it to hit the Sancimino vehicle.

Langdon was a passenger in Mrs. Evens's car.

Plea Made For Transplant Organs

LONDON (UPI)—The vital organs of dying persons should be made available for medical transplant in order to put the needs of the living ahead of the "irrelevant caprices" of reluctant family members, a Newcastle University professor said Friday.

Prof. Henry Miller, vice chencallor of the university, told a London biology conference that only specific prior orders by the deceased should prevent use of such organs for transplant.

'THE TENTH MAN'

Ellen Ernst and Gerald Genese appear in a scene from "The Tenth Man," a play by Paddy Chayefsky, the current theater bill at the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts. Opened last weekend, the play will be presented today at 8:30 p.m. and also April 16 and 17 and April 23 and 24. The play has been called a "rare blend of humor, the occult and concern for the human condition. It is being directed by Robert Adler.

Coast Guard Seeks Two Rock Station

The Coast Guard, with the support of a special study group, wants to acquire the Two Rock Ranch Army Station west of Petaluma for use as a training school.

Arthur La Franchi, Petaluma Chamber of Commerce president, said yesterday the coast guard has sent a survey team to the post, due to be closed June 30 under a Defense Department economy move.

La Franchi said it is not known what hurdles need to be overcome before the Coast Guard could take over the property. He said there is some chance another branch of the military could have priority over the Coast Guard, which falls under the Department of Transportation.

La Franchi said it was his understanding a training school would accomodate 500 students at the outset. The Coast Guard facility at Bodega Bay would be incorporated with the school, he said.

La Franchi leads a committee of 17 Petalumans, selected by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District, which voted unanimously to support the Coast Guard proposal.

La Franchi said, however, the committee would continue to weigh other ideas for use of the post.

La Franchi said he believed Coast Guard use of the property would be a stable one since that branch of the service is not necessarily controlled by the effects of war and peace and would bring a good calibre of residents.

Other uses suggested for the post have included a law enforcement training center, national cemetery, Head Start training center, secondary vocational training institute, Indian reservation and military waiting station for wives of military personnel whose husbands are serving overseas.

Residents may make suggestions for new uses. They should be sent either to Clausen's office in Santa Rosa, the Petaluma City manager's office or to the chamber of commerce.

Pharmacy Cigarette Ban Likely

The president of the Marin County Pharmaceutical Association said yesterday that the expects Marin pharmacists to go along with a proposal of the American Pharmaceutical Association that members not sell cigarettes in their stores.

"There's no doubt about it," Paul Lofholm said when asked whether tobacco product sales would be ended in Marin drug stores.

He said that he was a delegate to the convention in San Francisco Thursday where members voted to ban sales.

Despite Lofholm's enthusiasm for the proposal, other pharmacists said privately they did not agree with the ban on cigarettes.

A San Rafael druggist said that he thought it was unfair to put pressure on one type of retailer to end sales. "They'll just go somewhere else to buy cigarettes," he said, referring to smokers, and suggested that a federal ban on the manufacturer of cigarettes as the only effective control.

Goldwater Views My Lai Incident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If Sen. Barry Goldwater had commanded the Army at the time of the My Lai massacre, he would have "written it off" as part of the brutality of war.

Civilian noncombatants have always suffered most in war, the Arizona Republican, a retired major general in the Air Force reserve, said Friday in a statement.

"I can't speak for others, but had I been the commanding general of the Army at the time of the My Lai incident, I would have admitted such an incident did occur, expressed my deep and profound regret and then written it off as part of the brutality and uselessness and waste which are natural ingredients in any war," Goldwater said.

Driver Hurts Back In Crash

Walter Langdon, 59, of 30 Rosemont Drive, San Anselmo, was listed in good condition today in the Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael after being injured yesterday in a three-car collision on Highway 101 near Corte Madera.

The California Highway Patrol said Langdon received back injuries when the car in which he was riding was sandwiched between two other autos about 4:50 p.m.

Officers said cars driven by Paula Evens, 20, of 30 Rosemont Drive, and Vincent Sancimino, 65, of 146 Meadowcroft Drive, San Anselmo, were stopped in traffic in the northbound lanes. A car driven by Marvin H. Meyer, 21, of Moscow, Ida., hit the rear of the Evens car, causing it to hit the Sancimino vehicle.

Langdon was a passenger in Mrs. Evens's car.

Plea Made For Transplant Organs

LONDON (UPI)—The vital organs of dying persons should be made available for medical transplant in order to put the needs of the living ahead of the "irrelevant caprices" of reluctant family members, a Newcastle University professor said Friday.

Prof. Henry Miller, vice chencallor of the university, told a London biology conference that only specific prior orders by the deceased should prevent use of such organs for transplant.

Electronic Age?

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Court reporters may soon be a thing of the past. The Board of Supervisors has begun a study to determine if the 450 court reporters in Superior and Municipal courts can be replaced—electronically.

OVER 200,000

Calley Record Sales Booming

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—A song set to the tune of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and entitled "the Battle Hymn of Lt. Calley" has sold more than 200,000 records since the conviction of Lt. William L. Calley, a record company says.

A spokesman for Shelby Singelton Productions, Inc., said the demand for the record, a country and western-type rendition, is "absolutely fantastic."

The record was released about 10 days before Calley's conviction Monday for murdering 22 Vietnamese women, children and old men at My Lai. It got off to a slow start.

"On Tuesday we sold 10,000 copies," said Miss Bobbye Hinson of Singelton. "Wednesday sold about 40,000 and Thursday we sold 154,000."

The figures for Friday were not immediately available.

"It has been doing absolutely fantastic. Some radio stations are playing it for an entire hour without interruption. People are using it as a means to protest the verdict, I think.

"The phones are ringing off the wall. We have had to press an additional 5,000 records this week just for promotional purposes."

The song was written by two amateur songwriters,

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Retirement Brings Status Loss In Society Geared Toward Work

Leisure often is associated with social status — a hangover, perhaps, from the days the idle rich were envied. But today, millions of people have time on their hands due to early retirement and shorter working hours. To the senior citizen who thrived on activity and work, the prestige is gone. As one oldster said, "This business of being put out to pasture is for the birds.'' Many working people regard those with nthing to do as being disabled, on relief, school dropouts, unemployed or prisoners. They also include retirees in this category — until they are in the same boat. Now the shoe is on the other foot, yet it is difficult to change preconceived notions of long standing. As a result, the retiree finds little status in leisure and more so when his health is failing and his income limited.

IN OUR COUNTRY, status is based on personal accomplishments, occupation and position in the labor force. Many years ago, the late cartoonist, Carey Orr was discussing retirement with a 50-year-old financier. Mr. Orr listened patiently as the wealthy man told about his 14 factories and how he was about to sell his empire for millions and retire. Carey Orr then asked him: "Who did you say you were?" "Why I'm Mr. X, president of such-and-such company." To this Orr replied: "And, who will you be after you sell out?" It left Mr. X with a blank expression.

Today status still is equated to current, rather than past, accomplishments. If retirement is inevitable, anticipate loss of prestige. The best solution is to plan ahead by acquiring different skills, hobbies, and avocation.

STAMP COLLECTING or photography helps, but it may not be enough. Leisure should be productive to avoid the pitfalls of retirement. Time spent in this way should not be confused with relaxation. Above all, cultivate a sense of humor. It is invaluable in offsetting the consequences of being busy doing nothing and an asset at any age.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SEDATIVE HANGOVER

Miss R. writes: Do sleeping pills affect the mind the next day? A friend of mine who uses them has hallucinations at times.

REPLY

Sedative hangover from certain types of drugs usually consists of drowsiness, headache and depression. Prolonged use or abuse of barbiturates may induce irritability, confusion and a host of neurological symptoms. Hallucinations are most unusual after taking sedatives.

CAVITIES IN BABY TEETH

Mrs. R. W. writes: If cavities develop in baby teeth should they be pulled or filled?

REPLY

Filled unless they are about to fall out. Baby teeth should be preserved if, for no other reason, than to act as space retainers until the permanent set comes in. Consult your dentist. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on dental caries.

WOOL FAT

K. R. writes: Is lanolin the same as cholesterol?

REPLY

Not exactly, in that lanolin (hydrous wool fat) contains cholesterol and other fatty acids.

INFECTED KIDNEY

Y. G. writes: I have an infected kidney. Can I transmit these germs to my family?

REPLY

No. Kidney disease is not contagious.

Today's Health Hint — Most men do not die — they kill themselves.

Man Who Set Airport Fire Sent To Prison

William Phillip Nance, 20, of Santa Rosa, convicted of setting a $250,000 fire at Gnoss Field last October, was sentenced to state prison yesterday by Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court.

Nance had been found guilty by a jury of arson and burglary in connection with the fire at the Marin County Airport north of Novato. The jury also found him to have been sane at the time of the crimes.

The fire, last Oct. 25, destroyed the Spectrum Air building and the Blue Yonder coffee shop, as well as a $150,000 executive aircraft leased by Willaim Penn Patrick, San Rafael cosmetics manufacturer. Patrick had loaned the plane to former Sen. George Murphy for his unsuccessful reelection campaign.

Prison Escapees Set For Trial

Trial has been set for the week of May 24 in Marin Superior Court for Gary Edward Atwood, 34, and Eugene P. Waymire, 33, charged in connection with an escape from San Quentin Prison Feb. 13.

They have pleaded innocent to charges of escape, car theft, burglary and assault with a deadly weapon.

The pair was captured near Indian Valley Golf Club outside Novato Feb. 14 after they allegedly burglarized and stole a truck from a San Rafael pool supply firm.

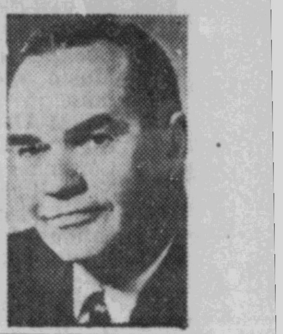
HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Retirement Brings Status Loss In Society Geared Toward Work



Leisure often is associated with social status — a hangover, perhaps, from the days the idle rich were envied. But today, millions of people have time on their hands due to early retirement and shorter working hours. To the senior citizen who thrived on activity and work, the prestige is gone. As one oldster said, "This business of being put out to pasture is for the birds.'' Many working people regard those with nthing to do as being disabled, on relief, school dropouts, unemployed or prisoners. They also include retirees in this category — until they are in the same boat. Now the shoe is on the other foot, yet it is difficult to change preconceived notions of long standing. As a result, the retiree finds little status in leisure and more so when his health is failing and his income limited.

IN OUR COUNTRY, status is based on personal accomplishments, occupation and position in the labor force. Many years ago, the late cartoonist, Carey Orr was discussing retirement with a 50-year-old financier. Mr. Orr listened patiently as the wealthy man told about his 14 factories and how he was about to sell his empire for millions and retire. Carey Orr then asked him: "Who did you say you were?" "Why I'm Mr. X, president of such-and-such company." To this Orr replied: "And, who will you be after you sell out?" It left Mr. X with a blank expression.

Today status still is equated to current, rather than past, accomplishments. If retirement is inevitable, anticipate loss of prestige. The best solution is to plan ahead by acquiring different skills, hobbies, and avocation.

STAMP COLLECTING or photography helps, but it may not be enough. Leisure should be productive to avoid the pitfalls of retirement. Time spent in this way should not be confused with relaxation. Above all, cultivate a sense of humor. It is invaluabie in offsetting the consequences of being busy doing nothing and an asset at any age.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SEDATIVE HANGOVER

Miss R. writes: Do sleeping pills affect the mind the next day? A friend of mine who uses them has hallucinations at times.

REPLY

Sedative hangover from certain types of drugs usually consists of drowsiness, headache and depression. Prolonged use or abuse of barbiturates may induce irritability, confusion and a host of neurological symptoms. Hallucinations are most unusual after taking sedatives.

CAVITIES IN BABY TEETH

Mrs. R. W. writes: If cavities develop in baby teeth should they be pulled or filled?

REPLY

Filled unless they are about to fall out. Baby teeth should be preserved if, for no other reason, than to act as space retainers until the permanent set comes in. Consult your dentist. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on dental caries.

WOOL FAT

K. R. writes: Is lanolin the same as cholesterol?

REPLY

Not exactly, in that lanolin (hydrous wool fat) contains cholesterol and other fatty acids.

INFECTED KIDNEY

Y. G. writes: I have an infected kidney. Can I transmit these germs to my family?

REPLY

No. Kidney disease is not contagious.

Man Who Set Airport Fire Sent To Prison

William Phillip Nance, 20, of Santa Rosa, convicted of setting a $250,000 fire at Gnoss Field last October, was sentenced to state prison yesterday by Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court.

Nance had been found guilty by a jury of arson and burglary in connection with the fire at the Marin County Airport north of Novato. The jury also found him to have been sane at the time of the crimes.

The fire, last Oct. 25, destroyed the Spectrum Air building and the Blue Yonder coffee shop, as well as a $150,000 executive aircraft leased by Willaim Penn Patrick, San Rafael cosmetics manufacturer. Patrick had loaned the plane to former Sen. George Murphy for his unsuccessful reelection campaign.

Prison Escapees Set For Trial

Trial has been set for the week of May 24 in Marin Superior Court for Gary Edward Atwood, 34, and Eugene P. Waymire, 33, charged in connection with an escape from San Quentin Prison Feb. 13.

They have pleaded innocent to charges of escape, car theft, burglary and assault with a deadly weapon.

The pair was captured near Indian Valley Golf Club outside Novato Feb. 14 after they allegedly burglarized and stole a truck from a San Rafael pool supply firm.

Wheel Stops At Ohio For Blossom Queen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The spinning wheel of states stopped at Ohio and Christina Ann Schuler, 19, was chosen 1971 Cherry Blossom Queen.

Miss Schuler, a radio and television major at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., will reign over the remaining two days of Cherry Blossom festivities. The Bellefontaine, Ohio, brunette will be officially crwoned today after a parade down historic Constitution Avenue.

Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton spun the Wheel of States Friday night in a traditional ceremony at the annual Cherry Blossom ball, which marks the start of the Washington spring social season.

Students Offer Rides For Needy

A group of San Rafael High School students will sponsor a horse and donkey ride tomorrow outside Point Reyes Station to benefit a needy family in Texas.

Rides will be given from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the area next to the West Marin Veterinary Center to raise money for the H.V. Holt Foundation. The group opened an account yesterday at Crocker Citizens Bank where donations can be made.

The family has two children that need to use a kidney machine and the high school group hopes to ease the heavy cost of the hospital bill by raising part of the money.

Kidney Group Needs Helpers

Volunteers are needed by the Marin County Chapter of the Kidney Foundation of Northern California, according to chapter officers.

Those interested may call Mrs. Roger Erickson, Mrs. H.S. Hall or Mrs. Lester Young.

The next meeting of the chapter, whose projects include purchase of equipment for kidney disease sufferers, will be at 7:30 p.m. April 12 at the San Rafael Improvement Club, Fifth Avenue and H Street.

Ambrosini Named Tomales Postmaster

Alice E. Ambrosini, who has been acting as postmaster for the Tomales Post Office, was officially named to the post yesterday by the Post Office Department.

Mrs. Ambrosini has worked for the post office for about 10 years. She is a Republican.

Crash Brings Arrest For Pot

A 22-year-old San Rafael woman was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday for investigation of possessing marijuana after she was involved in a minor accident southbound on Highway 101, south of Paradise Drive.

The California Highway Patrol reported Kathleen Adams, of 87 Marinita Avenue, was arrested about 12:15 a.m.

She was a passenger in a car involved in the accident and an officer noticed a plastic bag containing suspected marijuana in her open handbag, the highway patrol reported.

Miss Adams was released on her own recognizance, to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Deputies Arrest Naked Runner

A 17-year-old youth, reported running nude through a Nicasio field, was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall Wednesday, Marin County Sheriff's Office reported yesterday.

Deputies said Scott Allan Martin, of no known address, was booked on suspicion of disturbing the peace and possessing Marijuana and dangerous drugs.

He was apprehended in a field near Halleck Creek Road, deputies said. His van, parked nearby, was found to contain suspected marijuana and various pills and powders, according to deputies.

Wheel Stops At Ohio For Blossom Queen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The spinning wheel of states stopped at Ohio and Christina Ann Schuler, 19, was chosen 1971 Cherry Blossom Queen.

Miss Schuler, a radio and television major at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., will reign over the remaining two days of Cherry Blossom festivities. The Bellefontaine, Ohio, brunette will be officially crwoned today after a parade down historic Constitution Avenue.

Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton spun the Wheel of States Friday night in a traditional ceremony at the annual Cherry Blossom ball, which marks the start of the Washington spring social season.

Students Offer Rides For Needy

A group of San Rafael High School students will sponsor a horse and donkey ride tomorrow outside Point Reyes Station to benefit a needy family in Texas.

Rides will be given from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the area next to the West Marin Veterinary Center to raise money for the H.V. Holt Foundation. The group opened an account yesterday at Crocker Citizens Bank where donations can be made.

The family has two children that need to use a kidney machine and the high school group hopes to ease the heavy cost of the hospital bill by raising part of the money.

Kidney Group Needs Helpers

Volunteers are needed by the Marin County Chapter of the Kidney Foundation of Northern California, according to chapter officers.

Those interested may call Mrs. Roger Erickson, Mrs. H.S. Hall or Mrs. Lester Young.

The next meeting of the chapter, whose projects include purchase of equipment for kidney disease sufferers, will be at 7:30 p.m. April 12 at the San Rafael Improvement Club, Fifth Avenue and H Street.

Ambrosini Named Tomales Postmaster

Alice E. Ambrosini, who has been acting as postmaster for the Tomales Post Office, was officially named to the post yesterday by the Post Office Department.

Mrs. Ambrosini has worked for the post office for about 10 years. She is a Republican.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

South Can Be Polite And Still Pull Off Big Victory

A famous baseball player once said. "Nice guys finish last." This isn't quite true of bridge players. You can be pleasant and polite and finish 19th or thereabouts. If this is satisfactory, polish up your manners rather than your bridge game.

QUEEN WITH ACE

West opened the seven of hearts, and South captured the queen with the ace. He entered dummy with the king of clubs to try the spade finesse, losing to the king.

West led his other heart to the king, and East returned a diamond. Down one.

South was so polite he almost bowed from the waist. "A very pretty opening lead," South burbled. "Nobody can win against such accurate defense."

It was enough to make a bridge player sick. South would have made his contract if he had thought more about the hand and less about fancy compliments.

COMMUNICATIONS

The first trick made the heart position quite clear. If East had the king of spades in addition to his good heart suit he would have bid the hearts. In short, South should have seen exactly what was coming.

After winning the first trick, South should take the two black aces, next the king of clubs; and then should lead dummy's ten of clubs. When East is unable to cover the ten of clubs, South discards the ten of hearts.

DIAMOND ACTION

If West tries to get out with a diamond, South wins a trick with the king. If West leads a heart, South ruffs the king of hearts and gets to dummy with a trump to discard two diamonds on the jack and nine of hearts.

This efficient line of play would give East and West the chance to display their politeness. And South could show what a polite winner he could be.

Aviation Group At Center Again

Marin aviation commissioners will begin meeting again in the supervisors' chambers of the Civic Center.

Chairman Herbert M. Hanson announced that the next meeting will be held at 8 p.m. next Tuesday at the Civic Center. During the five-month ban on night meetings at the Civic Center, the aviation commissioners met at Gnoss Field and in the Marin Municipal Water District office in Corte Madera.

Next Tuesday, commissioner David B. Vail will report on improvements being planned for the county heliport next to Richardson Bay Bridge. SFO Helicopters wants improvements made in the parking area and entrance road before the county starts collecting higher fees from SFO.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, April 3, the 93rd day of 1971.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Aries.

American astronaut Virgil Grissom was born April 3, 1926.

On this day in history:

In 1860 the Pony Express postal service began with riders leaving St. Joseph, Mo., and Sacramento, Calif., at the same time.

In 1865 the Union Army occupied Richmond, Va., onetime capital of the Confederacy.

In 1946 Gen. Masaharu Homma of Japan, who ordered the "death march" of Americans captured in Bataan, was executed for war crimes.

In 1962 the federal government ordered New Orleans to integrate the first six grades of public schools.

A thought for today: British lecturer John Collins said, "Mistrust a subordinate who never finds fault with his superior."

Inmates Demand Minimum Wage

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (UPI)--Nearly 200 inmates at the California Men's Colony were confined to their cells Thursday after they went on strike demanding a $1.65 an hour minimum wage for prison work.

Officials said the prisoners, described as "mostly black militants," also demanded a new law library with unlimited privileges and legal counsel at prison disciplinary hearings.

"Everything they want is out of our jurisdiction," a prison spokesman said.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Tomorrow To Mark The Start Of Easter Week

Tomorrow begins one of the most important weeks in Christendom, concluding next Sunday with Easter.

Many churches will bless and distribute palms during services tomorrow — symbolic of Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

A feature of tomorrow's 11 a.m. Palm Sunday service at the First Baptist Church of San Anselmo will be the appearance of the Real Life Youth Chorale of the First Baptist Church of Lancaster.

The 55-voice high school choir is presently on a seven-day spring vacation tour. The group will present a program of sacred classics, gospel songs and golf songs.

At Church of All Faiths in Corte Madera, the Men's Choir, a two-year-old organization, will present special music at the 10:30 a.m. service.

Also many churches will join together on Good Friday to share the experience of the Cross. One of these services will be held at the Christian Church, 50 Los Ranchitos Road in San Rafael, beginning at 12:45 p.m.

Theme of service, sponsored by four churches in the area, will be "Thoughts on the Cross." Speakers will be pastors of the sponsoring churches — Rev. Sam Walberg, Evangelical Free Church; Rev. Warren Conrad, Valley Baptist Church; Rev. Charles Boman, Christian Church, and Rev. Bill Brown, Calvary Baptist Church.

Good Friday meditations will be held at 1 p.m. at Peace Lutheran Church, Tennessee Valley Road, Mill Valley. An open invitation has been extended by the church's pastor, Rev. Kenneth W. Behnken, who will lead the service.

Following is a partial listing of Easter Week Services at churches in Marin.

First Presbyterian Church, Novato — Easter; services at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. with Rev. D. M. Rayment speaking on "New Men on the March."

St. Francis Episcopal Church, Novato — Palm Sunday: Holy Eucharist with blessing of the palms, 8 and 10 a.m.; Maundy Thursday; Holy Eucharist, 10 a.m. and Holy Eucharist and stripping of the altar, 7 p.m.; Good Friday: morning prayer and ante-communion, 10 a.m. with joint three-hour service beginning at noon at Episcopal Church in Ignacio; evening prayer and stations of the cross, 8 p.m.; Holy Saturday: morning prayer and ante-communion, 10 a.m. and blessing of the Paschal candle and Holy Baptism, 7 p.m.; Easter: sunrise eucharist, 6 a.m.; Holy Eucharist, 8 a.m.; choral eucharist and sermon, 9:15 and 11 a.m.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, San Rafael — Palm Sunday: blessing of the palms and Holy Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: Holy Eucharist and stripping of the altar; Good Friday: noon to 3 p.m. service; Easter Even: lighting of the Paschal candle and Holy Baptism, 4 p.m.; Easter: services at 7, 9 and 11 a.m.

Lutheran Church of the Resurrection, San Rafael — Good Friday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Easter: Holy Communion and special choral music, 9:45 a.m.

Trinity Lutheran Church, San Rafael — Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Good Friday: services beginning at 1 p.m. with Holy Communion; Easter: services at 8:45 and 11 a.m. with Holy Communion and special choral music.

Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur — Palm Sunday: services at 9:30 and 11 a.m. with Rev. William N. Johnson speaking on "A Captive World"; Maundy Thursday: a contemporary service, concluding with a Tenebrae, 8 p.m.; Good Friday: Rev. Joseph Hughes, pastor of the Church of All Faiths, Corte Madera, will speak on "God's Friday", 1 p.m.; Easter: sunrise service at Church of All Faiths, 6:30 a.m.; regular services at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. with Johnson speaking on "About a Distracting Conservation."

Methodist Church of Mill Valley — Palm Sunday: breakfast, 8:45 a.m. with sanctuary service, 11 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Good Friday, no special service; Easter Sunday: family service, 9:30 a.m. and special Easter celebration, 11 a.m.

Church of All Faiths, Corte Madera — Palm Sunday: special music by the men's choir, 10:45 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: candlelight communion service, 7:30 p.m.; Good Friday: community service, Redwoods Presbyterian Church, 1 p.m.; Easter: community sunrise service with breakfast, 6:30 a.m.; service, 10:30 a.m.

Marin Lutheran Church, Corte Madera — Palm Sunday: services at 8:30 and 11 a.m. with Holy Communion; Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 7:45 p.m.; Good Friday: Vigil at the Cross, 1 p.m. and Holy Communion, 7:45 p.m.; Easter: sunrise youth service, 6 p.m. with breakfast and regular services, 8:30 and 11 a.m.

Holy Innocents' Episcopal Parsh, Corte Madera — Palm Sunday: morning prayer, 7:30 a.m.; Holy Communion with blessing of the palms, 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m.; evensong, 7:30 p.m.; Maundy Thursday: Holy communion, 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m.; Good Friday: Noon with drama of the Cross with D. Gene Dollahite, conductor; Easter Even: Holy Baptism, 3 p.m. and confessions, 4:30 and 7:30 p.m.; Easter: morning prayer, 6 a.m.; sunrise eucharist, 6:30 a.m.; Solemn High Mass, 8 a.m.; children's eucharist, 9:30 a.m.; Solemn High Mass, 11 a.m.; evensong, 7:30 p.m.

Westminister Presbyterian Church, Tiburon — Palm Sunday: services at 9 and 11:15 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Good Friday: no special services with members urged to attend any Marin community service; Easter: services at 8, 9:30 and 11:15 a.m. on "The Celebration of Life."

Sausalito Presbyterian Church — Palm Sunday: service at 10 a.m. feature Faure's "Requiem"; Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 7:30 p.m.; Easter: Services at 8:30 and 10 a.m.

OF GOD AND MAN

What Is The Best Evangelism Type?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

In his last conversation with his disciples, Jesus Christ urged them not to treat their faith as a private treasure but to share it with men of all nations.

Some Christians still take very seriously this final instruction of their Lord. They attach high importance to the task of disseminating the good news of the gospel as far and wide as possible.

Others, however, seem to feel it is no longer necessary, and perhaps not even good manners, to tell non-Christians about Christ. They ask: "Why should we try to cram our religion down the throats of people who already have a religion of their own?"

If the question were valid in that form, it would be unanswerable. But it is loaded with three serious misapprehensions.

The first is the assumption that all or most non-Christians "already have a religion of their own." In point of fact, "there are hundreds of millions of human beings on earth today who are not firmly rooted in any religious faith, and are seeking, with varying degrees of desperation, to find some world view that will make sense of their lives.

The second misapprehension is reflected in the phrase, "our religion." Christianity is not a tribal possession of western white men. It originated among Semites of the Middle East, but was intended from the start to be a universal faith. If its earliest adherents had been as chary of "exporting our religion" as some contemporary Christians are, the inhabitants of Western Europe, and their American descendants, might still be worshipping Zeus, Apollo, Worden or Thor.

The third and worst error concerns the nature of the task which Jesus laid upon his disciples. They were not asked to bully, browbeat or brainwash anyone. They were simply to make known to others the profound change that had taken place in their own lives —and in their attitude toward life — as a result of their encounter with Christ.

Dr. David H. C. Read, minister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York, points out that Jesus strongly condemned the arrogant and high-handed kind of prosletyzing that consists of "grabbing somebody by the throat and shouting, 'Now you look here, I've got the whole truth, and unless you accept my truth you will be condemned by God.'"

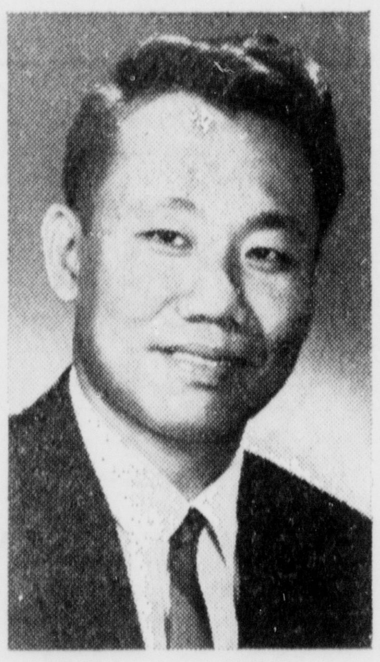
Admitting that some Christians have taken exactly that approach, he says, "It is this kind of religious imperialism that has given evangelism a bad name."

"The true evangelist forswears all attempts at pressure, physical or psychological," Read says. "He is not concerned with enlarging the membership or influence of his own church. He simply knows what Christ has meant to him and wants to share this happy discovery with others."

But a sensitive concern for the religious freedom of others is not the only reason why some Christians have ceased to practice or support evangelism.

A more basic hangup in many cases is lack of conviction that Christ really is "the way, the truth and the life" which all men are seeking.

Those who have personally experienced liberation in Christ are eager to assure others that it's for real. The faith of such first-hand witnesses can be highly contagious. It is the best —and perhaps the only genuine —form of evangelism.



SOLOIST— Rev. Tjoen An Thio, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Mill Valley, will be one of three soloists for John Stainer's "The Crucifixion," by the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary Oratorio Choir at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in John A. Broadus Hall Chapel.

Lutheran Synod Church Rents New Quarters

The Church of the Living Word has rented facilities at the Church in Ignacio, 400 Ignacio Boulevard, for regular Sunday vesper services.

The group, a mission of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, had been meeting at the Bank of Marin in Novato.

The first service in the new quarters will be Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Armin Keibel of Concord will be the speaker.

Services are conducted on a rotational basis by Keibel, Rev. Robert Waldschmidt of Belmont and Rev. Robert Hochmuth and Vicar John Boehringer, both of Santa Clara.

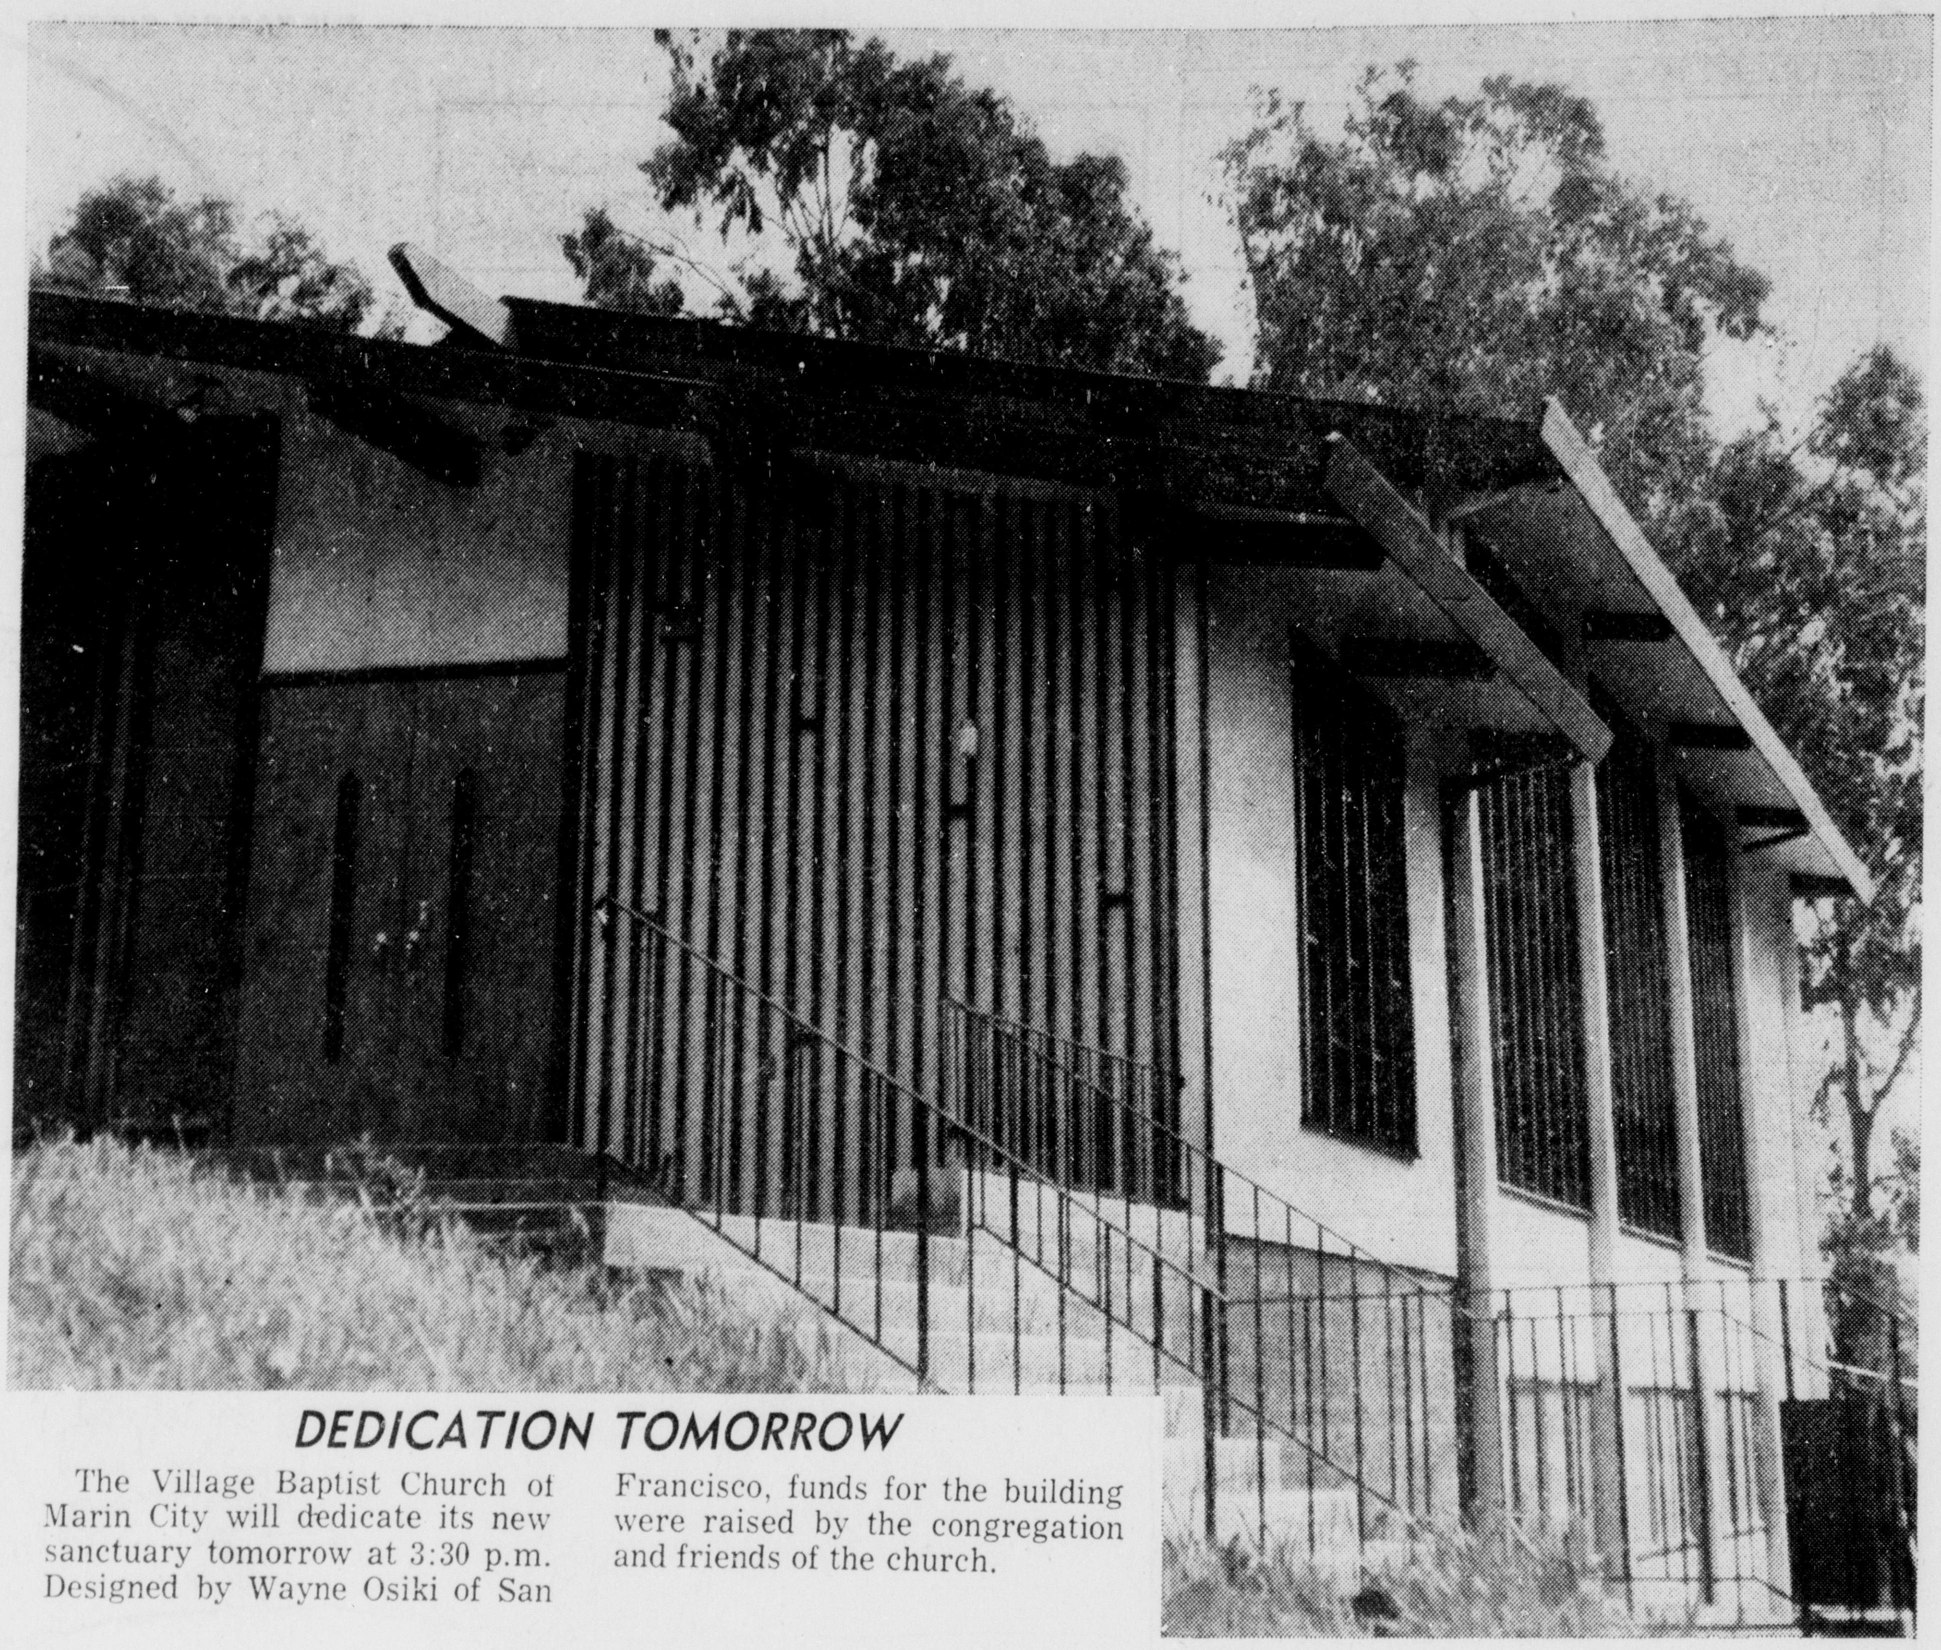
'Seven Last Words' To Be Presented

"The Seven Last Words" by Dubois will be presented at 8 p.m. Good Friday by the chancel choir of the United Methodist Church of Novato.

Soloists will be Mrs. John Davis and Mrs. Harold Wright, sopranos; John Davis and Don Pearce, tenors, and Steven Darling, baritone.

Easter Breakfast

The First Congregational Church, 8 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael, will hold a public pancake breakfast next Sunday — Easter Sunday, between 8:30 and 9:45 a.m.



DEDICATION TOMORROW

The Village Baptist Church of Marin City will dedicate its new sanctuary tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. Designed by Wayne Osiki of San Francisco, funds for the building were raised by the congregation and friends of the church.

Church Packing Up For Indiana Move

ROSEMEAD, Calif. (UPI) — The 300 members of the congregation of the San Gabrien Gospel Temple are going home to Evansville, Ind.

"We've been giving thought to this move to Indiana for nearly two-and-one-half years," Pastor C. J. Mears, 47, said recently.

One church member explained "we've kind of tired of the hustle and bustle," smog and problems at public schools.

However, Mears said neither earthquakes nor divine revelations prompted the move. He said a major reason was to strengthen the gospel assembly movement, which was founded in the Evansville, Ind., area about 55 years ago.

To accomplish the move, members of the congregation are leaving behind jobs, friends and a 500-seat church building constructed by members 10 years ago.

"We're all kind of anxious to get back to a spot of land large enough where you can grow vegetables where there is a slower atmosphere, and where many of our relatives live," one congregation member said. The actual move is expected to begin in two or three months.

Mears said the decision to leave was almost unanimous and was made after weeks of prayer and periodic fasting.

Three years ago some 500 persons from five southern and central California congregations moved to Missouri, Tennessee and Georgia after their pastors saw visions of earthquakes.

Old Testament Course Going; Ends June 16

The College of Marin is offering a new course in the adult education spring quarter entitled "Understanding the Old Testament". The class is meeting Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. in Room 3, Communications Building, beginning March 31st.

Course content is based on the historical and philosophical foundations and present day implications of the Bible, including the Pentateuch, Prophets, Psalms, and Ecclesiastes. These will be explored academically and in depth.

The course is intended as the first of a series designed to broaden public scholarly appreciation of a full range of scriptural writing, according to Dr. Jared B. Sharon, director of community education.

A fee is being charged for the sessions, ending June 16.

The Covered Dish Social—Law Breaker

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Covered dish suppers may be a traditional American social event, but any church or other public organization which holds one in Maryland is breaking the law.

State health officials decided bringing in food from many homes was unsanitary and too difficult to trace when there was a case of food poisoning. Organizations are now urged to have meals prepared in licensed kitchens.

ROBERT L. JONES
Crusade worker

Plans For Crusade To Be Given

Robert L. Jones, advance worker for Billy Graham's summer crusade at the Oakland Coliseum, will speak on plans for the crusade tomorrow at 11 a.m. at the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley, 285 Miller Avenue.

Jones, who has been with the Graham organization since 1968, formerly was a salesman and district manager for the Carnation Company in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland.

Graham's crusade is scheduled for July 23-Aug. 1.

RABBI WILL LECTURE AT DOMINICAN

Dominican College of San Rafael has announced that Rabbi David Davis of Marin's Congregation Rodef Sholom will join the college's Theology Department next year.

According to Lillian Seaver of the school, Davis will be the first rabbi ever to teach at the college during the regular school year.

She said he is scheduled to teach old testament literature and Contemporary Jewish Religious Thought in 1971-72 and An Introduction to Rabbinic Writings and An Introduction to the Dead Sea Scrolls in 1972-73.

Passover Seder Set Next Saturday

Congregation Rodef Sholom will observe the Passover Seder next Saturday at 6:30 p.m. with services in the social hall of the Temple, 117 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

Conducting the services will be Rabbi David Davis. He will be assisted by Mrs. David Krinitsky who will lead the Passover singing.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Tomorrow To Mark The Start Of Easter Week

Tomorrow begins one of the most important weeks in Christendom, concluding next Sunday with Easter.

Many churches will bless and distribute palms during services tomorrow — symbolic of Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

A feature of tomorrow's 11 a.m. Palm Sunday service at the First Baptist Church of San Anselmo will be the appearance of the Real Life Youth Chorale of the First Baptist Church of Lancaster.

The 55-voice high school choir is presently on a seven-day spring vacation tour. The group will present a program of sacred classics, gospel songs and golf songs.

At Church of All Faiths in Corte Madera, the Men's Choir, a two-year-old organization, will present special music at the 10:30 a.m. service.

Also many churches will join together on Good Friday to share the experience of the Cross. One of these services will be held at the Christian Church, 50 Los Ranchitos Road in San Rafael, beginning at 12:45 p.m.

Theme of service, sponsored by four churches in the area, will be "Thoughts on the Cross." Speakers will be pastors of the sponsoring churches — Rev. Sam Walberg, Evangelical Free Church; Rev. Warren Conrad, Valley Baptist Church; Rev. Charles Boman, Christian Church, and Rev. Bill Brown, Calvary Baptist Church.

Good Friday meditations will be held at 1 p.m. at Peace Lutheran Church, Tennessee Valley Road, Mill Valley. An open invitation has been extended by the church's pastor, Rev. Kenneth W. Behnken, who will lead the service.

Following is a partial listing of Easter Week Services at churches in Marin.

First Presbyterian Church, Novato — Easter; services at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. with Rev. D. M. Rayment speaking on "New Men on the March."

St. Francis Episcopal Church, Novato — Palm Sunday: Holy Eucharist with blessing of the palms, 8 and 10 a.m.; Maundy Thursday; Holy Eucharist, 10 a.m. and Holy Eucharist and stripping of the altar, 7 p.m.; Good Friday: morning prayer and ante-communion, 10 a.m. with joint three-hour service beginning at noon at Episcopal Church in Ignacio; evening prayer and stations of the cross, 8 p.m.; Holy Saturday: morning prayer and ante-communion, 10 a.m. and blessing of the Paschal candle and Holy Baptism, 7 p.m.; Easter: sunrise eucharist, 6 a.m.; Holy Eucharist, 8 a.m.; choral eucharist and sermon, 9:15 and 11 a.m.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, San Rafael — Palm Sunday: blessing of the palms and Holy Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: Holy Eucharist and stripping of the altar; Good Friday: noon to 3 p.m. service; Easter Even: lighting of the Paschal candle and Holy Baptism, 4 p.m.; Easter: services at 7, 9 and 11 a.m.

Lutheran Church of the Resurrection, San Rafael — Good Friday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Easter: Holy Communion and special choral music, 9:45 a.m.

Trinity Lutheran Church, San Rafael — Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Good Friday: services beginning at 1 p.m. with Holy Communion; Easter: services at 8:45 and 11 a.m. with Holy Communion and special choral music.

OF GOD AND MAN

What Is The Best Evangelism Type?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

In his last conversation with his disciples, Jesus Christ urged them not to treat their faith as a private treasure but to share it with men of all nations.

Some Christians still take very seriously this final instruction of their Lord. They attach high importance to the task of disseminating the good news of the gospel as far and wide as possible.

Others, however, seem to feel it is no longer necessary, and perhaps not even good manners, to tell non-Christians about Christ. They ask: "Why should we try to cram our religion down the throats of people who already have a religion of their own?"

If the question were valid in that form, it would be unanswerable. But it is loaded with three serious misapprehensions.

The first is the assumption that all or most non-Christians "already have a religion of their own." In point of fact, "there are hundreds of millions of human beings on earth today who are not firmly rooted in any religious faith, and are seeking, with varying degrees of desperation, to find some world view that will make sense of their lives.

The second misapprehension is reflected in the phrase, "our religion." Christianity is not a tribal possession of western white men. It originated among Semites of the Middle East, but was intended from the start to be a universal faith. If its earliest adherents had been as chary of "exporting our religion" as some contemporary Christians are, the inhabitants of Western Europe, and their American descendants, might still be worshipping Zeus, Apollo, Worden or Thor.

The third and worst error concerns the nature of the task which Jesus laid upon his disciples. They were not asked to bully, browbeat or brainwash anyone. They were simply to make known to others the profound change that had taken place in their own lives —and in their attitude toward life — as a result of their encounter with Christ.

Dr. David H. C. Read, minister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York, points out that Jesus strongly condemned the arrogant and high-handed kind of prosletyzing that consists of "grabbing somebody by the throat and shouting, 'Now you look here, I've got the whole truth, and unless you accept my truth you will be condemned by God.'"

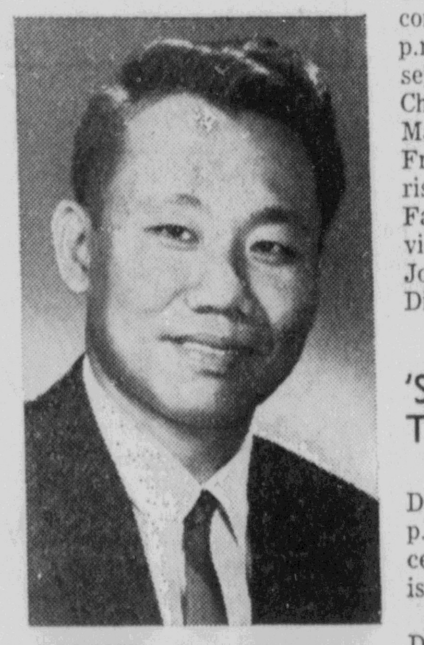
Admitting that some Christians have taken exactly that approach, he says, "It is this kind of religious imperialism that has given evangelism a bad name."

"The true evangelist forswears all attempts at pressure, physical or psychological," Read says. "He is not concerned with enlarging the membership or influence of his own church. He simply knows what Christ has meant to him and wants to share this happy discovery with others."

But a sensitive concern for the religious freedom of others is not the only reason why some Christians have ceased to practice or support evangelism.

A more basic hangup in many cases is lack of conviction that Christ really is "the way, the truth and the life" which all men are seeking.

Those who have personally experienced liberation in Christ are eager to assure others that it's for real. The faith of such first-hand witnesses can be highly contagious. It is the best —and perhaps the only genuine —form of evangelism.



SOLOIST— Rev. Tjoen An Thio, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Mill Valley, will be one of three soloists for John Stainer's "The Crucifixion," by the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary Oratorio Choir at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in John A. Broadus Hall Chapel.

Lutheran Synod Church Rents New Quarters

The Church of the Living Word has rented facilities at the Church in Ignacio, 400 Ignacio Boulevard, for regular Sunday vesper services.

The group, a mission of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, had been meeting at the Bank of Marin in Novato.

The first service in the new quarters will be Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Armin Keibel of Concord will be the speaker.

Services are conducted on a rotational basis by Keibel, Rev. Robert Waldschmidt of Belmont and Rev. Robert Hochmuth and Vicar John Boehringer, both of Santa Clara.

'Seven Last Words' To Be Presented

"The Seven Last Words" by Dubois will be presented at 8 p.m. Good Friday by the chancel choir of the United Methodist Church of Novato.

Soloists will be Mrs. John Davis and Mrs. Harold Wright, sopranos; John Davis and Don Pearce, tenors, and Steven Darling, baritone.

Easter Breakfast

The First Congregational Church, 8 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael, will hold a public pancake breakfast next Sunday — Easter Sunday, between 8:30 and 9:45 a.m.

Church Packing Up For Indiana Move

ROSEMEAD, Calif. (UPI) — The 300 members of the congregation of the San Gabrien Gospel Temple are going home to Evansville, Ind.

"We've been giving thought to this move to Indiana for nearly two-and-one-half years," Pastor C. J. Mears, 47, said recently.

One church member explained "we've kind of tired of the hustle and bustle," smog and problems at public schools.

However, Mears said neither earthquakes nor divine revelations prompted the move. He said a major reason was to strengthen the gospel assembly movement, which was founded in the Evansville, Ind., area about 55 years ago.

To accomplish the move, members of the congregation are leaving behind jobs, friends and a 500-seat church building constructed by members 10 years ago.

"We're all kind of anxious to get back to a spot of land large enough where you can grow vegetables where there is a slower atmosphere, and where many of our relatives live," one congregation member said. The actual move is expected to begin in two or three months.

Mears said the decision to leave was almost unanimous and was made after weeks of prayer and periodic fasting.

Three years ago some 500 persons from five southern and central California congregations moved to Missouri, Tennessee and Georgia after their pastors saw visions of earthquakes.

Old Testament Course Going; Ends June 16

The College of Marin is offering a new course in the adult education spring quarter entitled "Understanding the Old Testament". The class is meeting Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. in Room 3, Communications Building, beginning March 31st.

Course content is based on the historical and philosophical foundations and present day implications of the Bible, including the Pentateuch, Prophets, Psalms, and Ecclesias. These will be explored academically and in depth.

The course is intended as the first of a series designed to broaden public scholarly appreciation of a full range of scriptural writing, according to Dr. Jared B. Sharon, director of community education.

A fee is being charged for the sessions, ending June 16.

The Covered Dish Social—Law Breaker

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Covered dish suppers may be a traditional American social event, but any church or other public organization which holds one in Maryland is breaking the law.

State health officials decided bringing in food from many homes was unsanitary and too difficult to trace when there was a case of food poisoning. Organizations are now urged to have meals prepared in licensed kitchens.

Crusade worker

Plans For Crusade To Be Given

Robert L. Jones, advance worker for Billy Graham's summer crusade at the Oakland Coliseum, will speak on plans for the crusade tomorrow at 11 a.m. at the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley, 285 Miller Avenue.

Jones, who has been with the Graham organization since 1968, formerly was a salesman and district manager for the Carnation Company in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland.

Graham's crusade is scheduled for July 23-Aug. 1.

A 375-FOOT BLAST

Terra Linda Rallies, 5-4

Larry Kerr slammed a 375-foot single that brought Rick Trono home from third base in the bottom of the seventh yesterday to give the Terra Linda High School Trojans a 5-4 victory over San Rafael in a Marin County Athletic League baseball game at Albert Park.

Kerr's blast, his first hit of the day, soared over the head of Bulldog centerfielder Dirk Gansloser and gave the Trojans their second victory in as many MCAL games. It was also the second straight win for pitcher Scott Seefeldt, who retired the final seven of eight men he faced in relief of starter Mike Sabel.

Seefeldt, who shut out Redwood on Tuesday, came on with the bases loaded and two out in the fifth, after San Rafael had tied the socre with a pair of runs on two errors and an infield hit. The big righthander lost the first man he saw, Gansloser, who singled infield to bring the lead run home, but he got Holt Greene on a fly to left and took command thereafter.

Kerr, the MCAL's all-league first baseman, had not hit the ball out of the infield his first three times up, but he unloaded on the first pitch he saw from Mike Spezzi and ruined an otherwise sterling performance by the Bulldog reliever. Spezzi went through the fifth and sixth innings without being touched, and set down seven consecutive batters before the roof caved in.

There were only two extra base hits in the game, Kerr's blow notwithstanding, but they both produced runs. San Rafael rightfielder Holt Greene belted a triple in the top of the fourth to be precise spot where Kerr was to hit his later, and it scored Bruce Howard from first base. In the bottom of that inning, Mike Allen laced one between them in leftcenter and Jerry Seefeldt scored the second run of the inning for the Trojans.

San Rafael's Dave Urquhart was the only player to get two hits. He singled twice, scored once and batted in a run.

Rookies May Create New Fans For Giants

Palm Springs — Horace Stoneham believes the Giants will make a strong attendance comeback at Candlestick Park this season.

"We're going to be all right," said Stoneham. "We'll do a million at the gate."

The president of the Giants, an exceptionally keen analyst of the attitudes of sports fans, wasn't that optimistic two months ago. In fact, at a stockholders meeting Feb. 11 he made a somewhat gloomy report.

At that meeting of the baseball club's stockholders, Stoneham reported a $798,000 operating loss for 1970 and attributed it directly to low attendance at Candlestick, 740,720, down from 873,603 in 1969. He also told stockholders that he didn't foresee any improvement for 1971.

"Real estate has to be our salvation," Stoneham summed up his annual stockholders report, referring to real estate holdings of the club in Casa Grande and between the twin cities of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

What caused Stoneham to change his evaluation of the situation? What facts did he have indicating a change in attitude of bay area sports fans who didn't display enthusiastic interest in the Giants the past two seasons?

Stoneham cited two facts: (1) A sharp increase in ticket sales for opening day in Candlestick April 12; (2) a telephone call he received from an old Giant fan in New York.

"I had no idea he even heard of Stone or Speier but he was as excited about them as we have been," Stoneham said. "I asked him where he had heard about the two rookies and he reported they were getting quite a play in the New York sports pages."

Stoneham didn't belabor the point he made but the logical inference was clear — if Steve Stone and Chris Speier could stimulate the interest of an old Giant fan in New York they at least have created some curiosity among Giant fans beside the Golden Gate.

Stone is the rookie pitcher out of Kent State. Speier is the rookie shortstop out of Alameda. Both have been sensations in Cactus League games this spring.

"We know nothing about this game if we're not right about these young men," said Stoneham.

Nobody would ever accuse Stoneham of not knowing the game of baseball or talented players. However, Stoneham isn't the only baseball man who expects big things from the S&S rookies this year. Every major league scout who has seen them feels the same way about the S&S potential.

Peter Hoffman views the S&S combination differently. Hoffman is ticket manager of the Giants. He sees dollar signs in the S&S gate potential like this: $&$.

Olivares Grabs Bantam Crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)— Ruben Olivares, a slugger who turned boxer, today resumed his reign as bantamweight champion of the world after pounding out a 15-round unanimous decision Friday night over Mexican countryman Chucho Castillo.

Fighting a tactical battle in which he forced Castillo to come to him, Olivares used a jolting left hook to pile up a one-sided margin over the man who lifted his crown last Oct. 16.

But it was Castillo, known as a boxer, who scored the only knockdown of the fight. In the sixth round, he caught Olivares coming in for one of the few times and dropped him with a left. Olivares bounced up at once but took a mandatory eight count.

A crowd of 18,141, which paid $254,155 to witness the bout at the Forum, sensed late in the bout that Castillo was about to lose his title. They chanted Olivares' name.

"I was never worried during the fight," Olivares said with his usual happy smile in his dressing room. "I was completely confident."

It was the third title meeting for Castillo and Olivares. In their first fight, April 18, 1970, Castillo also posted a 15-round decision.

In their October meeting, Olivares suffered a cut left eye in the first round and the fight was halted in the 14th by excessive bleeding.

"We planned to fight Castillo at long range, not because we feared him, but Olivares didn't want to risk another eye cut," said manager Arturo Hernandez.

Castillo received $80,000 for his first title defense while Olivares, who had the big end of the purse in their first two meetings, settled for a challenger's cut of $30,000.

GREENSBORO GOLF TOURNEY

Barber, Brown Share Lead

GREENSBORO, N. C. (UPI) —Pete Brown gazed forlonly at the open door. "Now that I've shot a 69 and am ahead, look at it rain."

A short time later, Miller Barber trudged in with a 70 to tie Brown for the lead and the icy downpour continued.

It rained hard all afternoon, cloaking Sedgefield Country Club in a wintry gloom but the round was completed and no one could match them. Brown and Barber saw their five-under-par 137s stand up for the second round lead of the Greater Greensboro Open as challenger after challenger fell back on the soggy greens.

But the co-leaders held only a one-stroke advantage over Jerry Hard and Terry Dill going into today's third round. Hard shot a three-under-par 67 Friday and Dill chalked up a 68.

Ten others were at 139, including Lee Trevino and Bob Charles, who shared the first round lead with Barber. Playing at the height of the storm, Trevino and Charles each had one-over-par 72s. Also at 139 were Australian Bruce Crampton, U. S. Open champion Tony Jacklin, who got one eagle and just missed a second for a 69 Friday, and rookie pro Brian "Bud" Allin, whose seven-under-par 64 was the tournament's best round.

Art Wall, Julius Boros and Dave Stockton were among the group at 141 and defending champion Gary Player was at 145. Billy Casper, who defends his Masters title next week, barely made the cut with a 146, four over par and nine shots off the pace.

Jack Lewis, the former amateur star, trailed the first round leaders by only a single shot but failed to make the cut when he took a 10 on the par 5 ninth hole—including a two-stroke penalty for hitting a moving ball—and wound up with an 83-151.

Despite the deluge, 38 golfers broke par.

Brown, who hasn't won since last year's San Diego Open, had an erratic round. He sank six birdie putts, including two 15-footers, but he also was saddled with four bogeys.

Rancho Cotate Downs Sonoma

Shortstop Ron Sproat singled home two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning yesterday to give the Rancho Cotate High School Cougars an 8-7 North Bay II League baseball victory over Sonoma High at Rohnert Park.

The victory was the second straight for the Cougars in league play. They play starting today in the Healdsburgh Invitational Easter Tournament.

Explosive Novato Rally Defeats San Marin, 9-3

Judnick's Bat Leads The Way

The explosive nature of the Novato High School Hornets was vented yesterday by a seven run rally in the sixth inning that carried them from behind to a 9-3 win over San Marin High in a baseball game between crosstown rivals in Novato.

The Hornets staked the Mustangs to a three run lead in the fifth before beginning the seige that led to their second straight Marin County Athletic League victory. San Marin now has a loss to go with a tie against Marin Catholic on Tuesday.

Novato cranked out 11 hits, three by leftfielder Dave Judnick and six of them in the fateful sixth inning, and Hornet pitcher Jeff deRecat held San Marin to just four hits while going the distance for the win. DeRecat was wild, walking seven, but it didn't hurt him much, and he had plenty of energy left at the end.

San Marin financed its three run rally with two hits — by Rick Jensen and Jim Thompson — a pair of walks and an error. The Hornets, during their rampage, just plain cracked the ball. The crushing blow was a bases-loaded and bases-clearing double by John Kidder. It was his only hit of the day, but he finished with four runs batted in.

Judnick had opened the sixth with a double and was singled home by Dennis Stanley, who in turn was singled home by Art Herrnberger. Kidder scored after his double on a single by Bill Busher, and Busher scored when Judnick came up for his second time in the inning and hit a sacrifice fly.

All the Hornets' runs were earned and came off San Marin starter Greg Mazeres. He hasn't seen a great deal of work this spring, and consequently became tired in the late going, after looking good through the fourth inning.

Drake Wins A Thriller Over Tam

The fortunes of Drake High School's baseball team fluctuated like a risky stock yesterday until the final inning, when the Pirates came up with two runs and defeated the Tamalpais High Indians, 8-6 in a Marin County Athletic League game at Mill Valley.

John Billings, who started the game on the mound and finished in the outfield, redeemed the Pirates by scoring the winning run after Tam had swept away a four run Drake lead the previous inning. The victory evened Drake's MCAL won-lost record at 1-1, and dropped the Indians to 0-2.

Drake began with a bang in the fourth inning, scoring five times off Indian ace Mike Johnson. Billings, who began the winning rally with a single, started that inning with a walk, moved to second on a single by Al Curtiss, and scored along

Marathon: Redwood Outlasts Marin '9'

The Redwood High School Giants parlayed a leadoff double by Scott Berry and some sloppy fielding by Marin Catholic into the run that broke a 1-1 tie in the top of the 11th inning last night and led them to a 3-1 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory at Albert Park in San Rafael.

The outcome, which evened Redwood's MCAL record at a win and a loss, spoiled a monumental performance by Wildcat righthander Mickey Simmons, who went all the way, allowed only four hits, and struck out 12. Coming on the heels of Tuesday's 12-inning, scoreless tie with San Marin, when Tom Olson went the distance for Marin and struck out 19, the Kentfield team's pitching staff may well wonder if maybe the rest of the team is conspiring against them. After all, one run in 23 innings isn't exactly offensive fireworks.

The victory went to big John Moresco, who pitched the last three innings, albeit not without some tense moments. In the ninth he found himself facing Olson, one of the better hitters in the league, with two outs and the bases loaded. He missed with two pitches before firing a strike, but then threw two more strikes and was out of trouble.

Moresco's relief job, good as it was, didn't outshine the work of starter Gene Frey, a sophomore, who went the first eight. He struck out seven and, except for the lone run off him, didn't seem much bothered by Marin batters. He retired because he was tired, not because he was in trouble.

Berry, hitless in three at bats before the 11th, lined his double up the alley in right center. The next batter, sophomore Darrell Edralin, hit back to Simmons, who, hastily trying for Berry at third, threw the ball into the leftfield corner, and the winning run scooted home.

A little unneeded insurance was added subsequently when Bob Brown scored on a passed ball. Moresco set the Wildcats

Stoneham didn't belabor the point he made but the logical inference was clear — if Steve Stone and Chris Speier could stimulate the interest of an old Giant fan in New York they at least have created some curiosity among Giant fans beside the Golden Gate.

Stone is the rookie pitcher out of Kent State. Speier is the rookie shortstop out of Alameda. Both have been sensations in Cactus League games this spring.

"We know nothing about this game if we're not right about these young men," said Stoneham.

Nobody would ever accuse Stoneham of not knowing the game of baseball or talented players. However, Stoneham isn't the only baseball man who expects big things from the S&S rookies this year. Every major league scout who has seen them feels the same way about the S&S potential.

Peter Hoffman views the S&S combination differently. Hoffman is ticket manager of the Giants. He sees dollar signs in the S&S gate potential like this: $&$.

Olivares Grabs Bantam Crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)—Ruben Olivares, a slugger who turned boxer, today resumed his reign as bantamweight champion of the world after pounding out a 15-round unanimous decision Friday night over Mexican countryman Chucho Castillo.

Fighting a tactical battle in which he forced Castillo to come to him, Olivares used a jolting left hook to pile up a one-sided margin over the man who lifted his crown last Oct. 16.

But it was Castillo, known as a boxer, who scored the only knockdown of the fight. In the sixth round, he caught Olivares coming in for one of the few times and dropped him with a left. Olivares bounced up at once but took a mandatory eight count.

A crowd of 18,141, which paid $254,155 to witness the bout at the Forum, sensed late in the bout that Castillo was about to lose his title. They chanted Olivares' name.

"I was never worried during the fight," Olivares said with his usual happy smile in his dressing room. "I was completely confident."

It was the third title meeting for Castillo and Olivares. In their first fight, April 18, 1970, Castillo also posted a 15-round decision.

In their October meeting, Olivares suffered a cut left eye in the first round and the fight was halted in the 14th by excessive bleeding.

"We planned to fight Castillo at long range, not because we feared him, but Olivares didn't want to risk another eye cut," said manager Arturo Hernandez.

Castillo received $80,000 for his first title defense while Olivares, who had the big end of the purse in their first two meetings, settled for a challenger's cut of $30,000.

Barber, Brown Share Lead

GREENSBORO, N. C. (UPI)—Pete Brown gazed forlonly at the open door. "Now that I've shot a 69 and am ahead, look at it rain."

A short time later, Miller Barber trudged in with a 70 to tie Brown for the lead and the icy downpour continued.

It rained hard all afternoon, cloaking Sedgefield Country Club in a wintry gloom but the round was completed and no one could match them. Brown and Barber saw their five-under-par 137s stand up for the second round lead of the Greater Greensboro Open as challenger after challenger fell back on the soggy greens.

But the co-leaders held only a one-stroke advantage over Jerry Hard and Terry Dill going into today's third round. Hard shot a three-under-par 67 Friday and Dill chalked up a 68.

Ten others were at 139, including Lee Trevino and Bob Charles, who shared the first round lead with Barber. Playing at the height of the storm, Trevino and Charles each had one-over-par 72s. Also at 139 were Australian Bruce Crampton, U. S. Open champion Tony Jacklin, who got one eagle and just missed a second for a 69 Friday, and rookie pro Brian "Bud" Allin, whose seven-under-par 64 was the tournament's best round.

Art Wall, Julius Boros and Dave Stockton were among the group at 141 and defending champion Gary Player was at 145. Billy Casper, who defends his Masters title next week, barely made the cut with a 146, four over par and nine shots off the pace.

Jack Lewis, the former amateur star, trailed the first round leaders by only a single shot but failed to make the cut when he took a 10 on the par 5 ninth hole—including a two-stroke penalty for hitting a moving ball—and wound up with an 83-151.

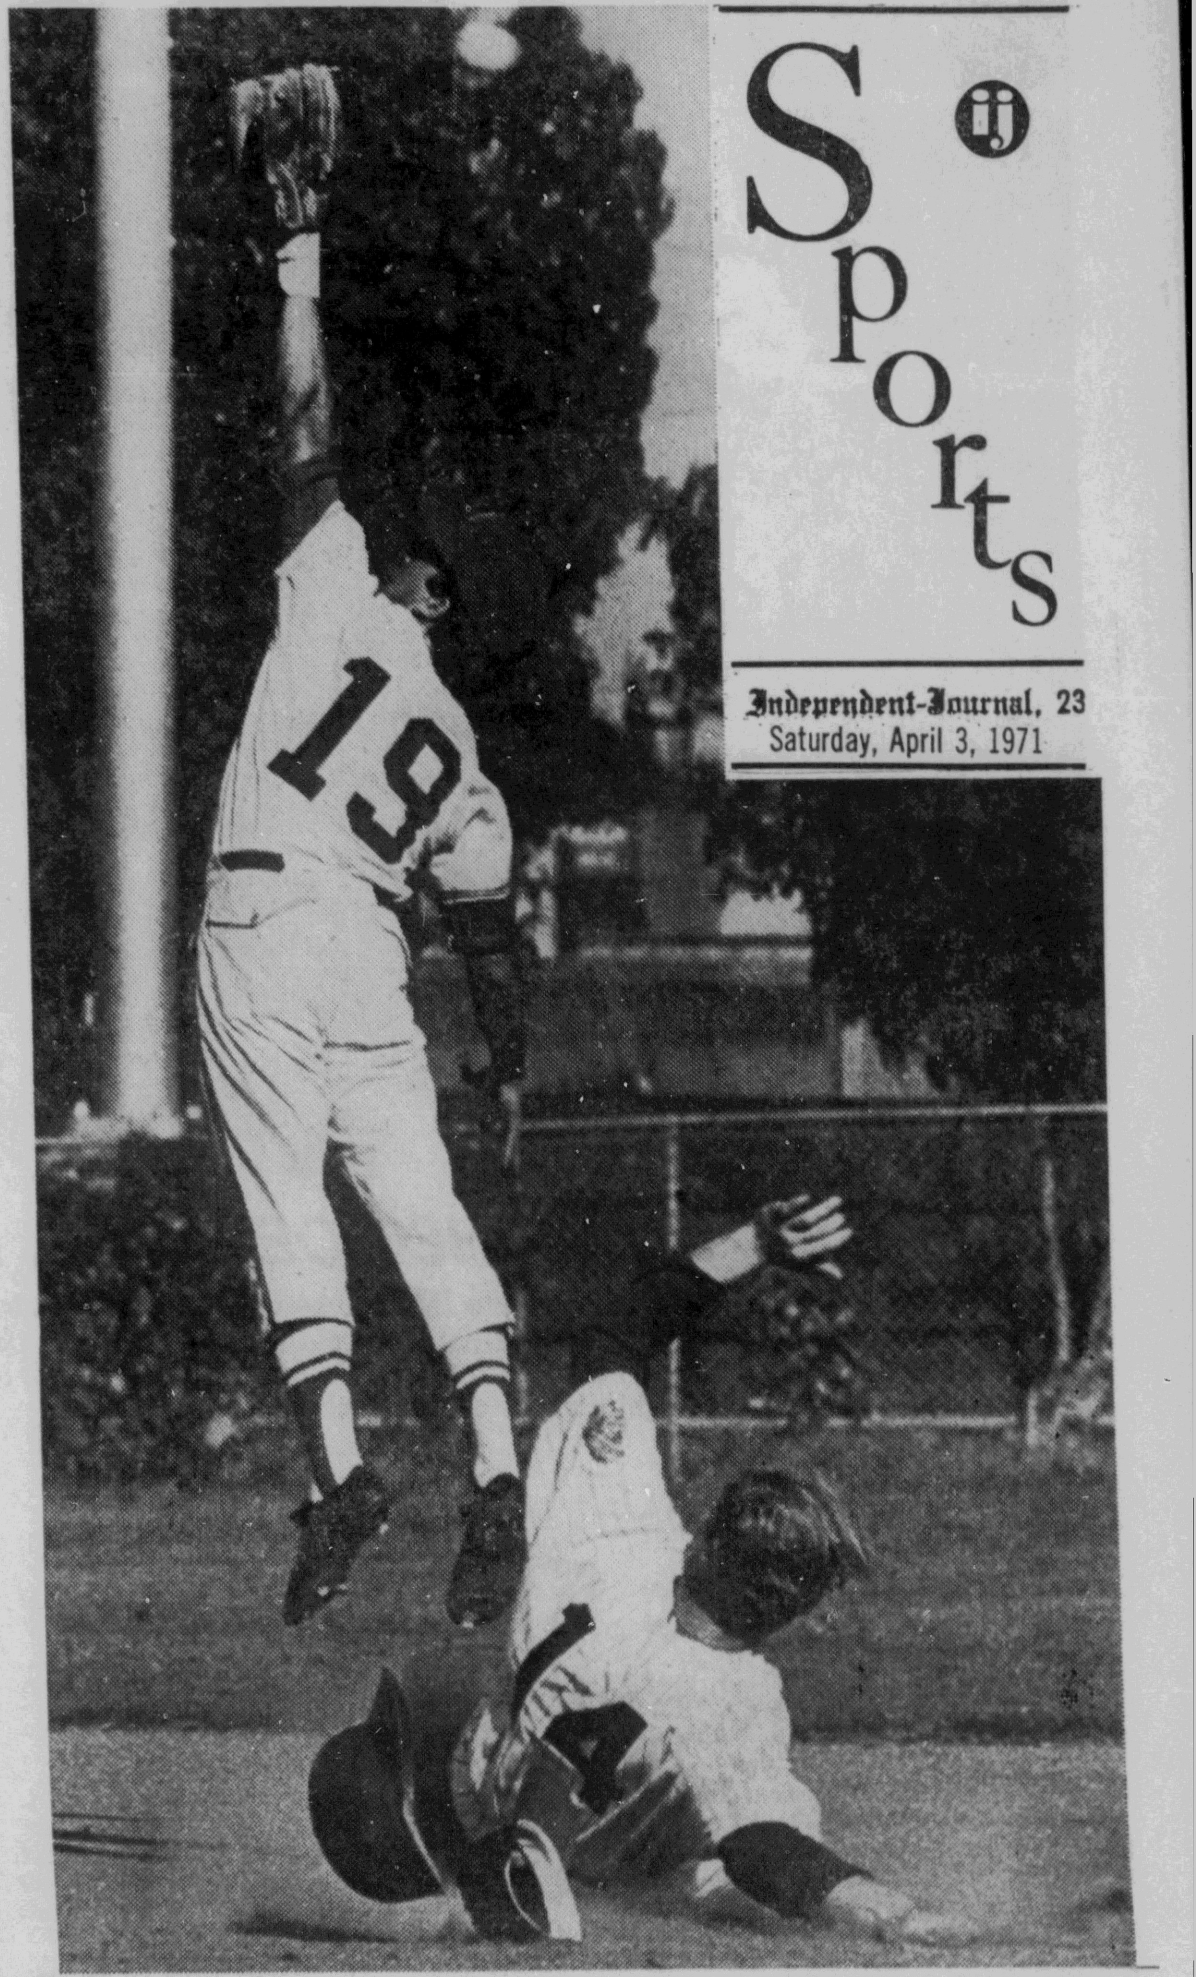
Despite the deluge, 38 golfers broke par.

Brown, who hasn't won since last year's San Diego Open, had an erratic round. He sank six birdie putts, including two 15-footers, but he also was saddled with four bogeys.

Rancho Cotate Downs Sonoma

Shortstop Ron Sproat singled home two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning yesterday to give the Rancho Cotate High School Cougars an 8-7 North Bay II League baseball victory over Sonoma High at Rohnert Park.

The victory was the second straight for the Cougars in league play. They play starting today in the Healdsburgh Invitational Easter Tournament.



HE'S IN THERE — Larry Kerr of Terra Linda High slid safely into second base with a steal while San Rafael shortstop Dave Urquhart leaped for a high throw in the first inning yesterday afternoon. The ball went into short centerfield, but Kerr didn't go to third.

Drake Wins A Thriller Over Tam

The fortunes of Drake High School's baseball team fluctuated like a risky stock yesterday until the final inning, when the Pirates came up with two runs and defeated the Tamalpais High Indians, 8-6 in a Marin County Athletic League game at Mill Valley.

John Billings, who started the game on the mound and finished in the outfield, redeemed the Pirates by scoring the winning run after Tam had swept away a four run Drake lead the previous inning. The victory evened Drake's MCAL won-lost record at 1-1, and dropped the Indians to 0-2.

Drake began with a bang in the fourth inning, scoring five times off Indian ace Mike Johnson. Billings, who began the winning rally with a single, started that inning with a walk, moved to second on a single by Al Curtiss, and scored along

Marathon: Redwood Outlasts Marin '9'

The Redwood High School Giants parlayed a leadoff double by Scott Berry and some sloppy fielding by Marin Catholic into the run that broke a 1-1 tie in the top of the 11th inning last night and led them to a 3-1 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory at Albert Park in San Rafael.

The outcome, which evened Redwood's MCAL record at a win and a loss, spoiled a monumental performance by Wildcat righthander Mickey Simmons, who went all the way, allowed only four hits, and struck out 12. Coming on the heels of Tuesday's 12-inning, scoreless tie with San Marin, when Tom Olson went the distance for Marin and struck out 19, the Kentfield team's pitching staff may well wonder if maybe the rest of the team is conspiring against them. After all, one run in 23 innings isn't exactly offensive fireworks.

The victory went to big John Moresco, who pitched the last three innings, albeit not without some tense moments. In the ninth he found himself facing Olson, one of the better hitters in the league, with two outs and the bases loaded. He missed with two pitches before firing a strike, but then threw two more strikes and was out of trouble.

Moresco's relief job, good as it was, didn't outshine the work of starter Gene Frey, a sophomore, who went the first eight. He struck out seven and, except for the lone run off him, didn't seem much bothered by Marin batters. He retired because he was tired, not because he was in trouble.

Berry, hitless in three at bats before the 11th, lined his double up the alley in right center. The next batter, sophomore Darrell Edralin, hit back to Simmons, who, hastily trying for Berry at third, threw the ball into the leftfield corner, and the winning run scooted home.

A little unneeded insurance was added subsequently when Bob Brown scored on a passed ball. Moresco set the Wildcats

UCLA Ace Wicks Signs: $2 Million?

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—"Yes, it simply was a matter of dollars and cents," said UCLA's Sidney Wicks, the big man with the soft voice and now large wallet following his signing of a five-year contract with the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association.

"I really didn't have much preference one way or the other with regard to the NBA or the American Basketball Association," said Wicks at the formal Friday afternoon news conference here to announce he is "officially now a Trail Blazer."

Texas of the ABA, he said, made a final offer, and Portland made a final offer.

"The Portland offer was the best for me, and I took it," he said.

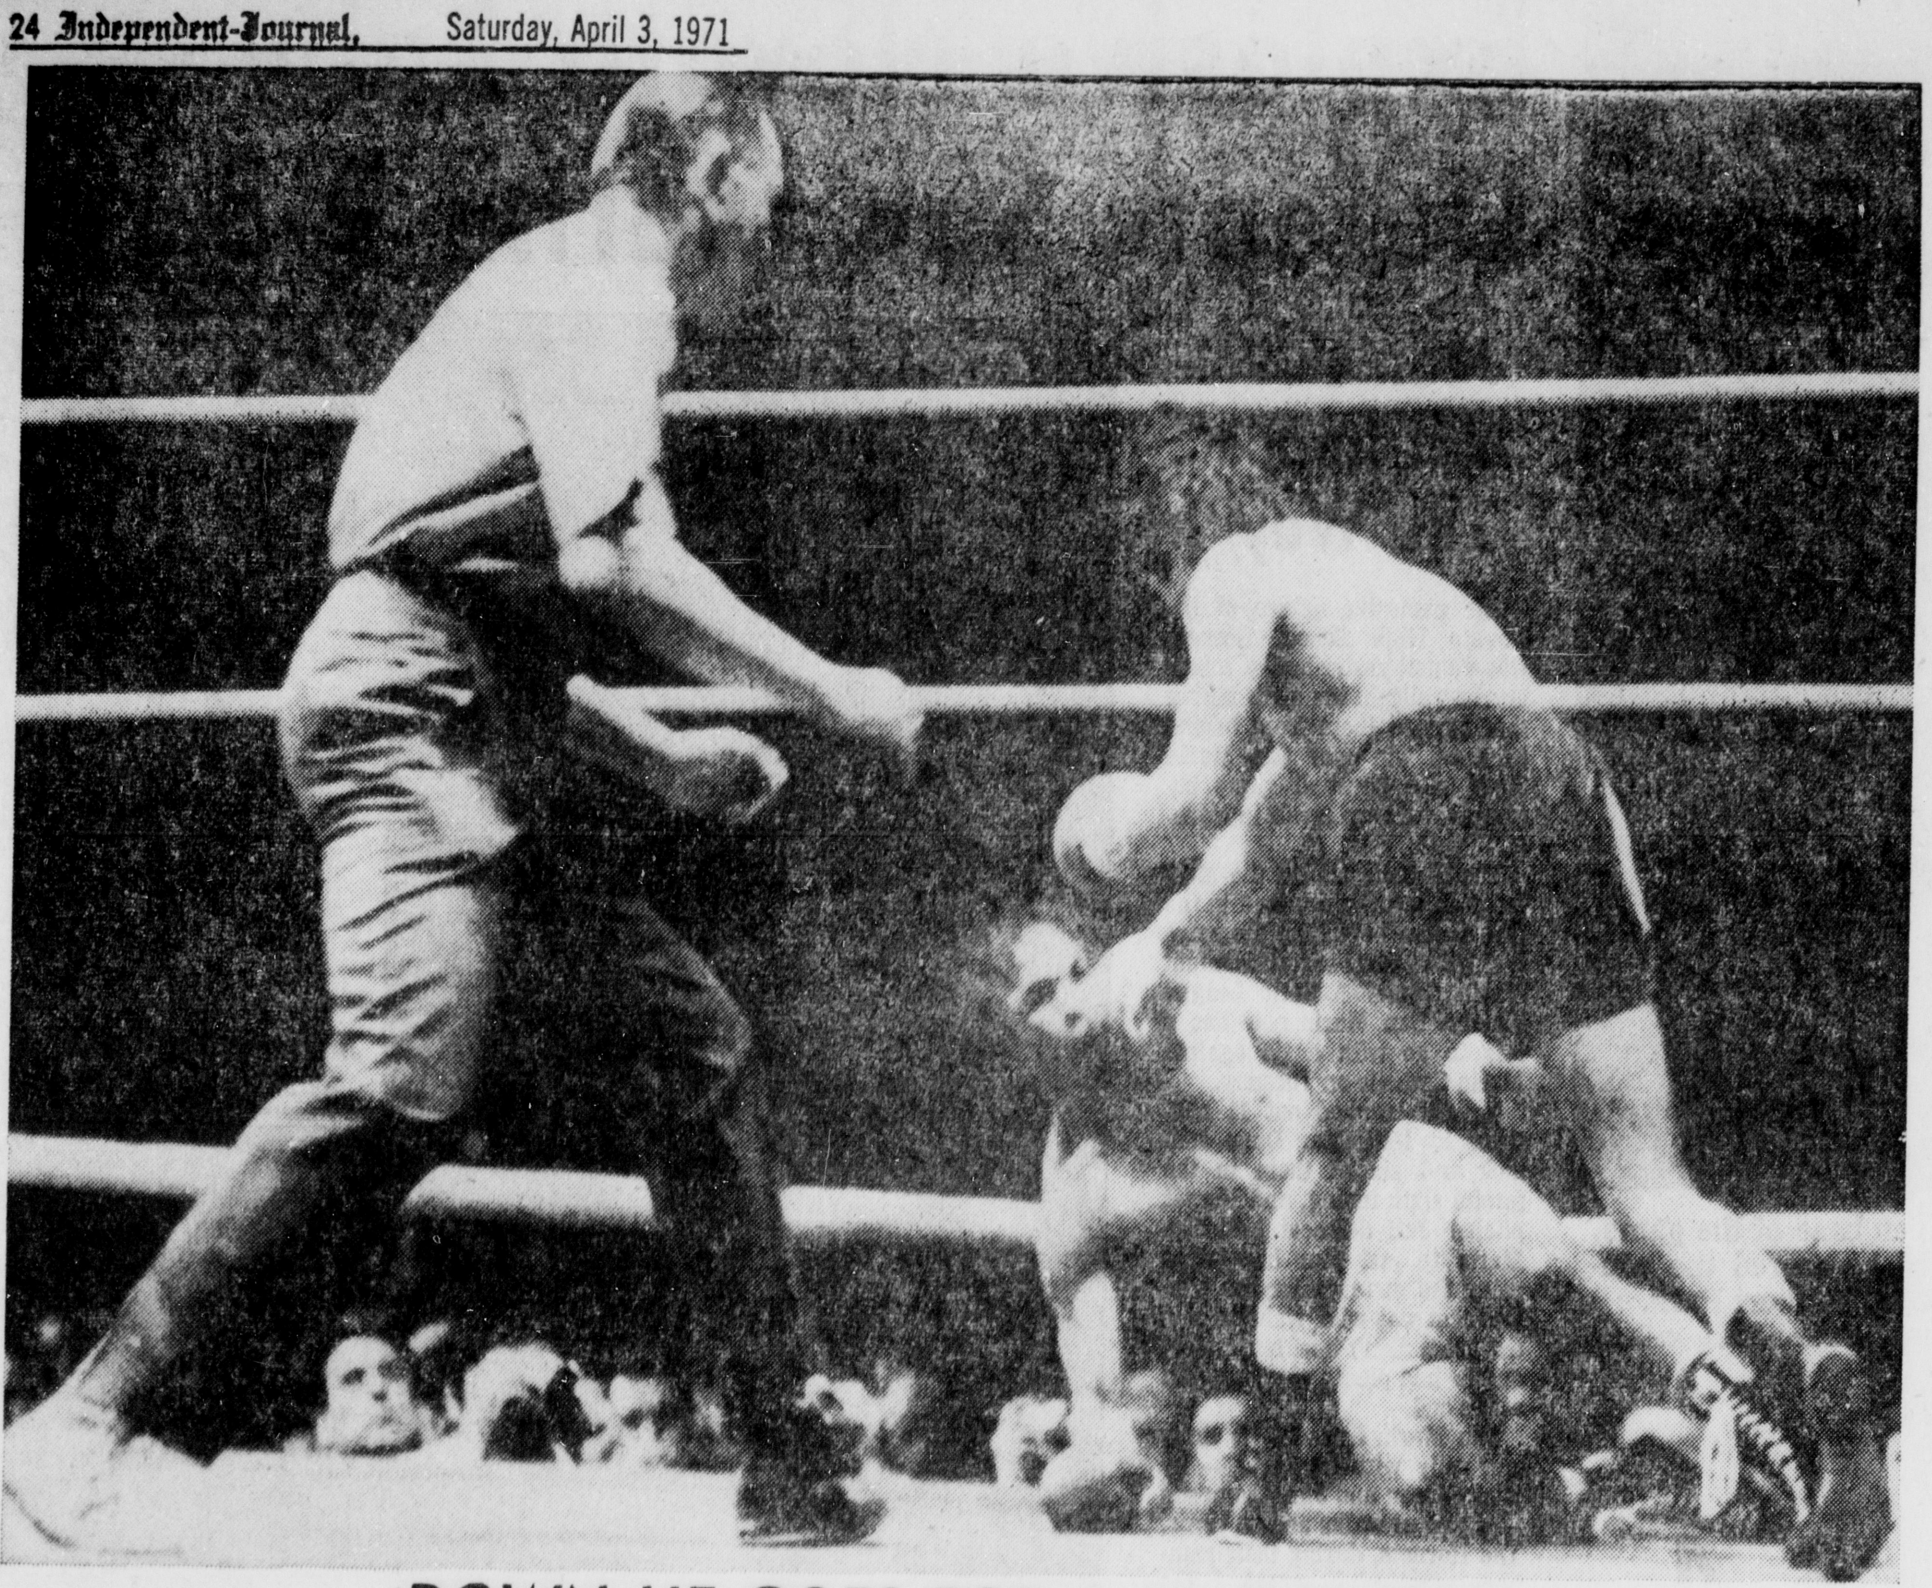
Wicks followed the advice of Sam Gilbert, his agent and Los Angeles businessman and UCLA alum who helped Lew Alcindor with his negotiations at Milwaukee.

Portland general manager Harry Glickman said of the Wicks' signing, "He has received as good advice from Sam Gilbert as any player ever to come into professional basketball."

Terms of the Portland deal with Wicks were not revealed, but better estimates indicate Portland put $1.5 to $2 million in its package deal with the Bruin superstar.

Portland, in signing Wicks the same week he was drafted, preserved some prestige for the NBA, which is in a signing battle with the ABA. The newer league already has signed Artis Gilmore, Howard Porter, and Jim McDaniels from this year's crop of college stars. The NBA has landed Wicks and Ken Durrett from LaSalle thus far.

Wicks said he was looking forward to playing for Roland Todd, who tried to recruit Wicks for University of Nevada-Las Vegas when Wicks finished at Santa Monica City College. But Wicks went to UCLA instead to help continue Bruin dominance of college basketball.



DOWN HE GOES FOR A KNOCKOUT

Halimi Gutierrez sent Felix Marques to the canvas with a right hand during their flyweight fight last night in Inglewood as referee George Latka moved in. Gutierrez won by a knockout in the eighth round of their scheduled ten-rounder. On the same card, Ruben Olivares decisioned Chucho Castillo to regain the world bantamweight championship. Boccabella Cracks Homer As Montreal Expos Romp

By United Press International

A change of uniform seems to have worked wonders for Ron Swoboda.

The outspoken outfielder, traded by the New York Mets to Montreal Thursday, made—his first day in a Expo uniform a memorable one as he smashed a home run and 380-foot sacrifice fly in an 18-5 rout of the Pittsburgh Pirates "B" team. (Catcher John Boccabella of San Anselmo also homered for Montreal.)

Swoboda, dealt away after criticizing Mets' Manager Gil Hodges last season, produced a run in his first at-bat with a long fly. The ball would have easily been a home run in Montreal's home field—Jarry Park. He later homered to left field.

Rusty Staub had a pair of homers for the Expos and Montreal broke open the game with an eight-run assault against rookie Mike Everett in the ninth.

In other action Friday, Houston beat the New York Yankees 2-1 and then downed the Minnesota Twins 5-3 in a 15-inning round robin game at the Astrodome. The Astros touched Minnesota's Stan Williams for five runs in the second inning to take the second game.

Carlos May drove in three runs with a single and a triple to lift the Chicago White Sox to a 9-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs. The White Sox ripped Ferguson Jenkins, expected to start for the Cubs in their opener next week, for 10 hits and nine runs.

Merv Rettenmund, Clay Dalrymple and Paul Blair homered to highlight a 13-hit attack that carried the Baltimore Orioles to a 12-2 romp past the New York Mets. Dalrymple's homer followed a single by Dave Johnson in the eighth and Blair added a three-run shot in the ninth. Tommie Agee homered for the Mets.

Rick Monday hit a solo homer and the Oakland Athletics touched 20-game winner Sam McDowell for four runs en route to a 5-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Richie Hebner drove in six runs with a two homers and a single to pace the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 12-0 rout of the Cincinnati Reds.

Hal King and Marty Perez drove in three runs each and the Atlanta Braves survived three Washington homers to beat the Senators 10-6. King had three singles and a sacrifice fly after a pre-game hitting lesson from rival manager Ted Williams while Mike Epstein, Dick Billings and Frank Howard homered for the Senators.

The California Angels pushed across two runs in the last of the 11th inning to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

NBA PLAYOFFS

Warriors To Try Another 'Miracle'

MADISON, Wisc. (UPI) — Many people didn't believe the San Francisco Warriors would be returning to Wisconsin for a fifth playoff game with the Milwaukee Bucks.

With four seconds remaining in the fourth game Thursday night, it was almost a certainity that the Warriors' season was over, but Joe Ellis gave the Warriors a new life as they broke a 12-game losing streak to the Bucks, 106-104.

Ellis calmly swished a 43-foot jump shot to give the Warriors a 105-104 lead with one second left to play. Jeff Mullins added a technical foul shot when Milwaukee called a time out they didn't have.

The Bucks had taken the lead, 104-103, with four seconds left on a baseline jumper by Oscar Robertson.

Now the Warriors meet the Bucks in the fifth game of the best-of-seven series Sunday afternoon in the University of Wisconsin fieldhouse at Madison.

In addition to Ellis' unbelievable shot Thursday, the Warriors got a 32-point performance from Jerry Lucas, a career high of 19 rebounds from Mullins and a tough game by Nate Thurmond, who usually plays his best against Lew Alcindor.

The Bucks now have been shocked into the reality that they can be beaten by the Warriors. San Francisco, which lost nine previous games to Milwaukee this season, now knows the impossible can be done.

But if the Warriors expect to return to Oakland for a sixth game Tuesday, they will need another super performance and possibly another life-saving shot like Ellis' 43-footer.

In other NBA playoff action this weekend, the Baltimore Bullets and Philadelphia 76ers squared off today and the Los Angeles Lakers battle the Chicago Bulls in Chicago tomorrow.

Baltimore, holding a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, was out to clinch a berth in next week's Eastern Conference series with the New York Knicks who eliminated Atlanta, 4-1.

Los Angeles holds a 3-2 lead over Chicago and will be out to gain a berth in the playoffs against the Milwaukee-San Francisco winner. The Los Angeles-Chicago game tomorrow will be televised by channels 7, 11 and 13 starting at 11 a.m., PST. The San Francisco-Milwaukee game will be broadcast by Radio KNEW (910) also at 11 a.m.

BASEBALL TOURNAMENTS

Busy Week For Marinites

Next week will be a busy one for Marin County Athletic League high school baseball teams, but Marin itself will be deserted. The league's eight teams are traveling, as far north as Healdsburg and as far south as Soquel, Santa Cruz County, to play in six Easter tournaments.

The College of Marin Tars also will be involved in an Easter event. They play Monday and Tuesday in the Diablo Valley Invitational in Concord.

Three MCAL teams — Novato, Drake of San Anselmo and Terra Linda — will participate in the Santa Rosa Invitational beginning Monday, while the other five teams go their separate ways. In action beginning today, San Marin of Novato is at the Healdsburg Invitational, and San Rafael is at Crockett for the John Swett Invitational.

Two other tournaments begin Monday — Redwood of Larkspur plays in the Fresno Invitational, and Tamalpais of Mill Valley travels to Pacifica for the Terra Nova Invitational.

The lone remaining MCAL team, Marin Catholic of Kentfield, waits until next Thursday before sojourning to Soquel for the Soquel Invitational.

No MCAL games will be played next week, during the Easter vacation. League action will resume April 13.

In the seventh, Billings moved to second on a single by Curtiss, and stormed home when Tam second baseman Tom Collins couldn't handle a ground ball off the bat of Dave DeMoss. Lex Rzepelia, the winning pitcher, singled to drive in Curtiss with the final tally.

Tam used two bases loaded hits — a single by Lea and a triple by centerfield Clifford Hall, to account for the fifth inning eruption that tied the score at 6-6 and nearly turned the tide.

Hall, an odds-on candidate for all-league honors, led all players with three hits and three runs batted in, while a trio of Drake players — Steve Hale, Jit Singh and Curtiss had two hits each.

The Pirates racked Johnson for 10 hits; they were all singles however, and coach Dick Creighton acknowledged that his team really didn't rough up the Indian righthander that bad.

Rzepelia, the loser in Drake's game against Novato on Tuesday, worked the final inning and a third yesterday and was credited with the win. He struck out four and walked none.

Henderson Bat Hero For Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —In a way, the San Francisco Giants will have their 1971 home opener today.

The Giants don't officialy open the new season until Tuesday night at San Diego, but they meet the Tokyo Lotte Orions today at Candlestick Park in the first of a two-game weekend series that will wind up spring training for both clubs.

The Japanese Pacific League champions will be making the first appearance by a Japanese major league team in San Francisco.

The Giants walloped the University of Santa Clara Friday, 12-4, behind the sizzling bat of Ken Henderson.

Henderson got four of the Giants' 22 hits, including two doubles and a three-run home run. Outfielder George Foster also collected four hits in six tries and shortstop Chris Speier went three for four.

Righthander Rich Robertson pitched seven innings for the Giants, allowing all four Bronco runs. He was followed by Ron Bryant who blanked Santa Clara for two frames.

Seals End Sad Season

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The California Seals end their National Hockey League season tonight with a contest against the team just above them in the West Division standings.

For the Seals, who are in last place in their division, it will be the close of a dismal season when they meet the Los Angeles Kings.

California closed out its home season Friday night by losing to Vancouver, 6-2, enabling the Canucks to move up to seventh place in the East Division.

The loss gave the Seals a 17-21-1 home record. Their total home season attendance was 219,364 for an average of 5,625 per game.

A's Ready For Opener

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The Oakland Athletics ended their spring training season today against the Cleveland Indians, then head for Washington for the 1971 Opening Day contest against the Senators.

The A's pounded 20-game winner Sam McDowell Friday and got some long-awaited relief pitching improvement to beat the Indians, 5-2.

Three relievers —Paul Lindblad, Bob Locker and Jim Rolland —all pitched one inning, allowing seven hits and giving up no walks.

The A's got to McDowell early when Rick Monday blasted a solo homer in the second inning. Pinch-hitter Gene Tenace led off the third with a double and scored on two groundouts.

In the sixth, Felipe Alou doubled and singles by Reggie Jackson and Don Mincher, an intentional walk to Sal Bando and a sacrifice fly by Monday brought in two more runs.

The Indians scored their first run in the second inning on singles by Ray Fosse and Chuck Hinton and Ted Ford's double. McDowell then homered in the fifth for the second run.

San Rafael, Tam Trackmen Lead Marin League Race

Tamalpais and San Rafael high school track and field teams both coasted to easy victories in Marin County Athletic League meets yesterday to lead the standings with 3-0 won-lost recores. Tam crushed Novato, 96-27, while San Rafael pounded Marin Catholic, 100-35.

In other league meets, Terra Linda romped over San Marin, 101-34, while Redwood demolished Drake, 119-14.

The Tam Indians were led by all-around superstar Gerald Robertson, who collected three victories, in the 120-yard high hurdles, the 180 low hurdles, and the high jump. His high hurdle time of 15 seconds ranks as the league's best so far this year.

San Rafael got a triple win from its top athlete, Paul Crovo, who nabbed the 100 and 220-yard dashes and long jump. In the 100, Crovo sprinted to a 10.2 seconds time, tying the fastest time in the league thus far.

The San Rafael 440 relay team improved its best effort by .2, down to a league-leading 44.5.

Terra Linda's leading jumper, sophomore Mark Lowey, took the high hurdles, high jump, and triple jump, to lead Trojan scorers. San Marin's middle distance star, Chakra Chappell took two of his specialties, the 440 and 880, to pace the Mustangs.

BOWLING

Mrs. Asay, DeYoung Top List

Terry DeYoung and Sylvia Asay of San Rafael were the kingpins of Marin County bowling this past week.

DeYoung, 21-year-old left hander who rolled a 300 game two years ago at Nave Lanes in Ignacio, almost duplicated the feat across county at Greenbrae Lanes Wednesday. He rolled a 290 game after stringing out 10 strikes his middle game during California Trophy Traveling League action. The 290 was sandwiched between games of 178 and 238 for a 706 series.

Mrs. Asay, one of the top Marin County woman bowlers with her 180 blue book average, rolled a big 253 game and followed with 216 and 197 for a 666 set in the Nite Owlers League, also at Greenbrae Lanes.

The week's honor roll:

down in order in the bottom of the inning.

The score was tied as early as the sixth, when Brown knocked in Ray Judah with a sacrifice fly. Marin had gotten on the board for the first time in 15 innings of league play, when Don Bianchini scampered home on a ground out by Steve Sherry.

Bianchini was the only real offensive show of the game. He lashed a couple of singles, and could have had two more hits on line drives that were hit right at people. Edralin also had two singles, the only other player in the game with more than one hit.

UCLA Ace Wicks Signs: $2 Million?

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—"Yes, it simply was a matter of dollars and cents," said UCLA's Sidney Wicks, the big man with the soft voice and now large wallet following his signing of a five-year contract with the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association.

"I really didn't have much preference one way or the other with regard to the NBA or the American Basketball Association," said Wicks at the formal Friday afternoon news conference here to announce he is "officially now a Trail Blazer."

Texas of the ABA, he said, made a final offer, and Portland made a final offer.

"The Portland offer was the best for me, and I took it," he said.

Wicks followed the advice of Sam Gilbert, his agent and Los Angeles businessman and UCLA alum who helped Lew Alcindor with his negotiations at Milwaukee.

Portland general manager Harry Glickman said of the Wicks' signing, "He has received as good advice from Sam Gilbert as any player ever to come into professional basketball."

Terms of the Portland deal with Wicks were not revealed, but better estimates indicate Portland put $1.5 to $2 million in its package deal with the Bruin superstar.

Portland, in signing Wicks the same week he was drafted, preserved some prestige for the NBA, which is in a signing battle with the ABA. The newer league already has signed Artis Gilmore, Howard Porter, and Jim McDaniels from this year's crop of college stars. The NBA has landed Wicks and Ken Durrett from LaSalle thus far.

Wicks said he was looking forward to playing for Roland Todd, who tried to recruit Wicks for University of Nevada-Las Vegas when Wicks finished at Santa Monica City College. But Wicks went to UCLA instead to help continue Bruin dominance of college basketball.

San Rafael, Tam Trackmen Lead Marin League Race

Tamalpais and San Rafael high school track and field teams both coasted to easy victories in Marin County Athletic League meets yesterday to lead the standings with 3-0 won-lost recores. Tam crushed Novato, 96-27, while San Rafael pounded Marin Catholic, 100-35.

In other league meets, Terra Linda romped over San Marin, 101-34, while Redwood demolished Drake, 119-14.

The Tam Indians were led by all-around superstar Gerald Robertson, who collected three victories, in the 120-yard high hurdles, the 180 low hurdles, and the high jump. His high hurdle time of 15 seconds ranks as the league's best so far this year.

San Rafael got a triple win from its top athlete, Paul Crovo, who nabbed the 100 and 220-yard dashes and long jump. In the 100, Crovo sprinted to a 10.2 seconds time, tying the fastest time in the league thus far.

The San Rafael 440 relay team improved its best effort by .2, down to a league-leading 44.5.

Terra Linda's leading jumper, sophomore Mark Lowey, took the high hurdles, high jump, and triple jump, to lead Trojan scorers. San Marin's middle distance star, Chakra Chappell took two of his specialties, the 440 and 880, to pace the Mustangs.

Boccabella Cracks Homer As Montreal Expos Romp

By United Press International

A change of uniform seems to have worked wonders for Ron Swoboda.

The outspoken outfielder, traded by the New York Mets to Montreal Thursday, made—his first day in a Expo uniform a memorable one as he smashed a home run and 380-foot sacrifice fly in an 18-5 rout of the Pittsburgh Pirates "B" team. (Catcher John Boccabella of San Anselmo also homered for Montreal.)

Swoboda, dealt away after criticizing Mets' Manager Gil Hodges last season, produced a run in his first at-bat with a long fly. The ball would have easily been a home run in Montreal's home field—Jarry Park. He later homered to left field.

Rusty Staub had a pair of homers for the Expos and Montreal broke open the game with an eight-run assault against rookie Mike Everett in the ninth.

In other action Friday, Houston beat the New York Yankees 2-1 and then downed the Minnesota Twins 5-3 in a 15-inning round robin game at the Astrodome. The Astros touched Minnesota's Stan Williams for five runs in the second inning to take the second game.

Carlos May drove in three runs with a single and a triple to lift the Chicago White Sox to a 9-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs. The White Sox ripped Ferguson Jenkins, expected to start for the Cubs in their opener next week, for 10 hits and nine runs.

Merv Rettenmund, Clay Dalrymple and Paul Blair homered to highlight a 13-hit attack that carried the Baltimore Orioles to a 12-2 romp past the New York Mets. Dalrymple's homer followed a single by Dave Johnson in the eighth and Blair added a three-run shot in the ninth. Tommie Agee homered for the Mets.

Rick Monday hit a solo homer and the Oakland Athletics touched 20-game winner Sam McDowell for four runs en route to a 5-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Richie Hebner drove in six runs with a two homers and a single to pace the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 12-0 rout of the Cincinnati Reds.

Hal King and Marty Perez drove in three runs each and the Atlanta Braves survived three Washington homers to beat the Senators 10-6. King had three singles and a sacrifice fly after a pre-game hitting lesson from rival manager Ted Williams while Mike Epstein, Dick Billings and Frank Howard homered for the Senators.

The California Angels pushed across two runs in the last of the 11th inning to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

NBA PLAYOFFS

Warriors To Try Another 'Miracle'

MADISON, Wisc. (UPI) — Many people didn't believe the San Francisco Warriors would be returning to Wisconsin for a fifth playoff game with the Milwaukee Bucks.

With four seconds remaining in the fourth game Thursday night, it was almost a certainity that the Warriors' season was over, but Joe Ellis gave the Warriors a new life as they broke a 12-game losing streak to the Bucks, 106-104.

Ellis calmly swished a 43-foot jump shot to give the Warriors a 105-104 lead with one second left to play. Jeff Mullins added a technical foul shot when Milwaukee called a time out they didn't have.

The Bucks had taken the lead, 104-103, with four seconds left on a baseline jumper by Oscar Robertson.

Now the Warriors meet the Bucks in the fifth game of the best-of-seven series Sunday afternoon in the University of Wisconsin fieldhouse at Madison.

In addition to Ellis' unbelievable shot Thursday, the Warriors got a 32-point performance from Jerry Lucas, a career high of 19 rebounds from Mullins and a tough game by Nate Thurmond, who usually plays his best against Lew Alcindor.

The Bucks now have been shocked into the reality that they can be beaten by the Warriors. San Francisco, which lost nine previous games to Milwaukee this season, now knows the impossible can be done.

But if the Warriors expect to return to Oakland for a sixth game Tuesday, they will need another super performance and possibly another life-saving shot like Ellis' 43-footer.

In other NBA playoff action this weekend, the Baltimore Bullets and Philadelphia 76ers squared off today and the Los Angeles Lakers battle the Chicago Bulls in Chicago tomorrow.

Baltimore, holding a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, was out to clinch a berth in next week's Eastern Conference series with the New York Knicks who eliminated Atlanta, 4-1.

Los Angeles holds a 3-2 lead over Chicago and will be out to gain a berth in the playoffs against the Milwaukee-San Francisco winner. The Los Angeles-Chicago game tomorrow will be televised by channels 7, 11 and 13 starting at 11 a.m., PST. The San Francisco-Milwaukee game will be broadcast by Radio KNEW (910) also at 11 a.m.

In the seventh, Billings moved to second on a single by Curtiss, and stormed home when Tam second baseman Tom Collins couldn't handle a ground ball off the bat of Dave DeMoss. Lex Rzepelia, the winning pitcher, singled to drive in Curtiss with the final tally.

Tam used two bases loaded hits — a single by Lea and a triple by centerfield Clifford Hall, to account for the fifth inning eruption that tied the score at 6-6 and nearly turned the tide.

Hall, an odds-on candidate for all-league honors, led all players with three hits and three runs batted in, while a trio of Drake players — Steve Hale, Jit Singh and Curtiss had two hits each.

The Pirates racked Johnson for 10 hits; they were all singles however, and coach Dick Creighton acknowledged that his team really didn't rough up the Indian righthander that bad.

Rzepelia, the loser in Drake's game against Novato on Tuesday, worked the final inning and a third yesterday and was credited with the win. He struck out four and walked none.

Henderson Bat Hero For Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —In a way, the San Francisco Giants will have their 1971 home opener today.

The Giants don't officialy open the new season until Tuesday night at San Diego, but they meet the Tokyo Lotte Orions today at Candlestick Park in the first of a two-game weekend series that will wind up spring training for both clubs.

The Japanese Pacific League champions will be making the first appearance by a Japanese major league team in San Francisco.

The Giants walloped the University of Santa Clara Friday, 12-4, behind the sizzling bat of Ken Henderson.

Henderson got four of the Giants' 22 hits, including two doubles and a three-run home run. Outfielder George Foster also collected four hits in six tries and shortstop Chris Speier went three for four.

Righthander Rich Robertson pitched seven innings for the Giants, allowing all four Bronco runs. He was followed by Ron Bryant who blanked Santa Clara for two frames.

Seals End Sad Season

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The California Seals end their National Hockey League season tonight with a contest against the team just above them in the West Division standings.

For the Seals, who are in last place in their division, it will be the close of a dismal season when they meet the Los Angeles Kings.

California closed out its home season Friday night by losing to Vancouver, 6-2, enabling the Canucks to move up to seventh place in the East Division.

The loss gave the Seals a 17-21-1 home record. Their total home season attendance was 219,364 for an average of 5,625 per game.

A's Ready For Opener

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The Oakland Athletics ended their spring training season today against the Cleveland Indians, then head for Washington for the 1971 Opening Day contest against the Senators.

The A's pounded 20-game winner Sam McDowell Friday and got some long-awaited relief pitching improvement to beat the Indians, 5-2.

Three relievers —Paul Lindblad, Bob Locker and Jim Rolland —all pitched one inning, allowing seven hits and giving up no walks.

The A's got to McDowell early when Rick Monday blasted a solo homer in the second inning. Pinch-hitter Gene Tenace led off the third with a double and scored on two groundouts.

In the sixth, Felipe Alou doubled and singles by Reggie Jackson and Don Mincher, an intentional walk to Sal Bando and a sacrifice fly by Monday brought in two more runs,

The Indians scored their first run in the second inning on singles by Ray Fosse and Chuck Hinton and Ted Ford's double. McDowell then homered in the fifth for the second run.

BOWLING

Mrs. Asay, DeYoung Top List

Terry DeYoung and Sylvia Asay of San Rafael were the kingpins of Marin County bowling this past week.

DeYoung, 21-year-old left hander who rolled a 300 game two years ago at Nave Lanes in Ignacio, almost duplicated the feat across county at Greenbrae Lanes Wednesday. He rolled a 290 game after stringing out 10 strikes his middle game during California Trophy Traveling League action. The 290 was sandwiched between games of 178 and 238 for a 706 series.

Mrs. Asay, one of the top Marin County woman bowlers with her 180 blue book average, rolled a big 253 game and followed with 216 and 197 for a 666 set in the Nite Owlers League, also at Greenbrae Lanes.

The week's honor roll:

COUNTRY CLUB BOWL

GREENBRAE LANES

down in order in the bottom of the inning.

The score was tied as early as the sixth, when Brown knocked in Ray Judah with a sacrifice fly. Marin had gotten on the board for the first time in 15 innings of league play, when Don Bianchini scampered home on a ground out by Steve Sherry.

Bianchini was the only real offensive show of the game. He lashed a couple of singles, and could have had two more hits on line drives that were hit right at people. Edralin also had two singles, the only other player in the game with more than one hit.

BASEBALL TOURNAMENTS

Busy Week For Marinites

Next week will be a busy one for Marin County Athletic League high school baseball teams, but Marin itself will be deserted. The league's eight teams are traveling, as far north as Healdsburg and as far south as Soquel, Santa Cruz County, to play in six Easter tournaments.

The College of Marin Tars also will be involved in an Easter event. They play Monday and Tuesday in the Diablo Valley Invitational in Concord.

Three MCAL teams — Novato, Drake of San Anselmo and Terra Linda — will participate in the Santa Rosa Invitational beginning Monday, while the other five teams go their separate ways. In action beginning today, San Marin of Novato is at the Healdsburg Invitational, and San Rafael is at Crockett for the John Swett Invitational.

Two other tournaments begin Monday — Redwood of Larkspur plays in the Fresno Invitational, and Tamalpais of Mill Valley travels to Pacifica for the Terra Nova Invitational.

The lone remaining MCAL team, Marin Catholic of Kentfield, waits until next Thursday before sojourning to Soquel for the Soquel Invitational.

No MCAL games will be played next week, during the Easter vacation. League action will resume April 13.

Report On Aviation Pollution

OAKLAND (UPI)—Air pollution experts yesterday estimated that aviation-generated bad air in the San Francisco Bay Area now totals approximately 121 tons daily and may be up to 270 tons a day by 1985.

Chief Administrative Officer D. J. Callaghan of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District said the figures were based upon a 200-page report presented today to Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG) representatives.

The study estimated the emission of air contaminants from aircraft and from ground activity related to aircraft for four time periods—present, 1975, 1980 and 1985.

"The estimates show an increase in aviation generated air pollution from a total of 121 tons per day at the present time, to 270 tons per day in 1985. If related ground activity is included, the figures become 138 tons per day now, versus 280 tons per day in 1985."

Callaghan said the study had taken 1,277 man-hours of staff time in preparation of the report.

"In view of the anticipated overall decrease in air pollution over the next 15 years," Callaghan said, "it is clear that aviation generated air pollution will become a far more significant portion of the total problem in years to come."

Callaghan said the technicians making the study had charted pollution potentials of various airports in the nine-county Bay Area.

"You will see there that we believe that Alameda Naval Air Station occupies a site with light air pollution potential, San Francisco International and Travis Air Force Base are between 'light' and 'moderate'; Oakland Airport is in the 'moderate' category; Hamilton Air Force Base is in the transitional zone between 'moderate' and 'heavy'; Fremont-Newark and Santa Rosa are registered 'heavy' and 'severe'; and Livermore is alone in the 'severe' category."

Board Hopefuls Set For Coffees

Coffee gatherings for two candidates for the San Rafael Board of Education have been scheduled for next week.

One for Richard E. West will be given at 2 p.m. Monday at the home of Ruth Ransdall of 217 Ridgewood Drive.

Scheduled by supporters of Philip E. Maley are coffees at 7 p.m. Monday at the home of Theresa Hancock, 11 Treanor Street, and at 5 p.m. Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Thomas of 15 Mountain View Avenue.

Forgery Trial Set

A jury trial has been set for the week of May 3 in Marin Superior Court for Louis Anthony Guise, 42, of Arnold, Calaveras County, who has pleaded innocent to a charge of passing a forged prescription at a Novato pharmacy Feb. 8.

Secretary's Name Omitted In Story

A line dropped in a story yesterday resulted in omission of the name of Anne Smith as the Marin Human Rights Department secretary who has resigned as of April 16.

Mrs. Smith told a fact-finding committee, which is looking into the cause and cure of squabbling that has plagued the department, that she was taking a higher paying job as secretary in Broadway Hospital, Vallejo.

Road Delay Report

A report on the reason for delays in finishing the widening of San Pedro Road will be given by Donald R. Frost, county public works director, to the San Rafael City Council at a meeting at 8 p.m. Monday.

Shakespeare Unit Has Fund Drive

A "Copper Penny" mail campaign is under way to raise money for the Marin Shakespeare Festival, according to Gordon F. Parr, board president.

Parr said that persons who respond to a mailed plea by making donations to the festival will be given old English copper pennies, now out of circulation.

They may either keep the pennies for souvenirs or turn them in at the box office for a 20 per cent discount on next season's shows.

In addition, the two largest donors will receive envelopes autographed by John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson carrying "first day cover" of the Shakespeare birthday stamp issued in 1964.

Judge Refuses To Allow Wigs For Reservists

NEW YORK (UPI)—A federal district court judge Friday refused to order the Army to allow three long-haired reservists to wear short-hair wigs to their drills.

The American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of the three reservists tried to overturn an Army regulation establishing three inches as the maximum length of a soldier's hair. Army regulations allow wigs only to cover baldness or physical disfiguration.

"You are asking me to make Army regulations, which I won't do," Judge Anthony J. Travia told ACLU attorney Joel Gora.

Gora said the reservists—Jeffrey Hoffman, 26, an art director; Mark Schwartz, 20, a student, and George Besdansky, 25, a social worker—may appeal the ruling.

Judge Refuses To Allow Wigs For Reservists

NEW YORK (UPI)—A federal district court judge Friday refused to order the Army to allow three long-haired reservists to wear short-hair wigs to their drills.

The American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of the three reservists tried to overturn an Army regulation establishing three inches as the maximum length of a soldier's hair. Army regulations allow wigs only to cover baldness or physical disfiguration.

"You are asking me to make Army regulations, which I won't do," Judge Anthony J. Travia told ACLU attorney Joel Gora.

Gora said the reservists—Jeffrey Hoffman, 26, an art director; Mark Schwartz, 20, a student, and George Besdansky, 25, a social worker—may appeal the ruling.

THE WEEK'S BUSINESS

Signs Appear On Deflating Dollar

NEW YORK (UPI) —Signs appeared this week that the 1970-71 recession at last may be leading the free world towards deflation.

Britain cuts its "bank rate," its most important interest barometer from 7 per cent to 6 per cent and the West German Bundes-Bank also slashed its discount rate a point to 5 per cent. The British Government also announced it intends to cut corporate income and capital gains taxes substantially to spur business recovery.

These moves resulted in a general decline of the dollar in the European foreign exchange markets which caused the U.S. treasury to take the defensive step of seeking to sell $1.5 billion in dollar notes in European markets to soak up surplus Eurodollars.

Here at home, the rate of price inflation continued to ease rather dramatically. The index of wholesale price increases was up only 0.3 per cent in March, only half as much as in February.

The stock market was listless, moving only sideways and Dun & Bradstreet said retail trade was even with a year ago to up 4 per cent across the country on the average.

There were other indications of improvement in business conditions at the grass roots level. For example, the auto industry planned a 15 per cent increase in production for the second quarter.

Spokesmen for Detroit's Big Three seemed quite bullish about the industry's prospects for the year as they gathered for the opening of the international automobile show in New York's Coliseum.

More importantly, the government's index of economic barometers was disclosed to have moved up 0.6 per cent in February from the January level, and machine tools, one of the industries hardest hit by the recession, had a modest order gain in February. Factory orders made their fourth successive monthly gain in February, but the increase was only 0.5 per cent, compared with January's spurt of 1.7 per cent.

Business Must Provide Own Complaint Remedy

IT IS CUSTOMARY these days when a problem arises to turn to some government agency for a solution.

For more than a generation, Better Business Bureaus across the country have been bending their efforts toward getting a square deal for consumers. Of late there has been much public outcry from people like Ralph Nader to get the government to do more and more to "protect the consumer."

When a customer gets less than his money's worth, we tend to assume he has been cheated, defrauded or deceived. This assumption leads us to the obvious conclusion that there ought to be more protective laws and tougher enforcement.

Last year the Better Business Bureau of San Francisco — which includes Marin County in its primary service area — studied 1,600 consecutive complaints and analyzed them carefully.

The results of this undertaking indicates that some of the aforementioned natural assumptions are incorrect.

OUTRIGHT MISREPRESENTATIONS accounted for only 13 per cent of the complaints. Non-delivery, guarantee or contract problems, and unsatisfactory service resulted in 59 per cent of complaints.

Adjustment difficulties, defective merchandise and other miscellaneous problems gave rise to the remaining 28 per cent of complaints.

The bureau's analysis and study showed that 70 per cent of complaints were resolved satisfactorily without resort to legal action.

From this survey, the bureau concluded that "most businesses are eager to keep customer dissatisfaction at a minimum" and that "business must continue to work to increase its efficiency and thereby lessen consumer dissatisfaction."

"INCREASE EFFICIENCY?" What does efficiency have to do with it?

Simply this: The company wants its customers to be satisfied but human error and other kinds of foul-ups too often combine to defeat the management's goals.

Inadequately informed employees and irresponsible employees sometimes are involved. A paperwork foulup in billing or shipping causes considerable customer dissatisfaction.

These areas where 60 per cent of dissatisfaction originates, cannot be controlled by law, by government, by rigorous policing from the outside. Business must improve its own delivery services. It must improve the quality and workmanship of its own products. It must find a way to deal with computer billing errors.

The Better Business Bureau does an effective job of getting action on these kinds of complaints. When government intervention is needed, the bureau refers complaints to appropriate authorities.

Incidentally, 13 per cent of all complaints filed with the Better Business Bureau of San Francisco during the period covered by the study originated with Marin residents.

WHO BRINGS COMPLAINTS to the bureau?

One might think it would be mostly people from the upper levels of the socio-economic scale who are better informed and educated.

But the Better Business Bureau study shows that the Tenderloin and the Mission districts — generally considered low-income neighborhoods — produced a high volume of complaints.

The survey did, however, "raise the serious question whether residents of problem areas or minority areas are sufficiently utilizing bureau services."

Obviously, the bureau must intensify its consumer education efforts, especially in these latter areas.

Since the overall job is one of encouraging business to improve its own efficiency — to eliminate its own unintentional foulups — the solution to most consumer complaints would seem to lie with the Better Business Bureau itself rather than with some government agency or the expenditure of more public funds.

Women Voters Score Again

The League of Women Voters, whose volunteer efforts for a better-informed electorate never cease to amaze us, has come out with a couple more useful publications.

This time it is the Central Marin league that scores, with a new edition of "Your County, Marin," and a handy four-page pamphlet, "Why, When and How To Write Your Legislator."

"Your County, Marin" is full of facts about the county and its government. It contains, for instance, a chart of the organizational chain of county government, which shows how all departments except those with elected department heads are grouped under the board of supervisors and county administrator.

Other charts show where the money goes. For instance, there is the distribution of property tax: 60.7 per cent to schools, 22.6 per cent to county government, 8.3 per cent to city government (the total for all 11 cities), 8.4 per cent for special districts.

The information in this booklet is as up-to-date as that in "Why, When and How To Write Your Legislator." Both are obtainable from the League of Women Voters of Central Marin, P.O. Box 2174, San Rafael 94902.

Photodegradable Plastics?

Plastics make up a large component of this country's solid waste disposal problem. The tough, durable qualities which make them fine for packaging and bottling render them a nightmare to dispose of. When household trash is returned to the earth in the normal way as land fill, plastics are forced to the surface. Then the top layer of ground must be bulldozed off and the plastics-filled soil eliminated.

A chemistry professor at the University of Birmingham, England, Gerald Scott, has discovered a group of substances which can be added to various plastics, causing them to disintegrate into a harmless powder that will be consumed by bacteria, after prolonged exposure to ultraviolet light.

The plastic gives warning of its impending breakdown by changing color, and its length of life can be controlled by the amounts of the substances put in it. Since ordinanry window glass filters out most ultraviolet light, one would not need be afraid that his plastics were going to fall apart as long as they are kept indoors.

This is a good example of technology being used to solve a problem that technology created.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BRICKBATS to striking San Francisco teachers, who put their grievances above the needs of children for education.

BOUQUETS to Dr. Patricia Hallinan for her untiring fight in behalf of battered children, and to Mrs. Evelyn Johnson of Novato, who produced 500 fliers and sent them to homes, urging support of Dr. Hallinan's effort and of AB 850 by Assemblyman Leo J. Ryan, D-South San Francisco, which would make such children wards of the juvenile court.

BRICKBATS to Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Marans and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Green of Tiburon for tying up Marin's courts with their seemingly endless neighborhood quarrel.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Role Of Judah In Early Railroad

In reference to a letter in your March 24 issue — and just to keep the record straight — save one of those brick bats!

Theodore Dehone (Crazy) Judah was engineer for constructing the Sacramento Valley Railroad, completed in 1855, but he never operated the line, as stated. The line was 22½ miles in length, not 21 and did not serve as a test but was built to cut a day's wagon-freighting time from Sacramento to the northern mines. Nor was its operation brief but lasted ten years until purchased in 1865 by the Central Pacific, the western portion of the transcontinental line, completed in 1869, not 1868.

Other wise the letter, as published, appears to have been substantially correct.

New First Aid Course Applauded

In reference to the story on page 24, March 26, regarding the Red Cross multimedia first aid course.

My daughter and several of her friends (in high school) participated in the first "civilian" presentation of this course on March 13. The class consisted of students and adults; 20 in this test class.

Although the girls have had first aid training in school and scouts, none had been able, because of school activities and homework, to participate in the regular six-week course.

They were most enthusiastic in the whole course — and each had her Red Cross certificate by 5 p.m. that day. My thanks and "bouquets" to the Red Cross for updating their training program. I hope more people will be able to avail themselves of this opportunity now.

Marin City Parents Reply To Criticism

As a group of 25 Marin City parents, we would like to respond to trustee Robert Thompson's criticism of our conduct at Sausalito School Board meetings.

The board has a duly elected chairman, Nat Johnson, who has functioned as chairman long enough to know when a meeting is out of order.

We resent the attempts by Thompson and other board members to tell Mr. Johnson how to do his job and to "Uncle Tom" the board's only black member . . .

From the beginning members of the recently elected board have made it very clear they are not about to listen to the Marin City community. During the campaign Mr. Thompson stated (in the I-J) that if either of the Marin City candidates were to win, he would not be able to work with them . . .

There are plenty of reasons for our anger and frustration at board meetings. We are parents who went through the Sausalito School District as children and are now watching our children go through the same old system.

We emerged from Sausalito schools with the same educational handicaps we see our children being burdened with.

It's difficult to be calm and nice when for all these years no one has listened. Mr. Thompson has likened the board meetings to a prison riot . . .

We have a right to free and open expression in matters affecting our children. If a prison riot is the only way to stop the dehumanization to which they are subject, then perhaps it is time we had one.

No-Fault Automobile Insurance: End Of The American Dream

WASHINGTON — One of the things we're going to be hearing more about as time goes on is "no-fault insurance." Everyone has his own idea of what no-fault automobile insurance should be, but basically it boils down to the idea that when someone has an accident, his own insurance company would settle the claim instead of seeking damages from the other party or his insurance company.

The advantages of no-fault automobile insurance are that you would eliminate a lot of phony claims from people who say they had suffered grievous injury. Litigants would not have to wait years to be paid off for an accident, the nation's courts would be free to deal with other matters of much higher priority and, hopefully, automobile insurance premiums could be reduced.

The disadvantage is that no-fault insurance could put a lot of lawyers out of work.

IT THERE COMES as no surprise that the trial lawyers are cranking up a fierce lobbying campaign to prevent no-fault insurance from becoming the law of the land.

My friend Briefless, who deals in nothing but automobile accident cases, becomes very emotional when you mention no-fault insurance to him.

"They're trying to take the bread out of our mouths," he said tearfully. "If we can't sue, we'll die."

"Oh, come now, Briefless," I said. "It can't be that serious."

"YOU CAN SAY that. But do you know suing insurance companies is the second largest industry in the United States? If they institute no-fault insurance, you'll have breadlines from Baltimore to San Diego. I'm not just talking about lawyers. I'm talking about all the other people it will affect — private investigators, legal secretaries and paid witnesses, not to mention the yellow legal pad paper companies. There is more at stake here than two cars getting into a lousy accident."

"But Briefless, surely there is other law work that you can find?" I said.

"Nothing that pays as well. Sometimes, if it's a difficult case, we get 50 per cent of the settlement. The very least we'll get is a third. If we lose we get nothing. But it's the only thing we know how to do. You can't say to a man who has been trained in 'whiplash' and 'pain and suffering suits' to go out and learn a new trade. Do you know what has made America the great country it is today?"

"I'm not sure," I admitted.

"THE RIGHT of one person to sue another person for an automobile crash."

"No kidding?"

"And also the right to select counsel to sue the other person, plus the right of the other party to select counsel to defend the suit.if you take these rights away from Americans, what have they left?"

"No-fault automobile insurance?"

"Exactly. The American dream in this country is to be hit by a cola truck or a Greyhound bus that was in the wrong."

"I never thought of it that way."

"ARE YOU GOING to take this American dream away from the people? What fun is it to have your own insurance company settle with you, when in your heart of hearts you know that with a sympathetic jury you'll get $100,000 from the other guy's insurance company?"

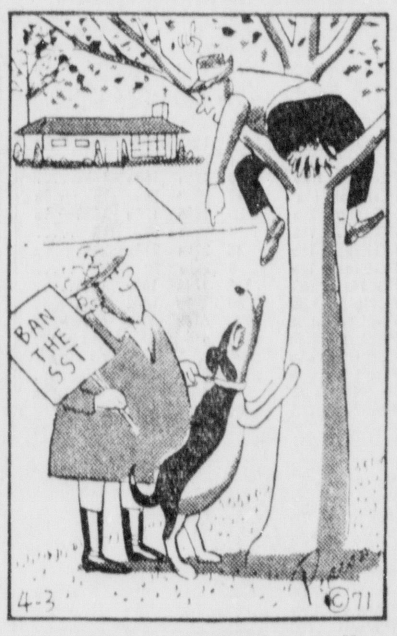
"You make a strong case against no-fault insurance," I told Briefless.

"The legislators think no-fault insurance is a great idea," he said, slamming a law book on his desk. "But when they find two million lawyers collecting unemployment insurance, they're going to be sorry they didn't leave vomobile insurance alone."

MAN BITES DOG



"I still say, madam, as pollution goes I'd prefer an SST in the sky to your dog on my lawn."

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

April 3, 1961

Foreign Minister Chen Yi of Communist China told newsmen that if Southeast Asia Treaty Organization nations sent troops into Laos, "then China will also send troops."

About 40,000 "ban the bomb" demonstrators held a rally in London to protest nuclear weapons.

20 YEARS AGO

April 3, 1951

The U. S. Census Bureau announced the final figure for Marin population in the 1950 census was 85,619. San Rafael, with 13,830 residents, was the only city in the county exceeding 10,000. San Anselmo came close with 9,177.

MARQUIS CHILDS

San Quentin's Death Row Symbolizes Justice Breakdown

SAN FRANCISCO — As you drive toward San Rafael the turn-off to the right says San Quentin, and there is the great yellow stone prison shining in the brilliant California sun like a crusaders' castle on the distant horizon. As the sleek cars swish by it is hard to realize how much horror, pain, hatred are penned behind those walls.

Death Row now holds 95 condemned men (Correction: 92 - Editor.). Along with everything else, California holds the record. Florida, with 72 prisoners waiting execution, is an outclassed runner-up.

This monstrous accumulation presents the governor, the attorney general, and the adult authority with a riddle that seems to have no answer. Do you send 99 persons to their death one after the other in the gas chamber? And is such a spectacle any real deterrent to the crime and violence rampant here, as almost everywhere throughout the country?

THE ACCUMULATION results from the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has not yet passed on two challenges to the legality of the death penalty. Until the court hands down its decision, the total will grow, and what will happen if the death penalty is upheld is anyone's guess. The most recent execution in California was two years ago, and the last woman was executed at San Quentin in 1962.

Nine states — Alaska, Hawaii, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Oregon, West Virginia, and Wisconsin — have abolished the death penalty. The supreme court must rule on whether a jury has the right to impose death without pre-set standards determining its imposition. This is a ticklish legal question, and an opinion may raise almost as many doubts as it resolves.

The Charles Manson trial, now ended after nine months, threw into sharp relief the sickness of so many of the dispossessed and alienated young drawn as by a magnet to the Pacific slope and the legend of the Golden West. The four young women of the Manson "family," with shaven heads, sitting down outside the Los Angeles courthouse and threatening to immolate themselves unless their master was freed, presented an incredible commentary on the state of the union.

COMMISSIONS GALORE have spelled out the clogging of the courts, the hideous overcrowding of the prisons, all the dire consequences of the law's delay. The Manson trial cost Los Angeles County a million dollars. And as it dragged on week after week and month after month, generating sensational headlines and extensive television coverage, the man from Mars might well wonder whether this was the way to arrive at a fair and impartial verdict.

So much that ought to be done remains undone. The papers here are full of the discovery of the riddled body of a 17-year-old girl who had been hitchhiking. The police are holding two men in whose motel room they found a collection of guns and some drugs.

The elemental reform of a law requiring the registration of guns is blocked by the gun lobby, the most powerful in the nation, funded by the gun industry. The lobby's pat response is that murder can be committed by means other than guns. In the night of the long knives in the Sharon Tate house the gun did not figure. Yet in an estimated 90 per cent of the murders committed in this country a gun was the instrument. Right-wing extremists see in gun registration a sinister plot to turn the country over to the Communists. This is the thin edge of paranoia, reflecting the suspicion and distrust that are part of America's sickness.

THERE IS SLIGHT evidence that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime. It is estimated 40 per cent of the robberies and holdups in San Francisco are committed by heroin addicts desperate for a fix. These addled men would hardly be deterred by thoughts of the gas chamber.

Perhaps the very multiplicity of the condemned will be a block to wholesale execution. Sirhan Sirhan is in San Quentin Death Row for the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. Will he be executed? And will Dennis McGautha, whose case is one of those before the supreme court, be given the alternative of life imprisonment for killing the proprietor of a small market in Los Angeles? This is one for the wiser Solomon, nowhere in view.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Two Faces Of Russia As It Confronts China

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev told the 24th Communist Party Congress that, due to Soviet initiative, there had been some improvement in Moscow's relations with Red China.

It was coincidence that as Brezhnev delivered his key address to the congress, Britain's prestigious Institute for Strategic Studies was reporting that the Soviet Union had concentrated some 32 divisions along its borders with Red China and moved 1,000 combat planes into neighboring Mongolia.

Despite the fact that one there was in fact no conflict between the two.

The improvement lay in state relations.

PARTY RELATIONS, more significantly, showed no improvement at all as Brezhnev's subsequent words demonstrated. Said Brezhnev:

". . . We cannot, of course, fail to see that the anti-Soviet line in China's propaganda and policy is being continued . . . We resolutely reject the slanderous inventions concerning the policy of our party and our state which are being spread from Peking . . ."

The Brezhnev speech provided a perfect example of the two levels of thought permitted by the Soviet policy of coexistence, whether it be with the United States or Red China.

On the state level, Russian Premiere Alexei Kosygin may meet with Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai, as they did in 1969.

Talks may be undetaken to settle the border dispute between the two nations, as they were a month after the Chou En-Lai-Kosygin meeting, and ambassadors exchanged as they were in 1970 after a hiatus of several years.

ALSO ON THE STATE level may be an increase in trade between the two.

Russian-Red Chinese trade hit a low of $46.5 million in 1970 after hitting a peak of about $2 billion during the 1950s.

Negotiations completed late in 1970 looked toward an increase this year to about $150 million, still a very small part of the Soviet Union's overall trade of more than $24 billion.

U.S.-Russian trade comes to about $180 million annually.

These are all state operations, possible even as party relations deteriorate in the all-out struggle for leadership in the Communist world and influence among developing nations, and as both build up their military strength along their common borders.

THE INSTITUTE for Strategic Studies declared that after a brief improvement in Sino-Soviet relations "the clouds so obvious at the beginning of 1970 had closed in again."

As had been expected, China and its European ally, Albania, boycotted the Soviet congress.

Taking special note of the split, Poland's new party leader Edward Gierek wrote in the Moscow newspaper Pravda on the eve of the congress that Red China's anti-Soviet policies must "doom their policy to still greater isolation among the forces of socialism."

Incidentally, 13 per cent of all complaints filed with the Better Business Bureau of San Francisco during the period covered by the study originated with Marin residents.

WHO BRINGS COMPLAINTS to the bureau?

One might think it would be mostly people from the upper levels of the socio-economic scale who are better informed and educated.

But the Better Business Bureau study shows that the Tenderloin and the Mission districts — generally considered low-income neighborhoods — produced a high volume of complaints.

The survey did, however, "raise the serious question whether residents of problem areas or minority areas are sufficiently utilizing bureau services."

Obviously, the bureau must intensify its consumer education efforts, especially in these latter areas.

Since the overall job is one of encouraging business to improve its own efficienty — to eliminate its own unintentional foulups — the solution to most consumer complaints would seem to lie with the Better Business Bureau itself rather than with some government agency or the expenditure of more public funds.

Women Voters Score Again

The League of Women Voters, whose volunteer efforts for a better-informed electorate never cease to amaze us, has come out with a couple more useful publications.

This time it is the Central Marin league that scores, with a new edition of "Your County, Marin," and a handy four-page pamphlet, "Why, When and How To Write Your Legislator."

"Your County, Marin" is full of facts about the county and its government. It contains, for instance, a chart of the organizational chain of county government, which shows how all departments except those with elected department heads are grouped under the board of supervisors and county administrator.

Other charts show where the money goes. For instance, there is the distribution of property tax: 60.7 per cent to schools, 22.6 per cent to county government, 8.3 per cent to city government (the total for all 11 cities), 8.4 per cent for special districts.

The information in this booklet is as up-to-date as that in "Why, When and How To Write Your Legislator." Both are obtainable from the League of Women Voters of Central Marin, P.O. Box 2174, San Rafael 94902.

Photodegradable Plastics?

Plastics make up a large component of this country's solid waste disposal problem. The tough, durable qualities which make them fine for packaging and bottling render them a nightmare to dispose of. When household trash is returned to the earth in the normal way as land fill, plastics are forced to the surface. Then the top layer of ground must be bulldozed off and the plastics-filled soil eliminated.

A chemistry professor at the University of Birmingham, England, Gerald Scott, has discovered a group of substances which can be added to various plastics, causing them to disintegrate into a harmless powder that will be consumed by bacteria, after prolonged exposure to ultraviolet light.

The plastic gives warning of its impending breakdown by changing color, and its length of life can be controlled by the amounts of the substances put in it. Since ordinanry window glass filters out most ultraviolet light, one would not need be afraid that his plastics were going to fall apart as long as they are kept indoors.

This is a good example of technology being used to solve a problem that technology created.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BRICKBATS to striking San Francisco teachers, who put their grievances above the needs of children for education.

BOUQUETS to Dr. Patricia Hallinan for her untiring fight in behalf of battered children, and tc Mrs. Evelyn Johnson of Novato, who produced 500 fliers and sent them to homes, urging support of Dr. Hallinan's effort and of AB 850 by Assemblyman Leo J. Ryan, D-South San Francisco, which would make such children wards of the juvenile court.

BRICKBATS to Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Marans and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Green of Tiburon for tying up Marin's courts with their seemingly endless neighborhood quarrel.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Role Of Judah In Early Railroad

In reference to a letter in your March 24 issue — and just to keep the record straight — save one of those brick bats!

Theodore Dehone (Crazy) Judah was engineer for constructing the Sacramento Valley Railroad, completed in 1855, but he never operated the line, as stated. The line was 22½ miles in length, not 21 and did not serve as a test but was built to cut a day's wagon-freighting time from Sacramento to the northern mines. Nor was its operation brief but lasted ten years until purchased in 1865 by the Central Pacific, the western portion of the transcontinental line, completed in 1869, not 1868.

Other wise the letter, as published, appears to have been substantially correct.

New First Aid Course Applauded

In reference to the story on page 24, March 26, regarding the Red Cross multimedia first aid course.

My daughter and several of her friends (in high school) participated in the first "civilian" presentation of this course on March 13. The class consisted of students and adults; 20 in this test class.

Although the girls have had first aid training in school and scouts, none had been able, because of school activities and homework, to participate in the regular six-week course.

They were most enthusiastic in the whole course — and each had her Red Cross certificate by 5 p.m. that day. My thanks and "bouquets" to the Red Cross for updating their training program. I hope more people will be able to avail themselves of this opportunity now.

Marin City Parents Reply To Criticism

As a group of 25 Marin City parents, we would like to respond to trustee Robert Thompson's criticism of our conduct at Sausalito School Board meetings.

The board has a duly elected chairman, Nat Johnson, who has functioned as chairman long enough to know when a meeting is out of order.

We resent the attempts by Thompson and other board members to tell Mr. Johnson how to do his job and to "Uncle Tom" the board's only black member . . .

From the beginning members of the recently elected board have made it very clear they are not about to listen to the Marin City community. During the campaign Mr. Thompson stated (in the I-J) that if either of the Marin City candidates were to win, he would not be able to work with them . . .

There are plenty of reasons for our anger and frustration at board meetings. We are parents who went through the Sausalito School District as children and are now watching our children go through the same old system.

We emerged from Sausalito schools with the same educational handicaps we see our children being burdened with.

It's difficult to be calm and nice when for all these years no one has listened. Mr. Thompson has likened the board meetings to a prison riot . . .

We have a right to free and open expression in matters affecting our children. If a prison riot is the only way to stop the dehumanization to which they are subject, then perhaps it is time we had one.

No-Fault Automobile Insurance: End Of The American Dream

WASHINGTON — One of the things we're going to be hearing more about as time goes on is "no-fault insurance." Everyone has his own idea of what no-fault automobile insurance should be, but basically it boils down to the idea that when someone has an accident, his own insurance company would settle the claim instead of seeking damages from the other party or his insurance company.

The advantages of no-fault automobile insurance are that you would eliminate a lot of phony claims from people who say they had suffered grievous injury. Litigants would not have to wait years to be paid off for an accident, the nation's courts would be free to deal with other matters of much higher priority and, hopefully, automobile insurance premiums could be reduced.

The disadvantage is that no-fault insurance could put a lot of lawyers out of work.

IT THERE COMES as no surprise that the trial lawyers are cranking up a fierce lobbying campaign to prevent no-fault insurance from becoming the law of the land.

My friend Briefless, who deals in nothing but automobile accident cases, becomes very emotional when you mention no-fault insurance to him.

"They're trying to take the bread out of our mouths," he said tearfully. "If we can't sue, we'll die."

"Oh, come now, Briefless," I said. "It can't be that serious."

"YOU CAN SAY that. But do you know suing insurance companies is the second largest industry in the United States? If they institute no-fault insurance, you'll have breadlines from Baltimore to San Diego. I'm not just talking about lawyers. I'm talking about all the other people it will affect — private investigators, legal secretaries and paid witnesses, not to mention the yellow legal pad paper companies. There is more at stake here than two cars getting into a lousy accident."

"But Briefless, surely there is other law work that you can find?" I said.

"Nothing that pays as well. Sometimes, if it's a difficult case, we get 50 per cent of the settlement. The very least we'll get is a third. If we lose we get nothing. But it's the only thing we know how to do. You can't say to a man who has been trained in 'whiplash' and 'pain and suffering suits' to go out and learn a new trade. Do you know what has made America the great country it is today?"

"I'm not sure," I admitted.

"THE RIGHT of one person to sue another person for an automobile crash."

"No kidding?"

"And also the right to select counsel to sue the other person, plus the right of the other party to select counsel to defend the suit.if you take these rights away from Americans, what have they left?"

"No-fault automobile insurance?"

"Exactly. The American dream in this country is to be hit by a cola truck or a Greyhound bus that was in the wrong."

"I never thought of it that way."

"ARE YOU GOING to take this American dream away from the people? What fun is it to have your own insurance company settle with you, when in your heart of hearts you know that with a sympathetic jury you'll get $100,000 from the other guy's insurance company?"

"You make a strong case against no-fault insurance," I told Briefless.

"The legislators think no-fault insurance is a great idea," he said, slamming a law book on his desk. "But when they find two million lawyers collecting unemployment insurance, they're going to be sorry they didn't leave vomobile insurance alone."

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

April 3, 1961

Foreign Minister Chen Yi of Communist China told newsmen that if Southeast Asia Treaty Organization nations sent troops into Laos, "then China will also send troops."

About 40,000 "ban the bomb" demonstrators held a rally in London to protest nuclear weapons.

20 YEARS AGO

April 3, 1951

The U. S. Census Bureau announced the final figure for Marin population in the 1950 census was 85,619. San Rafael, with 13,830 residents, was the only city in the county exceeding 10,000. San Anselmo came close with 9,177.

MARQUIS CHILDS

San Quentin's Death Row Symbolizes Justice Breakdown

SAN FRANCISCO — As you drive toward San Rafael the turn-off to the right says San Quentin, and there is the great yellow stone prison shining in the brilliant California sun like a crusaders' castle on the distant horizon. As the sleek cars swish by it is hard to realize how much horror, pain, hatred are penned behind those walls.

Death Row now holds 95 condemned men (Correction: 92 - Editor.). Along with everything else, California holds the record. Florida, with 72 prisoners waiting execution, is an outclassed runner-up.

This monstrous accumulation presents the governor, the attorney general, and the adult authority with a riddle that seems to have no answer. Do you send 99 persons to their death one after the other in the gas chamber? And is such a spectacle any real deterrent to the crime and violence rampant here, as almost everywhere throughout the country?

THE ACCUMULATION results from the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has not yet passed on two challenges to the legality of the death penalty. Until the court hands down its decision, the total will grow, and what will happen if the death penalty is upheld is anyone's guess. The most recent execution in California was two years ago, and the last woman was executed at San Quentin in 1962.

Nine states — Alaska, Hawaii, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Oregon, West Virginia, and Wisconsin — have abolished the death penalty. The supreme court must rule on whether a jury has the right to impose death without pre-set standards determining its imposition. This is a ticklish legal question, and an opinion may raise almost as many doubts as it resolves.

The Charles Manson trial, now ended after nine months, threw into sharp relief the sickness of so many of the dispossessed and alienated young drawn as by a magnet to the Pacific slope and the legend of the Golden West. The four young women of the Manson "family," with shaven heads, sitting down outside the Los Angeles courthouse and threatening to immolate themselves unless their master was freed, presented an incredible commentary on the state of the union.

COMMISSIONS GALORE have spelled out the clogging of the courts, the hideous overcrowding of the prisons, all the dire consequences of the law's delay. The Manson trial cost Los Angeles County a million dollars. And as it dragged on week after week and month after month, generating sensational headlines and extensive television coverage, the man from Mars might well wonder whether this was the way to arrive at a fair and impartial verdict.

So much that ought to be done remains undone. The papers here are full of the discovery of the riddled body of a 17-year-old girl who had been hitchhiking. The police are holding two men in whose motel room they found a collection of guns and some drugs.

The elemental reform of a law requiring the registration of guns is blocked by the gun lobby, the most powerful in the nation, funded by the gun industry. The lobby's pat response is that murder can be committed by means other than guns. In the night of the long knives in the Sharon Tate house the gun did not figure. Yet in an estimated 90 per cent of the murders committed in this country a gun was the instrument. Right-wing extremists see in gun registration a sinister plot to turn the country over to the Communists. This is the thin edge of paranoia, reflecting the suspicion and distrust that are part of America's sickness.

THERE IS SLIGHT evidence that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime. It is estimated 40 per cent of the robberies and holdups in San Francisco are committed by heroin addicts desperate for a fix. These addled men would hardly be deterred by thoughts of the gas chamber.

Perhaps the very multiplicity of the condemned will be a block to wholesale execution. Sirhan Sirhan is in San Quentin Death Row for the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. Will he be executed? And will Dennis McGautha, whose case is one of those before the supreme court, be given the alternative of life imprisonment for killing the proprietor of a small market in Los Angeles? This is one for the wiser Solomon, nowhere in view.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Two Faces Of Russia As It Confronts China

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev told the 24th Communist Party Congress that, due to Soviet initiative, there had been some improvement in Moscow's relations with Red China.

It was coincidence that as Brezhnev delivered his key address to the congress, Britain's prestigious Institute for Strategic Studies was reporting that the Soviet Union had concentrated some 32 divisions along its borders with Red China and moved 1,000 combat planes into neighboring Mongolia.

Despite the fact that one there was in fact no conflict between the two.

The improvement lay in state relations.

PARTY RELATIONS, more significantly, showed no improvement at all as Brezhnev's subsequent words demonstrated. Said Brezhnev:

". . . We cannot, of course, fail to see that the anti-Soviet line in China's propaganda and policy is being continued . . . We resolutely reject the slanderous inventions concerning the policy of our party and our state which are being spread from Peking . . ."

The Brezhnev speech provided a perfect example of the two levels of thought permitted by the Soviet policy of coexistence, whether it be with the United States or Red China.

On the state level, Russian Premiere Alexei Kosygin may meet with Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai, as they did in 1969.

Talks may be undetaken to settle the border dispute between the two nations, as they were a month after the Chou En-Lai-Kosygin meeting, and ambassadors exchanged as they were in 1970 after a hiatus of several years.

ALSO ON THE STATE level may be an increase in trade between the two.

Russian-Red Chinese trade hit a low of $46.5 million in 1970 after hitting a peak of about $2 billion during the 1950s.

Negotiations completed late in 1970 looked toward an increase this year to about $150 million, still a very small part of the Soviet Union's overall trade of more than $24 billion.

U.S.-Russian trade comes to about $180 million annually.

These are all state operations, possible even as party relations deteriorate in the all-out struggle for leadership in the Communist world and influence among developing nations, and as both build up their military strength along their common borders.

THE INSTITUTE for Strategic Studies declared that after a brief improvement in Sino-Soviet relations "the clouds so obvious at the beginning of 1970 had closed in again."

As had been expected, China and its European ally, Albania, boycotted the Soviet congress.

Taking special note of the split, Poland's new party leader Edward Gierek wrote in the Moscow newspaper Pravda on the eve of the congress that Red China's anti-Soviet policies must "doom their policy to still greater isolation among the forces of socialism."

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Lt. William L. Calley Jr. was convicted this week of murder of civilians at the hamlet of My Lai in South Vietnam in 1968.

The court-martial jury that convicted him sentenced him to life imprisonment, a sentence that will be reviewed and possibly reduced. Pending the review, President Nixon ordered Calley be released from the Ft. Benning, Ga., stockade and confined to his quarters on the base.

The jury that found Charles Manson and three female members of his "family" guilty of the Tate-Labianca murders voted they should be put to death in the gas chamber.

The Manson trial was the longest in California history. The defendants themselves were absent during the reading of the penalty finding, having been evicted by Judge Charles H. Older for unruly behavior.

The U.S. Board of Parole this week denied parole to James R. Hoffa, the president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters who is imprisoned in Lewisburg, Pa. His application will not be considered again until June, 1972. Hoffa was convicted of mail fraud and jury tampering.

The United States made plans to evacuate U.S. citizens from East Pakistan where civil strife broke out more than a week ago. Censorship was tight, but late in the week Radio Pakistan said the major cities and countryside of East Pakistan were calm.

Communist forces overran a U.S. Army artillery base near Da Nang in northern South Vietnam. Thirty-three American soldiers were killed —the most in one action in eight months.

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu said the recent incursion into Laos was Saigon's "biggest victory ever." He said the objectives of destroying Communist supply lines and stockpiles had been accomplished.

House Democrats, in a 138-62 caucus vote, called for an end of U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia by the beginning of 1973. Doves had argued that the pullout of troops should be completed by the end of this year.

Two conservative Democrats from Gerogia— John J. Flynt Jr. and Phil M. Landrun — announced their opposition to the war and said they would not vote for extension of the draft. The House did vote, 293-131, to continue the draft until mid-1973. The bill gives servicemen sizable pay increases -- a move toward an all-volunteer military.

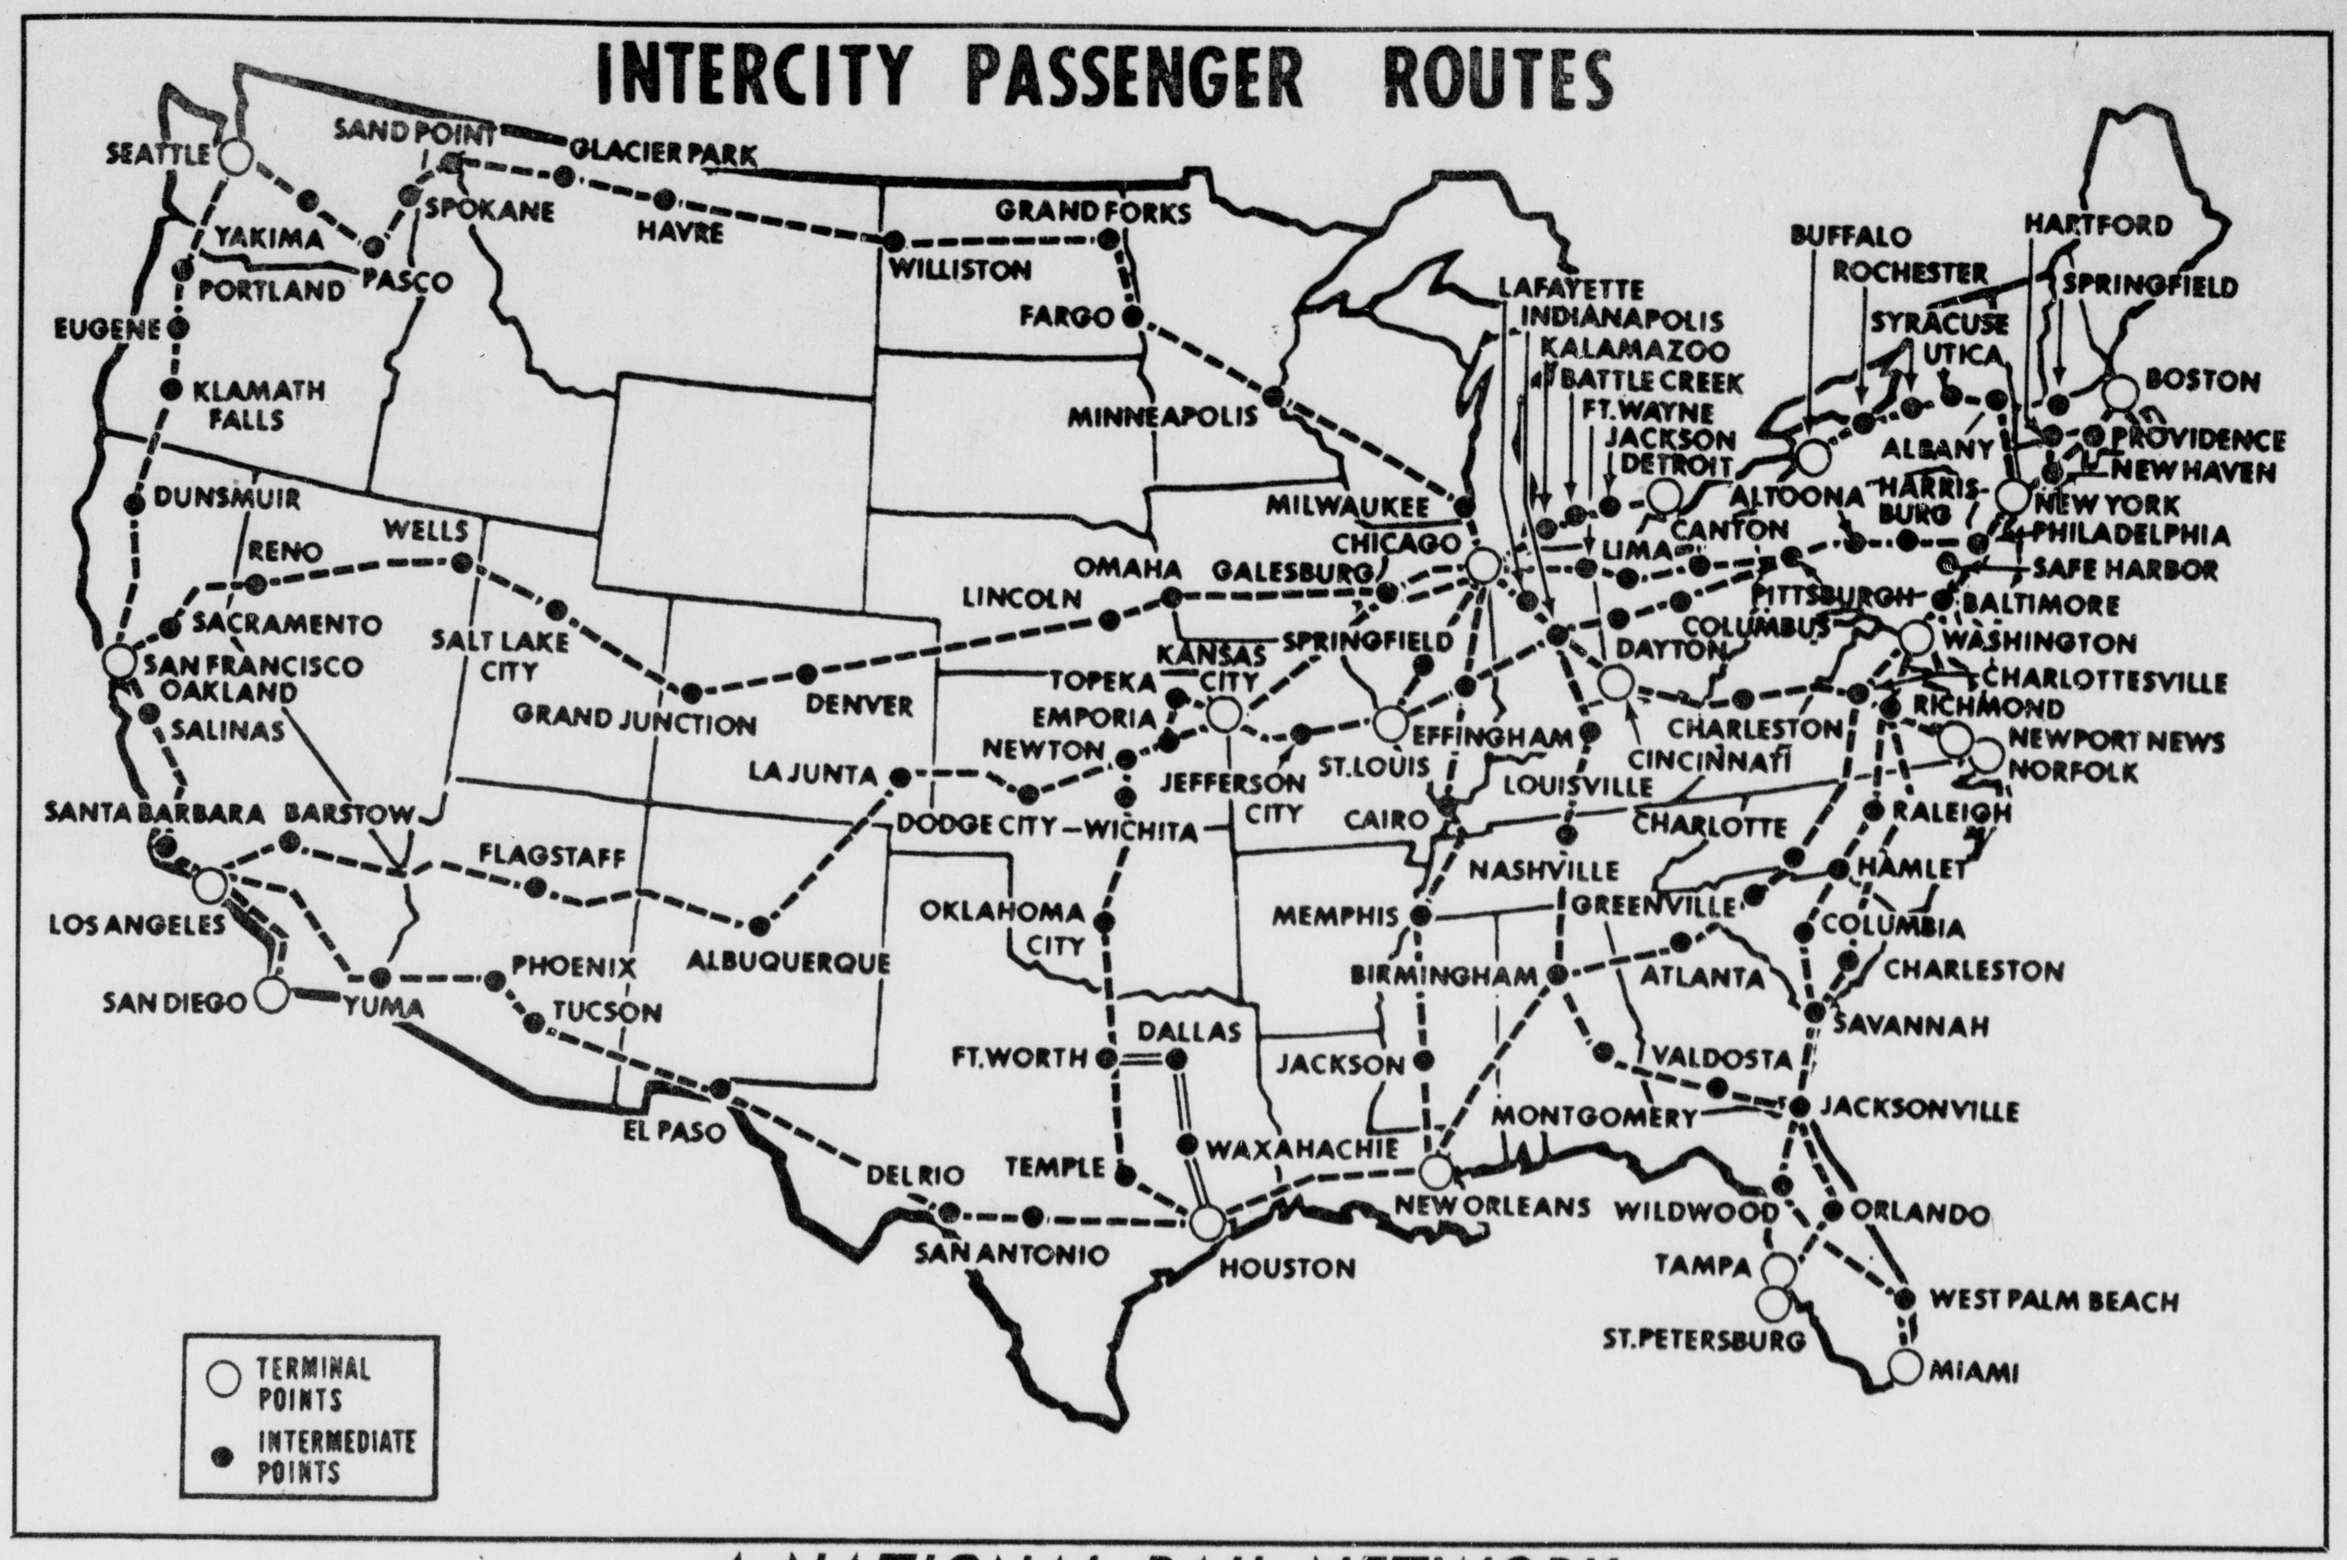
Sen. J. Fulbright, D-Ark., an opponent of the war and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, announced the committee would hold hearings on how to end the war. He said the administration had either been deceitful or used bad judgment in the invasion of Laos.

President Nixon ordered what he called "constraints" in construction wages and prices. Wage increases are to be limited to about six per cent a year.

The FBI reported that crime in America rose 11 per cent in 1970. Suburban police departments reported crime increases of 15 per cent, large cities only six per cent.

The Soviet Union made a concession at the Geneva disarmament conference. It agreed that a disarmament treaty need not cover chemical weapons — only biological.

The Soviet Communist party opened its 24th Congress.



A NATIONAL RAIL NETWORK

Railpax, the private corporation set up by Congress to save the nation's diminishing passenger trains, last week unveiled a rail network that will reach 114 cities and tie together 85 per cent of the nation's metropolitan areas. One of the proposed terminal points will be San Francisco, linking the Pacific Northwest, Southern California for train travel to the East through Sacramento and Reno. (UPI Telephoto map)

JULIE HELPS

Teen Corps Aids Youth

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) —One day last fall, Barbara Walters and Shirley Brauer gloomily looked out of their tiny office window. It was raining and they saw the denuded block where almost overnight their neighbors had been bulldozed aside for a freeway.

Their brainchild, Teen Corps, a volunteer youth employment service, had been on a starvation diet since they started it a year earlier. They had found jobs for 7,000 youths, most of them black and from the ghetto. But they had been unable to get any help from the federal government.

"Barbara was so depressed," Shirley recalls.

Then Barbara glanced at the arrow painted on the wall of the office. The arrow pointed upward and the words "Teen Corps" were emblazoned across it. She got an idea: why not go to the top?

She called Julie Nixon Eisenhower and invited her over.

Things began to happen. Mrs. Eisenhower visited Teen Corps headquarters, located within sight of the U.S. Capitol in one of Washington's worst poverty areas. The three young women got along fine.

Today, Teen Corps is within reach of a $50,000 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity and the equivalent of $54,000 in job training slots from the United Planning Organization, a District of Columbia antipoverty agency.

You can glimpse the dome of the Capitol over your left shoulder as you walk up to the old two-story building that houses the Teen Corps in four small rooms at the top of the stairs.

Pictures of Muhammad Ali (Cassius Clay), Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X are on the walls, along with posters warning about drugs. One reads, "Acid. Will It Turn You on, or Will It Turn on You?"

In a long, narrow room that looks like a miniature lecture hall are 25 folding chairs and a blackboard on a stand. On it are written instructions for job interviews: "Do's and Don'ts. 1. Be on time. 2. Be properly dressed. 3. Look pleasant. 4. Don't chew gum. 5. Go alone. 6. Don't use slang. 7. Tell the truth."

In another room, decorated with swirling designs of red and yellow and black, Irma Ellis, 15, wearing a navy blue pants outfit, sits at a desk. As youth supervisor she is responsible for the entire Teen Corps youth staff. She is a junior high student.

Youths who may have heard about Teen Corps through a counsellor at school or, more likely, a buddy, come in to fill out applications for help in getting a job.

After getting such basic information as age and address, one of Miss Ellis' interviewers asks the youth: Have you dropped out of school? Are you married? A parent? Are you on drugs? Do you have a police record? If so, for what? Can you type? Drive a car? Do you have special skills?

"We try to deal with their hangups," Mrs. Brauer says.

If the youth is a drop-out, he is encouraged to go back to school if he possibly can. About 200 have done so. If the youth is on drugs, he is referred to the right group. If he has a disability, he is sent to vocational rehabilitation.

If he has a police record, the employer is informed because Teen Corps feels it is important to be completely honest and open. But almost never has an employer had problems with a Teen Corps youth hired with a police record.

In a third room, Dennis Dupree, 17, sits at a desk neat and tidy enough to compliment a top-flight executive. He is Teen Corps' job developer.

His staff of youngsters systematically go through the want ads of Washington's daily newspapers and the telephone book's Yellow Pages. And they fan out through Washington's various neighborhood business districts. All are looking for the same thing: employers who will hire youths.

Do they ever get turned down? "Oh, sure," Dennis says matter-of-factly.

Eventually, Teen Corps tries to match the persons who apply with the jobs that are turned up in Dennis' office. In 14 months, Miss Walters says, 15,000 young persons have applied, and 7,000 have been placed.

Barbara Walters, 24, had been a job developer with the United Planning Organization for four years. In the summer of 1969 she went into the southwestern part of Washington and in six weeks she got 300 jobs for 300 teen-agers.

Her friend, Mrs. Shirley Brauer, 34, the mother of three and a correctional officer for the District of Columbia, went to help her. Together they called employers all over the city, got them to come to a job fair and persuaded youths to come for interviews. It worked.

Afterward, Barbara and Shirley, both of whom are black, talked about how they could do this on a large-scale, permanent basis. Teen Corps was born. And they had some ideas about their own staff.

Barbara and Shirley and Ernestine Morris are the oldest persons on the staff. All the others are teen-agers. Barbara is director, Mrs. Brauer associate director and Miss Morris is operations supervisor.

The Teen Corps staff goes through plenty of follow-up. The staff calls both the employer and the employe to see if there are problems.

If the employer says someone has been late two or three days this week, a staff member will call the youth to ask, in a gentle way, why? Does he have an alarm clock? Does he have transportation problems?

Most of the youths are placed in hamburger stands, as janitors, in gasoline stations, restaurants and department stores.

America's Image Abroad Worries New Information Service Chief

LONDON (UPI) —A New Yorker who moved to Britain to find "a better political climate" has taken lately to phoning the British Broadcasting Corporation and snarling: "So it's another anti-American night, eh?"

There are Americans who make the same protests from time to time to the networks of other European countries. They are reacting to a wave of criticism of the United States and most of its works sweeping the continent.

The expatriate New Yorker, for one, said it is turning him into — and he used to cringe at the word — a patriot.

Recently Frank Shakespeare, Director of the U.S. Information Service (USIS) left his Washington base for a quick trip to Europe to take a reading on the current state of the American image. He was a thoughtful man when he talked about it in Monaco where he had gone to look over the Monte Carlo Television Festival.

Shakespeare was only gathering information on this trip and not ready to announce any conclusions, but USIS is responsible for presenting the real America to the world and there was little joy in the reports he got from expert non-governmental observers who live respectively in Paris, Rome and London.

One of the few bright glimmers came from the London man who said those Britons taking advantage of the new low-rate tours to the United States were mostly returning enthusiastic about what they had seen. Often they returned home wondering why they had gotten so misleading an impression from their own media.

This advertising of the America most foreigners never see on their own TV or in the news columns of their newspapers is a U.S. Travel Service project that Shakespeare heartily endorses. That night in Monaco, at a dinner given by Prince Rainier and Princess Grace (who never forgets she was a Kelly of Philadelphia) he heard much criticism by America's admirers of the way the United States was being depicted abroad.

The general theme was that, because so much of the candid American soul-searching in films or on television is misunderstood when it is shown in other countries, it is a pity some of this cannot be kept at home. Shakespeare said there was absolutely no way of preventing the export of such material and no American administration would have it otherwise.

"That would be censorship," he said, "and I wouldn't be part of any government that wanted such censorship."

What Washington would like to see, if it were possible, would be "a good mix of opinions" in place of the heavily one-sided treatment of American affairs in some places.

Shakespeare has a number of ideas jelling. For one thing he thinks there should be more intensive American TV network participation in cultural events such as the Monte Carlo TV Festival and this will be encouraged for 1972. For another he is taking soundings on the idea of live television programs from the White House.

At the present stage he is thinking along the lines of something called "An Evening (or an Afternoon) at the White House" in which President Nixon would play host to American artists and to ambassadors. The broadcasts would go out live and would be transmitted overseas by satellite.

"There's a certain pizzaz to doing it live," said Shakespeare, who was a vice president of CBS-TV. He said Nixon had worried at one time about having television cameras in the White House. The success abroad of the "Duke Ellington at the White House" show may have inspired the new idea which is still in the discussion phase.

Another current USIS project that Shakespeare hopes will help set a good will pattern for the future is distribution of the Bell System Family Theatre TV program, "It Couldn't Be Done."

"Bell gave USIS the rights to place it around the world after it ran twice on NBC-TV," he said. "There's been very good reaction wherever it's been shown. It explains how obstacles of nature were overcome—the Hoover Dam, the Panama Canal, the tube under the Hudson River. You've got to be careful about what you show and where you show it. Sometimes what is meant to encourage a developing nation will discourage it by showing how far it has to go.

"But the achievements in this program were accomplished within a single lifetime and so they know anything is possible."

He said USIS would be happy to be given the international distribution rights to other films of this type.

"But it has to be completely voluntary on their part (the makers)", he said, "otherwise it looks like the long arm of government."

USIS will itself produce 20 major documentaries this year. Its productions run from one minute clips to 90-minute programs such as Gregory Peck's "The Infinite Journey" on the Apollo venture. Award-winning director John Ford is still working on a one-hour program on Vietnam—and has been for two years.

Behind The News

STUDENT ECOLOGISTS

Environment To Be Probed

By CHRIS MEAD

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—A pilot plan to translate the ecological zeal of college students from words into action is being drawn up in Michigan.

It's called the "Clean Earth Corps."

Its aim: to harness the energy of young environmentalists by sending them out in teams on conservation missions throughout the state during the summer.

Projects already planned for this summer include environmental studies in a northern inland lake, a shoreline study along a Great Lakes shoreline, and an urban environmental study of an inner-city Detroit neighborhood.

The state-backed project was born last summer at an "Earth Day" seminar at the University of Michigan. Gov. William G. Milliken was there, took mental note of students feeling, and set his ecology staff into motion.

The original plan, according to Jim Kellogg, Milliken's top environmental advisor, was to launch a full-scale summer youth program reminiscent of the civilian conservation corps of the depression years.

That approach Kellogg said, proved a disappointment because students did not respond as enthusiastically as expected. A more cautious approach evolved.

"At first we got mixed response from students —No general enthusiasm as we had hoped," Kellogg said. "So we sat down and decided to start out real slow with a pilot project."

The pilot project planned for this summer will set five teams of students, with about 10 students on each team, on five different environmental studies around Michigan.

If this approach works out — and the governor's environmental people are keeping their fingers crossed —the Clean Earth Corps could be expanded the following summer and eventually turn into the full-scale program.

The pilot project will require no outright state funding. Instead, local governments or private groups in the area to be studied will provide the student teams with compensation.

The state's role, Kellogg said, will be to offer research facilities, technical advice and general moral support.

"If the people involved are financing the projects, they will take a much greater interest," Kellogg reasoned. "We are following the philosophy that the most successful environmental programs are those where financing is done at the local level."

The pilot program is shifting into gear with the governor's office sending out notices to college students explaining the project and inviting applications. Some students already have sent in unsolicited requests to join up.

Students will be selected in terms of their interest in the environment, their general capability and their academic specialty.

"The important thing is that we proceed with well-prepared, well-organized projects," Kellogg said. "We must proceed very slowly and make sure we have interested students with a sincere commitment."

Bill Marks, head of the Water Resources Section of the Michigan Natural Resources Department, was guardedly optimistic about the Clean Earth Corps.

He is one of several state officials who will work with the student teams by providing technical advice and research facilities for a project at a northern inland lake.

"Assuming the governor's office maintains its interest, I'm enthusiastic," Marks said.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Lt. William L. Calley Jr. was convicted this week of murder of civilians at the hamlet of My Lai in South Vietnam in 1968.

The court-martial jury that convicted him sentenced him to life imprisonment, a sentence that will be reviewed and possibly reduced. Pending the review, President Nixon ordered Calley be released from the Ft. Benning, Ga., stockade and confined to his quarters on the base.

The jury that found Charles Manson and three female members of his "family" guilty of the Tate-Labianca murders voted they should be put to death in the gas chamber.

The Manson trial was the longest in California history. The defendants themselves were absent during the reading of the penalty finding, having been evicted by Judge Charles H. Older for unruly behavior.

The U.S. Board of Parole this week denied parole to James R. Hoffa, the president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters who is imprisoned in Lewisburg, Pa. His application will not be considered again until June, 1972. Hoffa was convicted of mail fraud and jury tampering.

The United States made plans to evacuate U.S. citizens from East Pakistan where civil strife broke out more than a week ago. Censorship was tight, but late in the week Radio Pakistan said the major cities and countryside of East Pakistan were calm.

Communist forces overran a U.S. Army artillery base near Da Nang in northern South Vietnam. Thirty-three American soldiers were killed —the most in one action in eight months.

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu said the recent incursion into Laos was Saigon's "biggest victory ever." He said the objectives of destroying Communist supply lines and stockpiles had been accomplished.

House Democrats, in a 138-62 caucus vote, called for an end of U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia by the beginning of 1973. Doves had argued that the pullout of troops should be completed by the end of this year.

Two conservative Democrats from Gerogia— John J. Flynt Jr. and Phil M. Landrun — announced their opposition to the war and said they would not vote for extension of the draft. The House did vote, 293-131, to continue the draft until mid-1973. The bill gives servicemen sizable pay increases — a move toward an all-volunteer military.

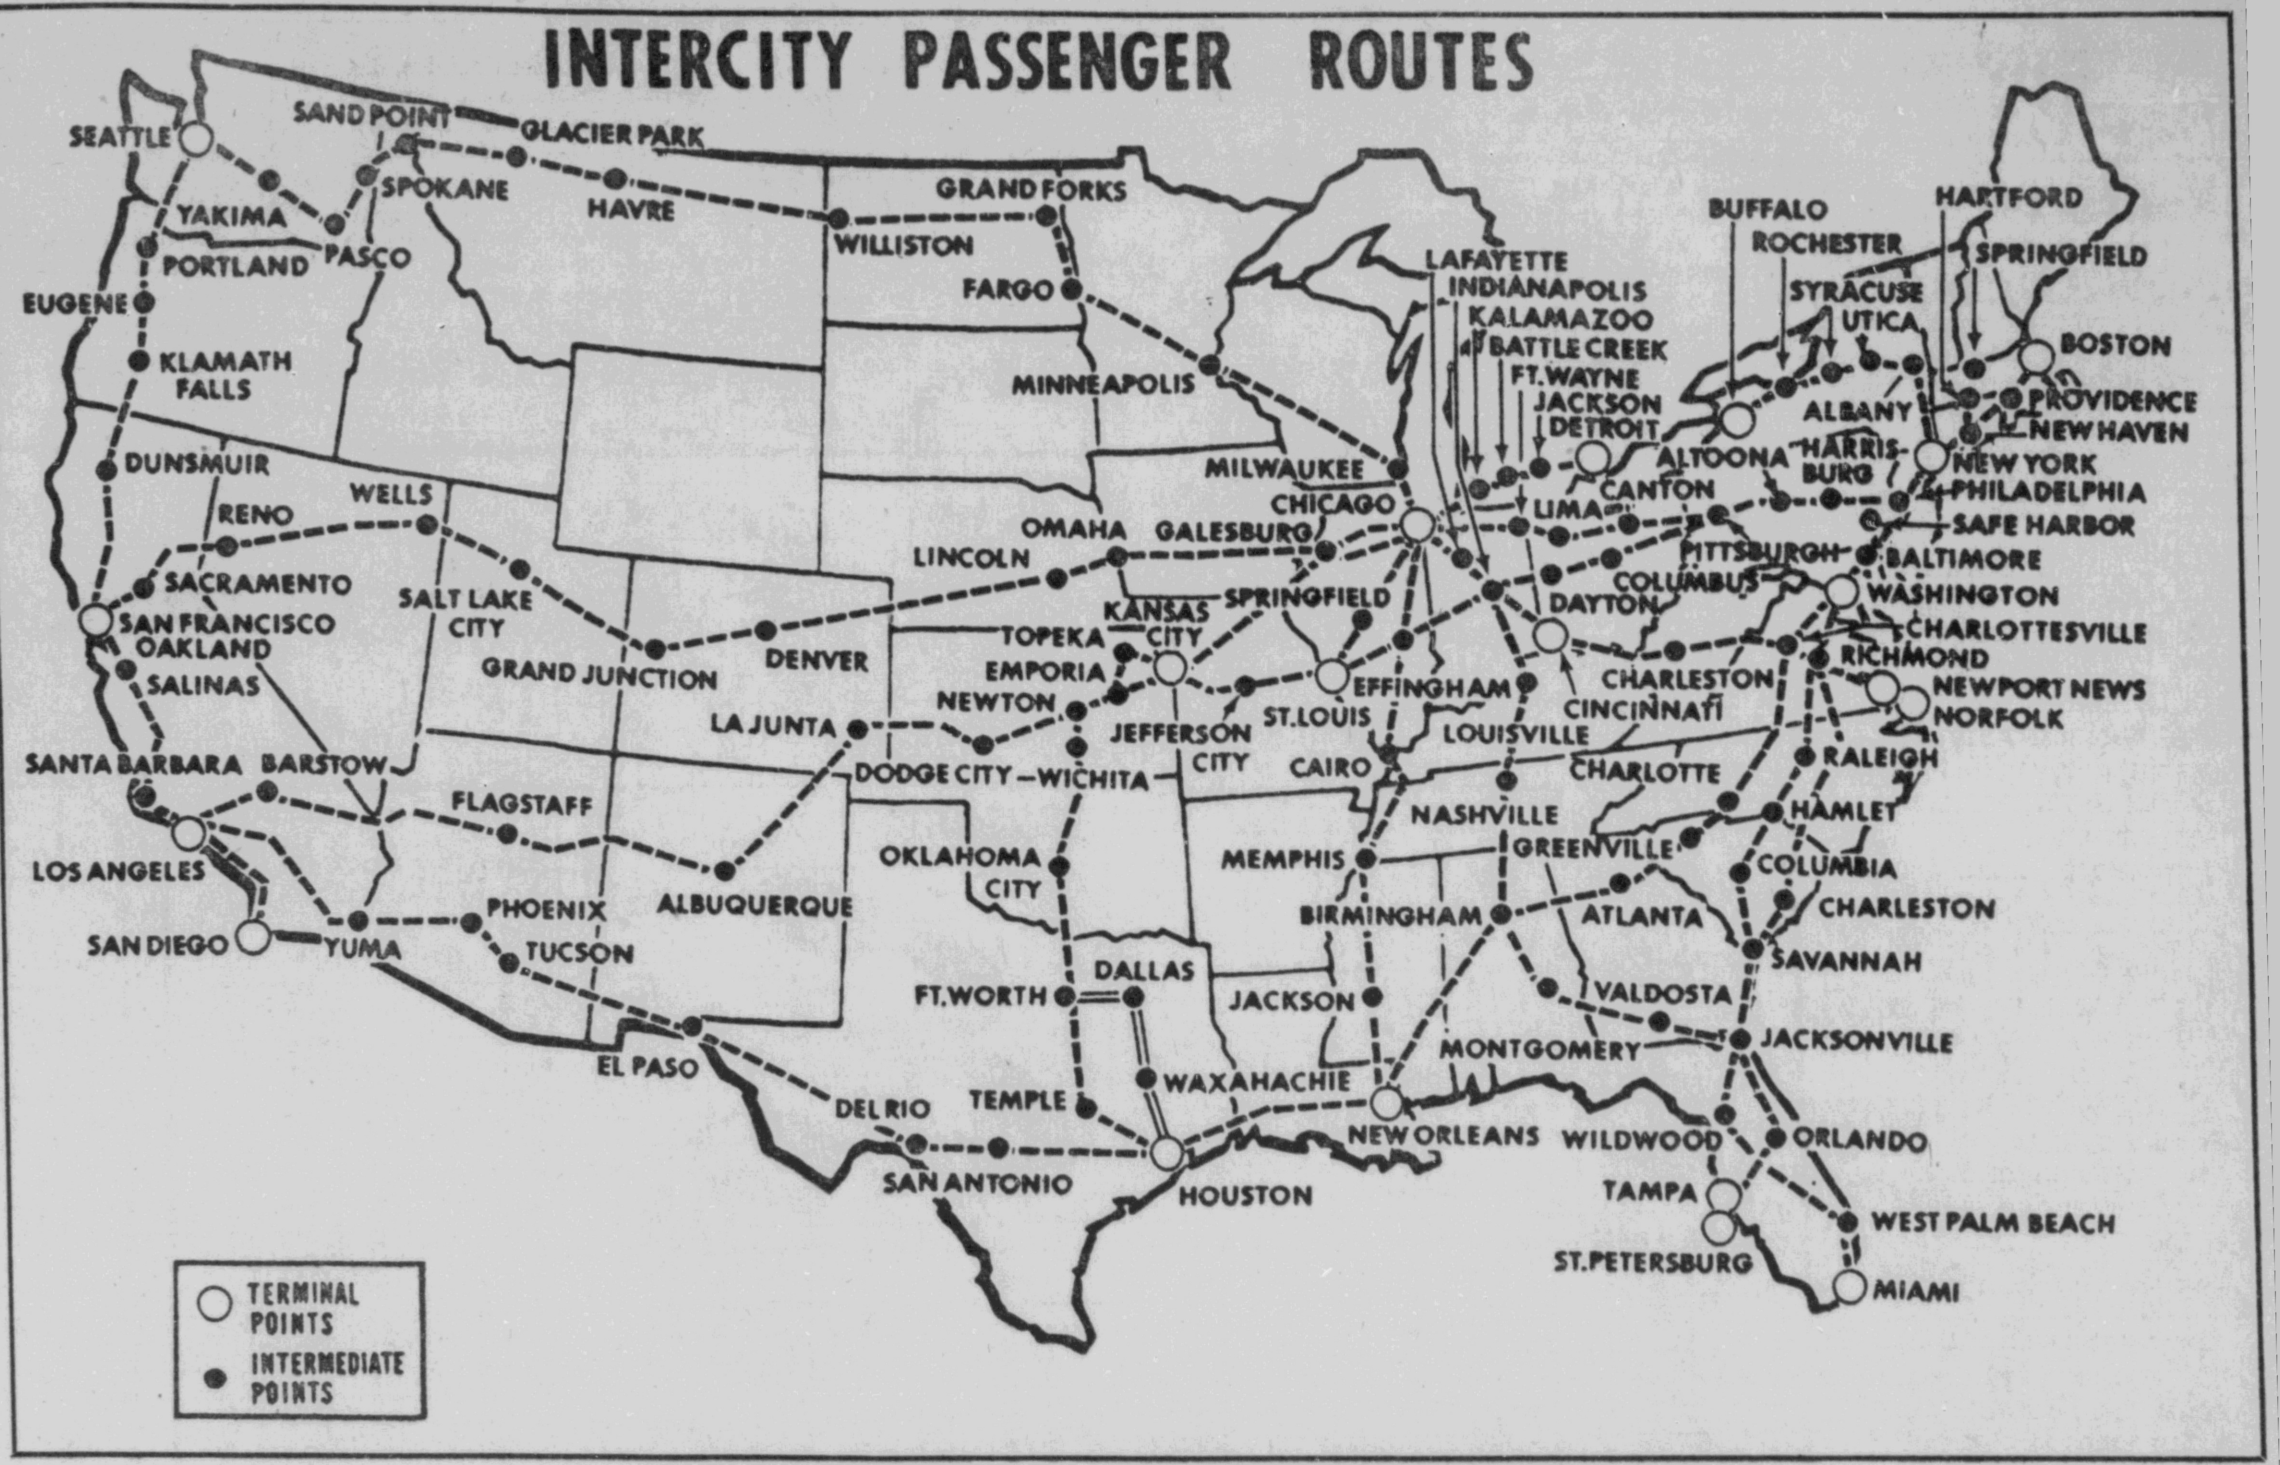
Sen. J. Fulbright, D-Ark., an opponent of the war and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, announced the committee would hold hearings on how to end the war. He said the administration had either been deceitful or used bad judgment in the invasion of Laos.

President Nixon ordered what he called "constraints" in construction wages and prices. Wage increases are to be limited to about six per cent a year.

The FBI reported that crime in America rose 11 per cent in 1970. Suburban police departments reported crime increases of 15 per cent, large cities only six per cent.

The Soviet Union made a concession at the Geneva disarmament conference. It agreed that a disarmament treaty need not cover chemical weapons — only biological.

The Soviet Communist party opened its 24th Congress.



A NATIONAL RAIL NETWORK

Railpax, the private corporation set up by Congress to save the nation's diminishing passenger trains, last week unveiled a rail network that will reach 114 cities and tie together 85 per cent of the nation's metropolitan areas. One of the proposed terminal points will be San Francisco, linking the Pacific Northwest, Southern California for train travel to the East through Sacramento and Reno.

JULIE HELPS

Teen Corps Aids Youth

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) —One day last fall, Barbara Walters and Shirley Brauer gloomily looked out of their tiny office window. It was raining and they saw the denuded block where almost overnight their neighbors had been bulldozed aside for a freeway.

Their brainchild, Teen Corps, a volunteer youth employment service, had been on a starvation diet since they started it a year earlier. They had found jobs for 7,000 youths, most of them black and from the ghetto. But they had been unable to get any help from the federal government.

"Barbara was so depressed," Shirley recalls.

Then Barbara glanced at the arrow painted on the wall of the office. The arrow pointed upward and the words "Teen Corps" were emblazoned across it. She got an idea: why not go to the top?

She called Julie Nixon Eisenhower and invited her over.

Things began to happen. Mrs. Eisenhower visited Teen Corps headquarters, located within sight of the U.S. Capitol in one of Washington's worst poverty areas. The three young women got along fine.

Today, Teen Corps is within reach of a $50,000 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity and the equivalent of $54,000 in job training slots from the United Planning Organization, a District of Columbia antipoverty agency.

You can glimpse the dome of the Capitol over your left shoulder as you walk up to the old two-story building that houses the Teen Corps in four small rooms at the top of the stairs.

Pictures of Muhammad Ali (Cassius Clay), Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X are on the walls, along with posters warning about drugs. One reads, "Acid. Will It Turn You on, or Will It Turn on You?"

In a long, narrow room that looks like a miniature lecture hall are 25 folding chairs and a blackboard on a stand. On it are written instructions for job interviews: "Do's and Don'ts. 1. Be on time. 2. Be properly dressed. 3. Look pleasant. 4. Don't chew gum. 5. Go alone. 6. Don't use slang. 7. Tell the truth."

In another room, decorated with swirling designs of red and yellow and black, Irma Ellis, 15, wearing a navy blue pants outfit, sits at a desk. As youth supervisor she is responsible for the entire Teen Corps youth staff. She is a junior high student.

Youths who may have heard about Teen Corps through a counsellor at school or, more likely, a buddy, come in to fill out applications for help in getting a job.

After getting such basic information as age and address, one of Miss Ellis' interviewers asks the youth: Have you dropped out of school? Are you married? A parent? Are you on drugs? Do you have a police record? If so, for what? Can you type? Drive a car? Do you have special skills?

"We try to deal with their hangups," Mrs. Brauer says.

If the youth is a drop-out, he is encouraged to go back to school if he possibly can. About 200 have done so. If the youth is on drugs, he is referred to the right group. If he has a disability, he is sent to vocational rehabilitation.

If he has a police record, the employer is informed because Teen Corps feels it is important to be completely honest and open. But almost never has an employer had problems with a Teen Corps youth hired with a police record.

In a third room, Dennis Dupree, 17, sits at a desk neat and tidy enough to compliment a top-flight executive. He is Teen Corps' job developer.

His staff of youngsters systematically go through the want ads of Washington's daily newspapers and the telephone book's Yellow Pages. And they fan out through Washington's various neighborhood business districts. All are looking for the same thing: employers who will hire youths.

Do they ever get turned down? "Oh, sure," Dennis says matter-of-factly.

Eventually, Teen Corps tries to match the persons who apply with the jobs that are turned up in Dennis' office. In 14 months, Miss Walters says, 15,000 young persons have applied, and 7,000 have been placed.

Barbara Walters, 24, had been a job developer with the United Planning Organization for four years. In the summer of 1969 she went into the southwestern part of Washington and in six weeks she got 300 jobs for 300 teen-agers.

Her friend, Mrs. Shirley Brauer, 34, the mother of three and a correctional officer for the District of Columbia, went to help her. Together they called employers all over the city, got them to come to a job fair and persuaded youths to come for interviews. It worked.

Afterward, Barbara and Shirley, both of whom are black, talked about how they could do this on a large-scale, permanent basis. Teen Corps was born. And they had some ideas about their own staff.

Barbara and Shirley and Ernestine Morris are the oldest persons on the staff. All the others are teen-agers. Barbara is director, Mrs. Brauer associate director and Miss Morris is operations supervisor.

The Teen Corps staff goes through plenty of follow-up. The staff calls both the employer and the employe to see if there are problems.

If the employer says someone has been late two or three days this week, a staff member will call the youth to ask, in a gentle way, why? Does he have an alarm clock? Does he have transportation problems?

Most of the youths are placed in hamburger stands, as janitors, in gasoline stations, restaurants and department stores.

JOB APPLICANT — Garfield Freeman (R) is applying for a job in the office of the Teen Corps in Washington. Doris Bliss (L), Bernadette Brooks and Ronald Nesbit are workers for the Corps. Struggling along on a starvation budget since its founding 14 months ago, the Corps found a friend in Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and she helped the youth-run organization find more funds.

Behind The News

STUDENT ECOLOGISTS

Environment To Be Probed

By CHRIS MEAD

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—A pilot plan to translate the ecological zeal of college students from words into action is being drawn up in Michigan.

It's called the "Clean Earth Corps."

Its aim: to harness the energy of young environmentalists by sending them out in teams on conservation missions throughout the state during the summer.

Projects already planned for this summer include environmental studies in a northern inland lake, a shoreline study along a Great Lakes shoreline, and an urban environmental study of an inner-city Detroit neighborhood.

The state-backed project was born last summer at an "Earth Day" seminar at the University of Michigan. Gov. William G. Milliken was there, took mental note of students feeling, and set his ecology staff into motion.

The original plan, according to Jim Kellogg, Milliken's top environmental advisor, was to launch a full-scale summer youth program reminiscent of the civilian conservation corps of the depression years.

That approach Kellogg said, proved a disappointment because students did not respond as enthusiastically as expected. A more cautious approach evolved.

"At first we got mixed response from students —No general enthusiasm as we had hoped," Kellogg said. "So we sat down and decided to start out real slow with a pilot project."

The pilot project planned for this summer will set five teams of students, with about 10 students on each team, on five different environmental studies around Michigan.

If this approach works out — and the governor's environmental people are keeping their fingers crossed —the Clean Earth Corps could be expanded the following summer and eventually turn into the full-scale program.

The pilot project will require no outright state funding. Instead, local governments or private groups in the area to be studied will provide the student teams with compensation.

The state's role, Kellogg said, will be to offer research facilities, technical advice and general moral support.

"If the people involved are financing the projects, they will take a much greater interest," Kellogg reasoned. "We are following the philosophy that the most successful environmental programs are those where financing is done at the local level."

The pilot program is shifting into gear with the governor's office sending out notices to college students explaining the project and inviting applications. Some students already have sent in unsolicited requests to join up.

Students will be selected in terms of their interest in the environment, their general capability and their academic specialty.

"The important thing is that we proceed with well-prepared, well-organized projects," Kellogg said. "We must proceed very slowly and make sure we have interested students with a sincere commitment."

Bill Marks, head of the Water Resources Section of the Michigan Natural Resources Department, was guardedly optimistic about the Clean Earth Corps.

He is one of several state officials who will work with the student teams by providing technical advice and research facilities for a project at a northern inland lake.

"Assuming the governor's office maintains its interest, I'm enthusiastic," Marks said.

America's Image Abroad Worries New Information Service Chief

LONDON (UPI) —A New Yorker who moved to Britain to find "a better political climate" has taken lately to phoning the British Broadcasting Corporation and snarling: "So it's another anti-American night, eh?"

There are Americans who make the same protests from time to time to the networks of other European countries. They are reacting to a wave of criticism of the United States and most of its works sweeping the continent.

The expatriate New Yorker, for one, said it is turning him into — and he used to cringe at the word — a patriot.

Recently Frank Shakespeare, Director of the U.S. Information Service (USIS) left his Washington base for a quick trip to Europe to take a reading on the current state of the American image. He was a thoughtful man when he talked about it in Monaco where he had gone to look over the Monte Carlo Television Festival.

Shakespeare was only gathering information on this trip and not ready to announce any conclusions, but USIS is responsible for presenting the real America to the world and there was little joy in the reports he got from expert non-governmental observers who live respectively in Paris, Rome and London.

One of the few bright glimmers came from the London man who said those Britons taking advantage of the new low-rate tours to the United States were mostly returning enthusiastic about what they had seen. Often they returned home wondering why they had gotten so misleading an impression from their own media.

This advertising of the America most foreigners never see on their own TV or in the news columns of their newspapers is a U.S. Travel Service project that Shakespeare heartily endorses. That night in Monaco, at a dinner given by Prince Rainier and Princess Grace (who never forgets she was a Kelly of Philadelphia) he heard much criticism by America's admirers of the way the United States was being depicted abroad.

The general theme was that, because so much of the candid American soul-searching in films or on television is misunderstood when it is shown in other countries, it is a pity some of this cannot be kept at home. Shakespeare said there was absolutely no way of preventing the export of such material and no American administration would have it otherwise.

"That would be censorship," he said, "and I wouldn't be part of any government that wanted such censorship."

What Washington would like to see, if it were possible, would be "a good mix of opinions" in place of the heavily one-sided treatment of American affairs in some places.

Shakespeare has a number of ideas jelling. For one thing he thinks there should be more intensive American TV network participation in cultural events such as the Monte Carlo TV Festival and this will be encouraged for 1972. For another he is taking soundings on the idea of live television programs from the White House.

At the present stage he is thinking along the lines of something called "An Evening (or an Afternoon) at the White House" in which President Nixon would play host to American artists and to ambassadors. The broadcasts would go out live and would be transmitted overseas by satellite.

"There's a certain pizzaz to doing it live," said Shakespeare, who was a vice president of CBS-TV. He said Nixon had worried at one time about having television cameras in the White House. The success abroad of the "Duke Ellington at the White House" show may have inspired the new idea which is still in the discussion phase.

Another current USIS project that Shakespeare hopes will help set a good will pattern for the future is distribution of the Bell System Family Theatre TV program, "It Couldn't Be Done."

"Bell gave USIS the rights to place it around the world after it ran twice on NBC-TV," he said. "There's been very good reaction wherever it's been shown. It explains how obstacles of nature were overcome—the Hoover Dam, the Panama Canal, the tube under the Hudson River. You've got to be careful about what you show and where you show it. Sometimes what is meant to encourage a developing nation will discourage it by showing how far it has to go.

"But the achievements in this program were accomplished within a single lifetime and so they know anything is possible."

He said USIS would be happy to be given the international distribution rights to other films of this type.

"But it has to be completely voluntary on their part (the makers)", he said, "otherwise it looks like the long arm of government."

USIS will itself produce 20 major documentaries this year. Its productions run from one minute clips to 90-minute programs such as Gregory Peck's "The Infinite Journey" on the Apollo venture. Award-winning director John Ford is still working on a one-hour program on Vietnam—and has been for two years.

New Bus Route Is Now Going

The Central Marin bus service started its new Saturday run today between Novato and Kentfield.

James B. Robertson, acting general manager of the Marin County Transit District, said the Saturday operation is from about 9 a.m. to about 6 p.m. between Novato and Kentfield.

He said more runs were also added to the weekday service. From Monday through Friday, the buses run every hour, beginning at 6:39 a.m. from San Marin Drive in Novato. The buses take about an hour and 15 minutes to get to College of Marin.

Northbound buses leave College of Marin every hour, beginning at 7:15 a.m. and continuing through 4:30 p.m.

The service is provided by Marin Transit Systems Inc., a private firm in Marin City, under contract with the Golden Gate Bridge District. Operating losses are subsidized by funds from the Marin County Transit District.

Assembly Backs Lower Vote Age

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly has approved a proposed constitutional amendment lowering California's voting age to 18.

However, the lower chamber Thursday rejected an attempt to give the 18-21 age group such adult privileges as drinking alcoholic beverages.

The vote proposal by Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, went to the Senate which previously adopted a similar measure. The vote was 60 to 9 with the rejection votes coming from Republicans.

There are several measures before the Legislature to lower the voting age.

The adult privileges amendment to Brown's bill was proposed by Assemblyman John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton. It failed by a 29-37 vote.

Domestic Talk For First Lady

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—First lady Pat Nixon, wives of cabinet and government officers, and top women in government will be briefed next Wednesday on domestic affairs.

The unprecedented meeting will be conducted in the cabinet room of the White House by John D. Ehrlichman, the President's assistant for domestic affairs.

Early in his administration, Nixon said he wanted the wives to be involved and to attend cabinet meetings at times. Two cabinet wives, Martha Mitchell and Mrs. George Romney, keep up on national affairs and speak out on them.

VD 'Epidemic' Alarms Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan blames permissiveness for the spread of venereal disease in California.

Reagan agreed Thursday with recent reports that the problem has reached "epidemic" proportions.

The governor told a news conference the problem is caused by "permissiveness, the spreading of the belief that old standards of morality don't apply, the recommending that abortion is an easy answer to those who want to give in to their own desires ... the toleration of the commune type of living, the Haight-Ashbury syndrome ..."

Ex-Felon Can Sue On Magazine Expose

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court ruled yesterday a convict who has paid his debt to society can sue a magazine that exposes his criminal record long after the event.

In a unanimous opinion, the court reinstated a damage suit filed by an ex-convict against Readers Digest for a story which recounted an 11-year-old crime.

An ex-felon has a right to privacy after he has been rehabilitated and rejoined "the anonymous bulk of the community" if he does nothing otherwise to attract public attention, the court ruled.

The magazine's article on the defendant, Marvin Briscoe, said truthfully that he had hijacked a truck and engaged in a police shoot-out 11 years earlier. Briscoe sued for $1 million, arguing that he was completely rehabilitated and the article subjected him to scorn.

"Identification of the actor in reports of long-past crimes usually serves little independent public purpose," the opinion said.

In unique cases, "an individual whose name is fixed in the public memory such as that of the political assassin, never becomes an anonymous member of the community again," the opinion said, but not all convicts were in this class.

The court said it did not hold that Briscoe should win his suit but merely that he had a right to press it.

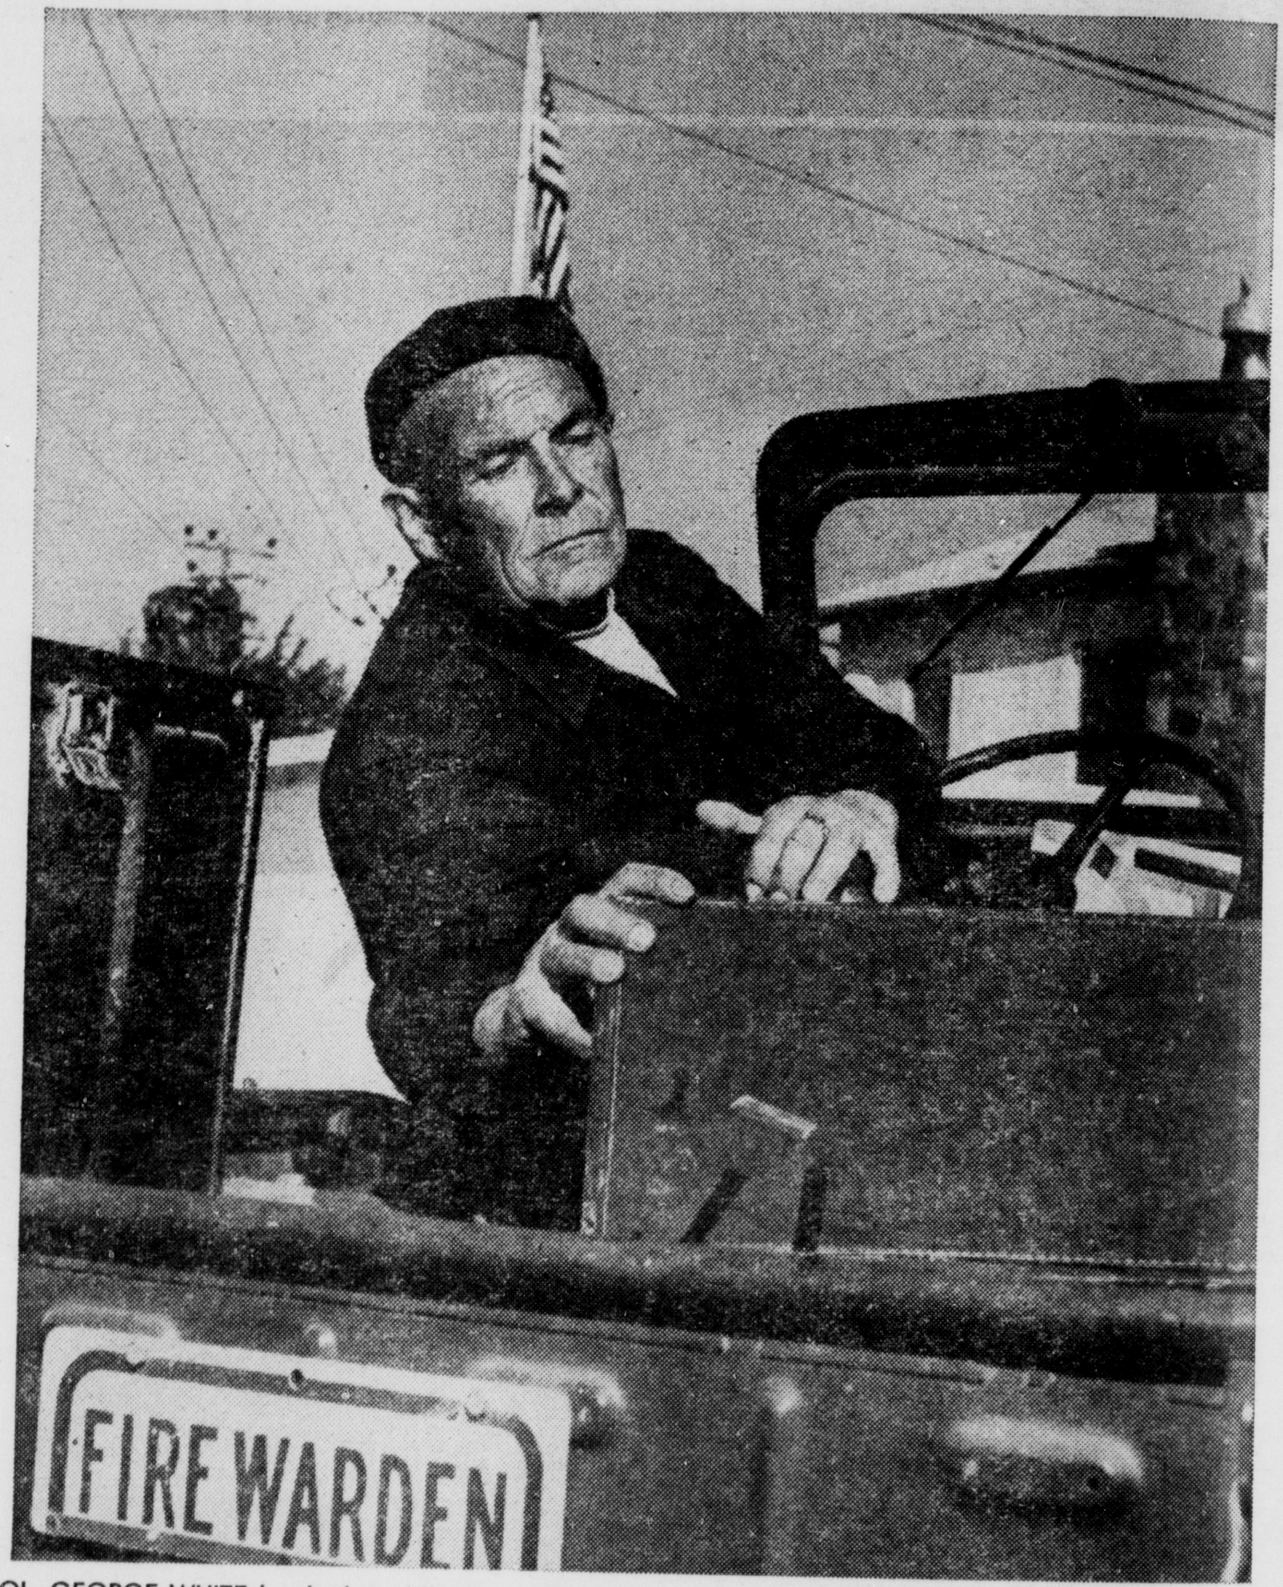
Col. George White, Undercover Agent

The Colorful Career Of An Arch-Foe Of Narcotics

By PAT ANGLE



COL. GEORGE WHITE has had no difficulty making the transformation from a two-decade career as an adventurous undercover agent and supervisor for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics to the quieter, semi-retired existence of rural resident and volunteer fire chief at Stinson Beach. He still keeps his hand in law enforcement as a consultant to police agencies and as a special deputy for the Marin County sheriff's department.

Col. George White may look like just another mild-mannered volunteer fire chief as he zooms around Stinson Beach in his sprightly red fire jeep.

But behind that ordinary exterior is a man who has carved a fantastic career of adventure throughout the world, a life charged with more drama, intrigue and hair-raising escapes from death than most television script writers could devise in their wildest fantasies.

For nearly two decades White played one of the most dangerous games imaginable as a top undercover agent for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. When his face became too well known to narcotics kingpins from India to Turkey, he was made a district supervisor for the bureau. He headed operations in the Medwest, New England and the West Coast until his retirement — for reasons of health — in 1966.

THE BURLY, balding White looks like a cross between Ian Fleming's "Goldfinger" and Mr. Clean. With the right clothes he could probably pass for a Midwestern business man or, just as easily, for a Mafia chieftain.

But his sharp blue eyes don't seem to miss much and his quick, wry wit and incisive intelligence make his incredible exploits believable.

As a young agent in the 1930s, he became the only non-Chinese ever to gain membership in the formidable Hip Sing tong, a large and powerful "family association" which flourished and ruled in the United States during the first three decades of this century.

WHITE'S WORK with the Hip Sings resulted in the virtual eradication of a massive opium and narcotics syndicate with bases from New York to Hong Kong. His undercover infiltration also brought about the arrest of several of the tong's top leaders.

He was the first federal narcotics agent ever to be sent abroad to investigate the sources of drug traffic into this country. Posing as an American gangster and narcotics buyer he smashed large dope rings in the Middle East, Marseilles, India, Mexico and South America.

During his travels, White has: shot his way out of a Marseilles dive when pushers pegged him as an agent, killed a Japanese spy in a gun battle in India and toppled the Houston, Tex., city government during an investigation of the involvement of that city in narcotics.

DURING WORLD War II, he took time out from his "routine" job to work in counter intelligence and set up a school to train counter espionage agents.

As a "lesson" for his students, he smuggled himself into North Africa before the Allied landings and organized Arab resistance groups to begin sabotage activities against the Germans.

"Another childish dream come true," White joked.

He obtained evidence which helped to deport narcotics chieftain Charles (Lucky) Luciano. And, when the Kefauver Committee began investigating organized crime and the rackets, they called on George White to assist them.

DURING THE Truman administration he was an assistant to Newbold Morse, a prominent socialite Republican appointed by President Harry S. Truman to ferret out corruption in government. A questionnaire he helped devise, asking government employees to list their wealth, assets and sources of income, caused the downfall of Atty. Gen. Howard McGrath, fired by Truman when he refused to answer the questions.

The 63-year-old White received the Treasury department's Medal for Exceptional Service in 1949, the greatest honor the department can bestow on one of its agents.

ALL IN ALL, it has been a pretty heady career for a former newspaperman who decided "to go honest" and get into law enforcement "because I thought doing what a cop does would be more interesting than writing about it."

White decided on narcotics work because "the narcotics police got a little more action and had greater freedom than regular police. I felt it would be more challenging."

The work was dangerous but, most importantly, it was "fun — kid stuff," according to the former agent.

"WHEN I WAS a small boy, all the kids on my block wanted to be railroad engineers, policemen, firemen, lifeguards, soldiers, cowboys or spies," he recalled. "Well, I've never been a railroad engineer or cowboy. . .but I've managed all the rest."

These holes are common in garments of "do-it-yourself-ers." It's well to have such a person around the house, however, he should be careful to wear old clothing when handling storage or automobile batteries or laboratory chemicals.

WHEN A SAN FRANCISCO narcotics dealer by the name of Haig Terzian was nabbed in 1957 by Col. George White and his West Coast agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, they uncovered something more than illicit drugs. In the Terzian home they found 13 guns, ammunition, a gas gun, hand grenades and dynamite. "I'm a gun collector," explained Terzian. Colonel White was pictured pondering the munitions hoard.

Col. George White Has Made Adjustment To The Quieter Life Of The Country

White is a man of surprises which tend to demolish any stereotypes of a "super nark" which the younger generation may cherish.

George White has sent thousands of men to prison, but he hasn't made moral judgments of them.

"I don't dislike criminals; I have a lot of friends who are murderers," he said. "When I used to hang around with gangster types, I had very good times in their company."

HE HAS IDEAS about why people use narcotics and turn to crime, but prefers to keep his thoughts on the sociology of crime to himself. He wishes the sociologists would return the favor — when it comes to the subject of police work.

"As an agent, I didn't care why the chickens were stolen. It was my job to find the chicken thieves," he explained.

His ideas about drugs are predictable (he's against them, including marijuana), but his politics are not. He refuses to give his opinion of Federal Bureau of Investigation Director J. Edgar Hoover (at least publicly), except to say he doesn't think much of Hoover.

THE POLITICIAN who impressed him most — and not many politicians have impressed White — was Robert F. Kennedy, whom he termed "a great guy, a great attorney general, a man with a great sense of humor."

"I knew Robert Kennedy personally, but I can't claim him as a friend," he said. "But I know he really wanted to know about crime and corruption and the other problems in this country. He really wanted to do something to correct the problems.

"And Kennedy would remember what you told him. Once he came out to California for a briefing on crime and, during hours of discussion, I happened to mention a Salinas police chief we were trying to get the goods on for narcotics violations and burglary. When Kennedy came back six months later we were talking to him again and he said: 'Say, whatever became of that guy in Salinas, that police chief? I've been thinking about him. Whatever happened in that case?'"

"HE COULD have been a wonderful President," White said, a bit wistfully.

On the other hand, the former agent dismissed Richard Nixon as "a shrewd opportunist, a nothing," an opinion dispelling the myth that all policemen are right-wing Republicans and supporters of the status quo.

What does a man like George White do for an encore? After all the excitement of his past life, can he really slip into a life of retirement in Stinson Beach without shriveling up from boredom?

HE ACTUALLY can and in fact enjoys the rural life. His third wife, Albertine, a buyer for Macy's, travels all over the world and is away from home much of the time, leaving Colonel White to his own devices.

But he manages to keep busy. "I don't drink. I go to bed early. When the fire bell rings, I see to the fire-fighting. I run around in my jeep and pull people out of the sand."

He also keeps "the volunteer firemen reasonably happy," keeps "them from fighting," delivers an occasional baby, "chases the bad hippies" (he laughs), and serves as a consultant to policemen and federal agents and as a special deputy for the Marin County sheriff's department.

IN HIS SPARE time, White carries on a voluminous correspondence with persons all over the world, many of them in law

While in Europe, pick up an ugly European.

We can arrange your rendezvous with a bug (or any other Volkswagen) in 40 cities in 15 countries.

And that includes the handling of those nasty details like insurance, registration and licensing.

So all that's left for you to do is enjoy the benefits of driving your own VW in Europe. The low operating costs, for example. Or being able to go where tour buses fear to tread. (And still be only a stone's throw away from one of Europe's 5,000 VW Dealers.)

Then, after the tour's over, we'll arrange to have your car sent back through something we call TASP (Tourist Automobile Shipping Program).

So you can keep on enjoying that ugly European you picked up while in Europe.

enforcement or fields related to drugs.

He is currently enjoying a humorous, wittily-nasty correspondence with John Kaplan, the Stanford law professor who rose to fame and fortune with his book "Marijuana: the New Prohibition" that advocates legalization of the drug.

Some day White would like to incorporate some of his ideas and observations on law enforcement and the courts into an autobiography.

WHITE BELIEVES that law enforcement today is in "good, even excellent shape" and that the caliber of policemen and police services "has improved immeasurably in the last 20 years."

But he readily admits many problems still exist and must be dealt with before the system can work as it should.

White's harshest criticisms, are directed against lawyers, judges and the courts. He believes judges, once elected or appointed, are placed in "cushy," life-time jobs, and almost assured they will remain on the bench forever. Consequently, he feels judges have become insensitive to the wishes of the public they represent and have given the public "poor protection against criminals by being permissive to people already spoiled by a permissive society."

THE FORMER agent made a study of drug arrests in Marin last year and discovered "thousands of people" had been arrested. Of the "hundreds" finally convicted, he said one or two were sent to prison and some spent weekends or short terms in the county jail.

But he discovered the "vast majority" received probation, even though the already overburdened county probation staff is "not adequate" to supervise such large numbers of cases.

"People inclined to use drugs in Marin need fear no retribution from the law, so the law acts as no deterrent," he complained. "And nobody goes to jail for drunk driving, even though it's only luck that most drunk drivers haven't killed a couple of people."

WHITE FEELS the media should keep box scores on what various judges are doing, particularly in the area of sentencing. This would not be designed to intimidate judges, but "because they are supposed to represent the people, just as congressmen are."

He feels judges should stand for election like other public officials, but admits "very few lawyers are willing to risk the ire of a sitting judge by running against him" hence few contests in judicial elections.

But, if the electorate was informed what each judge was doing and had some way of evaluating his performance, he feels more groups would get together and encourage lawyers to run against judges they did not approve of.

WHITE CHASTISED lawyers for "stirring up frivolous litigation" and clogging the courts, making impossible the "swift, sure, severe punishment" he feels is the only effective crime deterrent. He suggested all suits be reviewed by a referee, possibly a bright law student who could dismiss frivolous suits before they ever came to court.

In addition, White suggested judges work longer hours and insist lawyers appear, ready to proceed, on trial dates "instead of granting everlasting" continuances.

"These continuances are not only time-consuming, but they are the bane of a policeman's life, because he must get witnesses and evidence together each time a trial date is set." He said the court should decide on the date of a trial or hearing — not the lawyer — who should be forced to arrange his schedule to the court's convenience.

A CRACKED news service photograph shows George White, at left, seated beside the late Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee at a hearing during the time when White was assisting that determined foe of organized crime in his investigations of the rackets. White's reputation as an agent for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics was already well established.

IF THE COURT system is really going to dispense justice, the compulsion to gain victory — on the part of both defense lawyers and prosecutors — must be removed, he thinks, possibly by enforcement of a strict canon of ethics for both.

"The successful criminal lawyer doesn't give a damn about justice," according to White. "He is only concerned with having his client found innocent and will use any means, whether ethical or not, to accomplish this goal."

And he said district attorneys are just as determined to "obtain a string of convictions without blemish of a single acquittal."

The former agent thinks the courts have been derelict in protecting the public against "criminal predators" by allowing offenders to escape prosecution on "legal technicalities" such as illegal search.

WHITE ADMITS the courts moved to protect people who were being harassed by police because of race, life style or political beliefs, and that police problems of losing cases on technicalities result largely from past police misconduct. (White during his long career produced evidence for thousands of court cases and says he lost but three).

Legal loopholes were first used during prohibition because judges and prosecutors hated to punish persons for breaking such an unpopular law, and were later called up to protect minorities, for example, black people.

"But unfortunately," White continued, "these civil liberties laws apply not only to drinkers and Negroes, but to murderers, rapists and heroin peddlers."

THE COLONEL urged that existing laws forbidding police misconduct be enforced and that officers be prosecuted for their illegal searches or the like without suppressing the evidence obtained from such a search.

"The courts have said, in effect, that they are going to punish the police by spoiling their case so they won't do it again,"

"ONE GUY doesn't get anywhere near that much, because the stuff passes through many, many hands," he explained, "but the headlines give young kids the idea selling dope is the way to get rich quick. All the kid gets out of it is caught."

White's prescription for marijuana users is bound to make him unpopular with his young, hip neighbors in Stinson Beach, but the logic is clear. He thinks every person convicted of marijuana use should spend some time in jail if officialdom genuinely wants to curb use of the drug.

"You'd have some pretty full jails for perhaps a year, but when people learned it was dangerous to smoke grass, I think use would taper off and the problem would diminish greatly," White said.

"Or else," he shrugged, "change the law. But, if you keep it, enforce it."

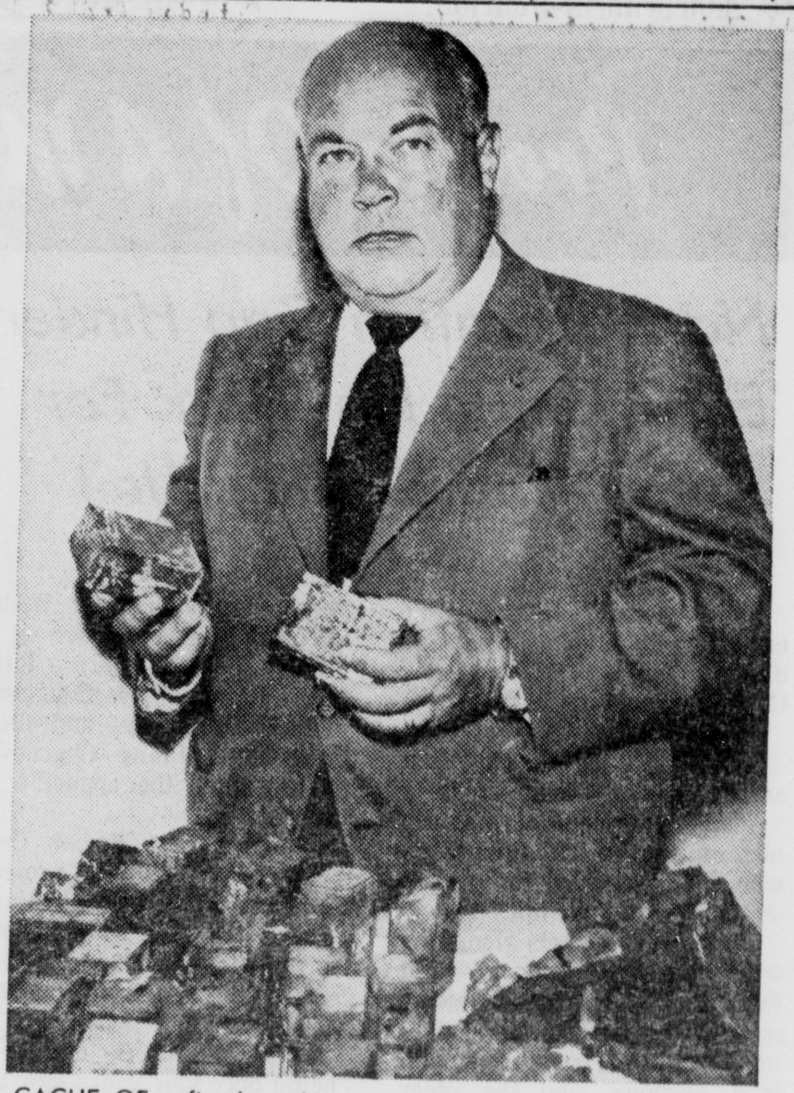

A CACHE OF refined smoking opium in tins was examined by Col. George White after being seized by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in a raid along the U.S.-Mexican border. The year was 1956. And by then White, his face too well known for him to continue his work as an undercover agent, had been promoted to administrative duties. At his retirement in 1966 for reasons of health, he headed bureau operations on the West Coast.

No Generation Gap Hinders Ed Ryken In His Work For Senior Coordinating Unit

by JEFF GREER

THE MOVEMENT of the arms and hands in gestures as he speaks is characteristic of Ed Ryken, executive director for the Marin Senior Coordinating Council, as he appears before a group of senior citizens. Ryken is but 32, but has no difficulty establishing a rapport with Marin's older citizens.

(Independent-Journal photo)

The generation gap doesn't exist for Ed Ryken, executive director for the Marin Senior Coordinating Council.

Ryken is 32.

He deals daily with Marin senior citizens ranging from a "young" 50 to centenarians. He also must work with teen-agers who could consider his over-30 status as "over the hill."

But he says he gets along fine with both age groups — and finds that he has been able to steer the teen-agers and seniors into "what the young folks call 'rap sessions' and the older ones call just plain talking."

"They are all people and I like people," declares the blue-eyed, wavy-haired Ryken. Even as he relaxes briefly at his desk, his arms and hands are constantly in motion, to demonstrate points as he talks.

RYKEN IS JUST as people-oriented during off-duty hours.

He and his wife Diane are vice presidents of the parent-faculty club of the San Ramon School near their home in the San Marin section of Novato.

Both are active in conservation, particularly with the recently organized North Marin branch of the Conservation League of Marin. He is an officer of a national camping organization, a member of the county's comprehensive health planning board and was active as finance director in last year's successful supervisorial campaign for Novato's Arnold Baptiste.

ALL OF THE people-oriented activities "that do not affect my job are family activities," Ryken explained. "We look on them as recreation.

"Others may be in bowling leagues or things like that. We feel people, the issues and the excitement, to be stimulating."

Ryken also finds his job serving senior citizens "very exciting."

MANY OF ITS facets are "unique in the whole country," he explained.

Ryken actually is a county employee, but he is also the top executive of a non-profit corporation, the Marin Senior Coordinating Council.

The council was born 17 years ago when articles of incorporation were signed by Wishard Brown, now publisher of the Independent-Journal; former San Rafael City Councilman Dr. Charles Aby, and retired merchant Manny Charnow of San Rafael, the council's first officers.

Marin's first Senior Center was opened as a pilot project in a leased house in San Rafael 13 years ago. The council now is involved with 52 senior programs throughout the county.

RYKEN'S JOB came into being only four years ago, as a result of a survey under an "Older Americans" grant, which was the first such in California. The survey by Richard Phoenix urged local government and the Senior Coordinating Council to engage in a wide variety of projects to meet the needs of Marin's increasingly high percentage of older residents.

The county supervisors entrusted the council with finding a director; after its first interviews with candidates the council was still dissatisfied and called on experts in recreation fields to recommend likely prospects.

Ryken was working with the Neighborhood Youth Corps in San Mateo County and continuing his education at San Jose State College, when Mary Wylie of San Jose State School of recreation education suggested the Marin council interview him.

"I CAME UP here prepared to be interviewed for a few minutes. It went on for hours, and then the council asked me to step outside a few minutes," Ryken recalled. "Then they asked me to take the job." Though only 28 then, Alameda-born Ryken was already a veteran of public recreation work.

"I took a pretty good salary cut, but it was an exciting chance to work with a new concept," Ryken explained. "It was a chance to create a whole senior program with a sort of autonomy — to let the ideas flow."

He credited much of the program's growth to the council's broad experience in civic and community life, and its willingness to say: "It sounds awfully good; try it and see if it works."

RYKEN LEANED back in his chair and swept his arms to encompass the new office the council had just occupied.

"I've had great successes and even greater failures."

Probably the most challenging effort so far is the council's new quarters in the former Northwestern Pacific depot in downtown San Rafael.

If the complexities of city planning, building and parking requirements can be worked out, and if the state Public Utilities Commission allows the NWP to close out its little-used ticket office, the senior council hopes to take over the entire building. With union labor and licensed contractor doing the major work, and skilled retirees the rest, the council hopes to turn the building into a mission-style, attractive building with many functions besides being a gathering place for senior citizens and housing the council offices.

ITS ROOMS MAY be turned into a series of rented boutique shops; other rooms may be used to store club materials or give the groups meeting space. Ryken said the council and senior citizens have a nearly endless list of ideas for using the building.

Based on the Senior council's previous experience, becoming a landlord for other non-profit organizations in Marin County should prove successful.

The San Anselmo bus depot is one of Ryken's proudest examples. It is manned only by senior citizens, through a council contract with Western Greyhound. Its workers, previously bored with retirement, are building a sterling record for dependability on the job, Ryken reported.

THE BUS DEPOT wound up 1970 with a $200 profit after paying its employees.

"That doesn't sound like much, but it was a big help to the senior citizens' new catering operation," Ryken explained. "It bought some very, very needed equipment.

"That's one advantage of this kind of operation through a non-profit corporation. Had the county directly operated the bus depot program, any surplus would have been swallowed into the general fund. Here, we're more flexible."

The council also has contracts to supply paid recreation directors to several of Marin's many convalescent and retirement homes. The workers all are senior citizens. The various senior citizens' housing projects also employ retirees as staff, Ryken noted.

WHEN THE railroad depot face-lifting gets a clear track, the seniors hope to establish a new venture, a commercial maintenance and janitorial service. The center itself will be their first customer, Ryken said.

The feeling of having a chance to succeed in their own ventures, supplement their pensions with a new income, and become an integral part of Marin's business life has meant much to the senior citizens, Ryken explained.

Ryken now is working on another project — gathering senior citizens' ideas through a series of forums that will culminate next year in a White House Conference on the Aging.

He is conducting a series of town meetings in senior citizens' gathering places throughout Marin. At the session, he mines for ideas in the fields of employment, recreation, health care, the generation gap and other concerns of Marin's older residents.

RYKEN REPORTED discovering certain parallels in the views of today's youth and the senior citizens. He has compared their answers to a questionnaire distributed to representatives of both groups.

Teen-agers who work with Ryken as volunteers in transportation for senior citizens, visitors to shut-ins and other tasks, wrote that they felt the older persons' greatest need was "love," followed by considerations of material security and health. While many of the senior citizens stressed their needs for financial and physical security, many a questionnaire "had written somewhere on it, often in tiny handwriting, that the person wanted to be loved by someone," Ryken noted.

Where the understanding is, there's no generation gap, according to Ryken.

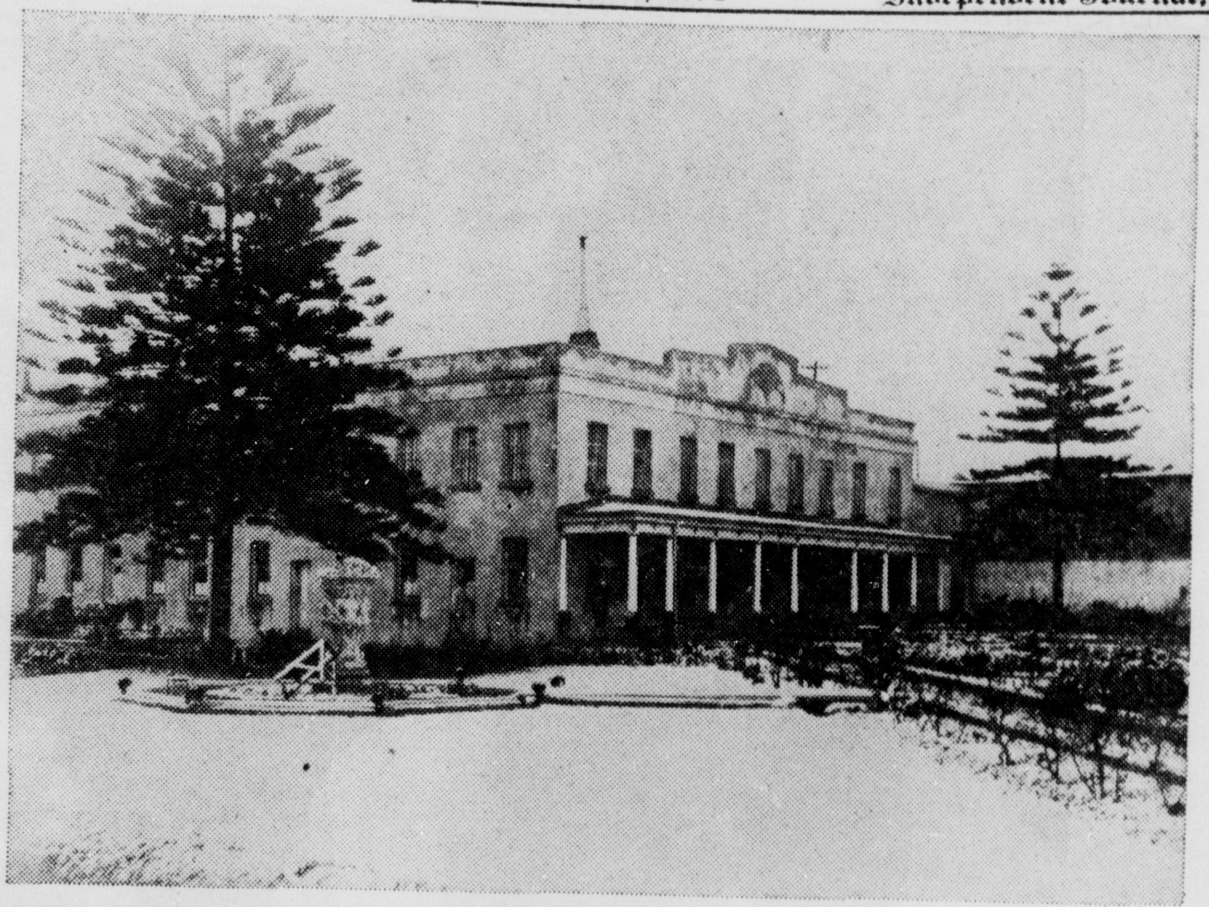
THE PRISON DOC —

San Quentin's Norfolk Pines



SAN QUENTIN'S two Norfolk Pines were photographed in 1913 after a freak snow storm that had left a blanket of white on the plaza called the Garden Beautiful. It was beneath the tree on the left that prisoner George D. Collins set up his open air "law office" for inmates. The two stately trees still stand today.

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles about early-day San Quentin Prison written for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine by Dr. Leo L. Stanley, its long-time surgeon and the author of books about San Quentin and Marin history.)

By DR. LEO L. STANLEY

It is not often that I visit San Quentin Prison any more. But when I do, I never fail to include a look at the two stately Norfolk Pines that grow upon the grounds.

I haVe known these trees since 1913 and have watched their growth.

And the sight of them never fails to bring back memories. Memories, for example, such as those I have of George D. Collins, a lawyer who ran into difficulties with the law.

Collins was something of an earlier version of the Ding Dong Daddy of newspaper fame who some years back was revealed to be married to some 15 women. Collins, too, had had a number of wives, and while those marriages sometimes involved him in litigation, they were legally dissolved.

SO IT WAS not for his marital adventures that Collins ran afoul of the law. Instead, it was a perjury charge that proved his undoing.

On April 18, 1906, Collins stood convicted, but still unsentenced. He was lodged in the City and County of San Francisco Jail in the Ingleside district, awaiting sentence.

Then came the great shake and the fire that followed. The trembling left the jail walls cracked and in a hazardous condition, a fate shared by many of the city's buildings that were not totally demolished.

THE CONCERNED sheriff was faced with the problem of where he could safely incarcerate his prisoners.

San Quentin Prison had also been shaken, he learned, but its strong walls had withstood nature's fury.

Would the warden be good enough to allow San Francisco's jail prisoners to be domiciled at San Quentin until the emergency was over and their regular quarters made safe again?

"Certainly," came the reply. "Send them over."

A TUGBOAT was chartered, the prisoners loaded aboard and transported to the San Quentin wharf.

But the authorities had failed to take into consideration that among their involuntary passengers was one of California's most brilliant lawyers — Collins.

And George Collins did not take easily to the transfer. Instead he protested:

"YOU CAN'T put me in the penitentiary. I'm a county jail inmate. I'll sue you, and I'll sue the state. I'm a lawyer, and I know what I am talking about. You will have to take us all back to San Francisco."

The sheriff and prison officials conferred, and agreed he had a point. So the prisoners were put back on the tug and returned to San Francisco, even while that city was still burning. Whether the other prisoners thanked Collins is not recorded.

George D. Collins did eventually land in San Quentin, but only after being formally sentenced to the prison for the perjury conviction. His forceful presentations in court may just have spurred his accusers into having him put away for a time.

AT THE PRISON he was assigned to the identification department and proved a well behaved inmate, doing his job well and providing no difficulties for authorities.

A good-natured old sould, witty, and full of anecdotes, he seemed to take a special liking to me, then a young doctor who had just joined the prison staff. He always greeted me with a smile and a quip. And whenever I had an opportunity I would look into his window and exchange a few words with him.

In the afternoon, after his work was finished, Collins would take his stool and set it under one of the two Norfolk Pines at the edge of Garden Beautiful as we called the plaza around which prison buildings were situated in the Spanish style.

AND SEATED on his stool under the pine, George Collins would give out legal advice plus cheer, comfort and encouragement to any prisoner or official who sought his counsel.

That is how I remember George Collins, and why the Norfolk Pines unfailingly bring back memories of this lawyer whose good spirits withstood the test of extreme adversity.

Eventually Collins was released from San Quentin and I would then see him occasionally hobbling down San Francisco's Market Street to the office where he continued to practice law, or to the Palace Hotel where he would get together with some of his pre-earthquake cronies.

COLLINS HAD been afflicted with a crippled foot since childhood, but the handicap had not affected his sunny smile.

The sheltering of George Collins, lawyer behind prison walls, was only one prison life chapter of many — comedy, tragedy, joy, despair and all the human emotions — that the Norfolk Pines have looked down upon during their long tenure.

They must have been planted soon after the prison was established. Their origins I never determined. But they were in what corresponded to the "teen" years when I first knew them, and I watched with interest as they grew to their present stature and dignity.

THEY ARE known to botanists as Arawcaria excelsa, and to laymen as the Star Pine as well as the Norfolk Pine.

The tree's most common name comes from its place of origin, Norfolk Island, 1,000 miles northeast of Sydney, Australia, in the lonely Tasman Sea just south of New Caledonia. That four-by-six-mile isle is the only place on earth that can claim this particular pine as indigenous.

During World War II, I spent several weeks at Noumea, New Caledonia, awaiting the heavy cruiser Minneapolis to which I had been assigned. Japanese submarines were reported operating off Norfolk Island, and the destroyer on which I was doing temporary duty was ordered to search there for them.

IT WOULD be my opportunity, I thought, to see firsthand the ancestral home of the San Quentin pines I had so long admired.

But word came in the submarines had been spotted elsewhere, and so that order was cancelled.

And I never again had an opportunity to see the home of the Norfolk Pines.

But I think any visitor to San Quentin who sees the two specimens growing there will agree that they are among the most impressive of all trees.

Certainly George Collins used to think so when he sat in their refreshing shade and dispensed words of legal wisdom and spiritual comfort to troubled men who sought him out there.

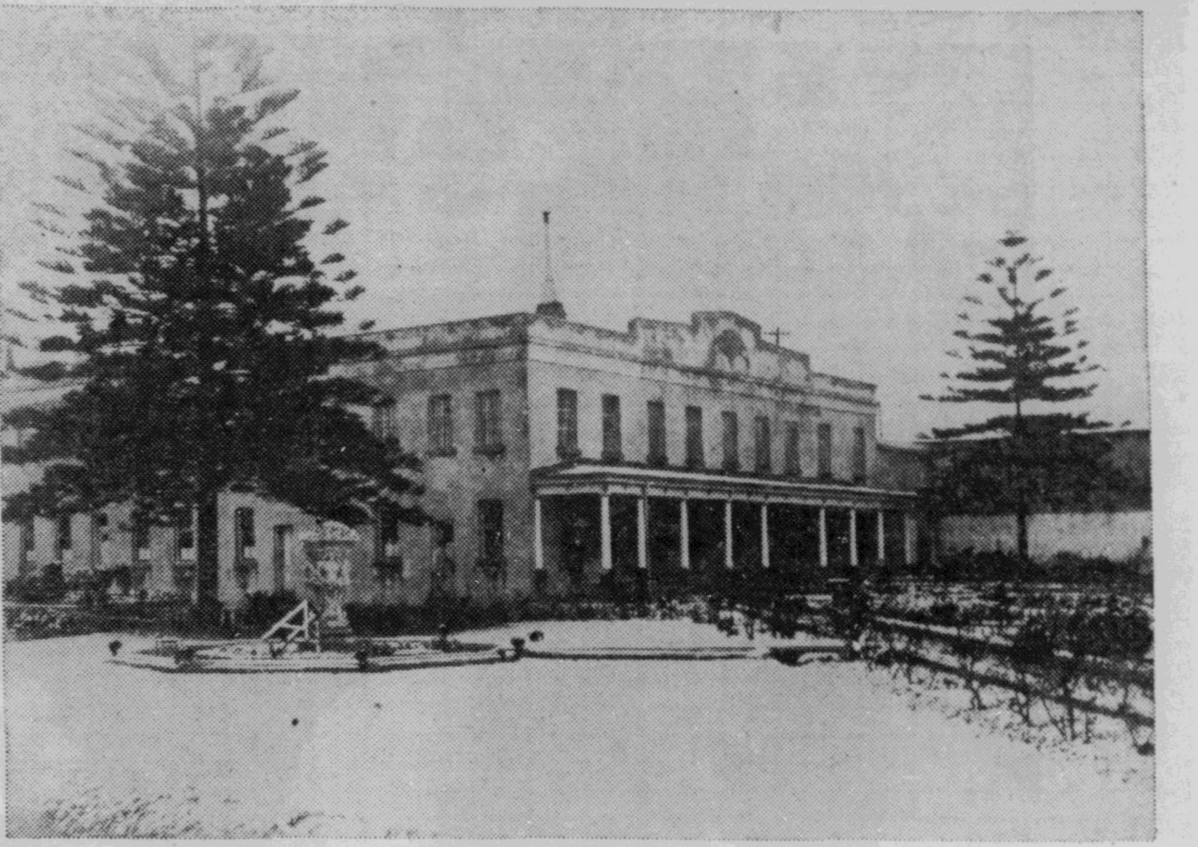
A good-natured old sould, witty, and full of anecdotes, he seemed to take a special liking to me, then a young doctor who had just joined the prison staff. He always greeted me with a smile and a quip. And whenever I had an opportunity I would look into his window and exchange a few words with him.

In the afternoon, after his work was finished, Collins would take his stool and set it under one of the two Norfolk Pines at the edge of Garden Beautiful as we called the plaza around which prison buildings were situated in the Spanish style.

AND SEATED on his stool under the pine, George Collins would give out legal advice plus cheer, comfort and encouragement to any prisoner or official who sought his counsel.

That is how I remember George Collins, and why the Norfolk Pines unfailingly bring back memories of this lawyer whose good spirits withstood the test of extreme adversity.

Eventually Collins was released from San Quentin and I would then see him occasionally hobbling down San Francisco's Market Street to the office where he continued to practice law, or to the Palace Hotel where he would get together with some of his pre-earthquake cronies.



SAN QUENTIN'S two Norfolk Pines were photographed in 1913 after a freak snow storm that had left a blanket of white on the plaza called the Garden Beautiful. It was beneath the tree on the left that prisoner George D. Collins set up his open air "law office" for inmates. The two stately trees still stand today.

COLLINS HAD been afflicted with a crippled foot since childhood, but the handicap had not affected his sunny smile.

The sheltering of George Collins, lawyer behind prison walls, was only one prison life chapter of many — comedy, tragedy, joy, despair and all the human emotions — that the Norfolk Pines have looked down upon during their long tenure.

They must have been planted soon after the prison was established. Their origins I never determined. But they were in what corresponded to the "teen" years when I first knew them, and I watched with interest as they grew to their present stature and dignity.

THEY ARE known to botanists as Arawcaria excelsa, and to laymen as the Star Pine as well as the Norfolk Pine.

The tree's most common name comes from its place of origin, Norfolk Island, 1,000 miles northeast of Sydney, Australia, in the lonely Tasman Sea just south of New Caledonia. That four-by-six-mile isle is the only place on earth that can claim this particular pine as indigenous.

During World War II, I spent several weeks at Noumea, New Caledonia, awaiting the heavy cruiser Minneapolis to which I had been assigned. Japanese submarines were reported operating off Norfolk Island, and the destroyer on which I was doing temporary duty was ordered to search there for them.

IT WOULD be my opportunity, I thought, to see firsthand the ancestral home of the San Quentin pines I had so long admired.

But word came in the submarines had been spotted elsewhere, and so that order was cancelled.

And I never again had an opportunity to see the home of the Norfolk Pines.

But I think any visitor to San Quentin who sees the two specimens growing there will agree that they are among the most impressive of all trees.

Certainly George Collins used to think so when he sat in their refreshing shade and dispensed words of legal wisdom and spiritual comfort to troubled men who sought him out there.

HAVING SOME FUN at the radio KSFO microphones are the station's program director, Pete Scott, left, and disc jockey Terry McGovern, the latter wearing the cowboy hat he frequently sports as headgear. McGovern recently lost the choice morning time slot on the KSFO schedule to Jim Lange, but accepted the station management's decision philosophically, and now presides over the late afternoon-early evening programming with undiminished enthusiasm.

The Many Facets Of Terry McGovern

By DON KEOWN

The major league baseball manager and the radio station disc jockey have something very much in common — the uncertainty of their employment.

One day they are riding high, the toast of the fans or listeners.

And the next, with a dip in the team standings or their program's rating, or simply a shift in the whims of the front office, they are looking for other employment.

Not even a contract always affords them full security.

THUS IT WAS that young Terry McGovern began 1971 at the head of the pack in San Francisco's highly competitive radio ranks, in the coveted 6 to 9 a.m. slot spinning records and airing his enthusiasms with seemingly boundless energy over KSFO.

It was the show over which Don Sherwood, biggest name in San Francisco radio, had once presided. And long regarded as the top spot at the influential and prestigious station that has specialized in a corps of disc jockeys, commentators, sportscasters and announcers who have achieved celebrity status on at least a local, regional level.

McGovern's ratings seemed sound and all appeared very, very right with his world.

its first indication that this was not necessarily so from Herb Caen's column.

McGovern, the columnist reported, was about to be ousted' from KSFO's top record-playing spot. Jim Lange, a former KSFO headliner and since then a television personality, would return to take over the choice morning hours.

Shortly thereafter, the station announced that McGovern had been shifted to the 4 to 8 p.m. time period.

McGovern, a San Rafael resident, took it philosophically.

"THEY SAID IT just wasn't working out," he says.

McGovern had held the morning assignment for a year and four months.

"Now I feel like much of the pressure is off," he says. "And the pressures in radio really are horrendous. It is a highly competitive business."

But his new, later hours, McGovern admits, have forced him to make some adjustments to his approach and manner at the microphone.

"In the afternoon and early evening," he explains, "people just won't put up with as much as they will in the morning.

"AT THE START of the day they are resilient and tolerant, ready to put up with and even smile at a lot of foolishness. But by late afternoon, the worst has happened. They've had it. And they are no longer in the mood for nonsense."

Thus, says McGovern, "I am trying to mellow a bit — to choose softer music, and to be less loquacious."

Of disc jockeys generally, McGovern admits: "We all tend to talk too much. I think the best objective for any of us is to try to talk less . . . and to say more."

He cites Don Sherwood as an example of a disc jockey who never wasted words. "That was a large measure of the key to his tremendous success with listeners," McGovern says.

OF HIS OWN development, McGovern says: "I like to think I've become a warmer, more understanding person — less flippant. A lot of my mail has made mention of my sincerity, and I have felt good because of that."

Of the music on his show, McGovern admits: "I don't like all of it." But, he adds, the music for his programs must be chosen to please the audience, not himself.

"I guess if I had my own way I'd play more of the newer music," he adds.

THE QUALITY OF "pop" music generally is at an all-time high, McGovern believes. "There is so much of it that is good today."

But McGovern's personal enthusiasms are by no means limited to "pop" music and radio.. His interests have ranged from a serious study of how to be a circus clown and an actual performance under the big top with the gigantic Ringling Brothers show, to organizing a clean-up-the-debris campaign for the Berkeley hills as part of the current ecology and anti-pollution movement.

Described as "looking something like a cross between actor Dustin Hoffman and a leprechaun," McGovern seemingly is a fountain of endless ideas.

IT WAS HIS idea that he live and broadcast his program for three days from the Farallone Islands as a stunt to call attention to the United Crusade campaign.

TERRY McGOVERN and wife Molly made an early decision that Sausalito would have to be their home when they came West in June of 1969 where he had already established himself as a radio and television favorite. The Ups And Downs Of A Disc Jockey

KSFO's Terry McGovern Of Sausalito Takes It All Philosophically

THE THEATER has been a special interest of radio disc jockey Terry McGovern. So when he had an opportunity to rehearse and appear with the "Hair" cast in San Francisco, he seized upon it, and was on stage both opening and closing nights.

ters in her small school had never seen snow, he arranged for a flight of a helicopter from the Sierra to the school yard, carrying a cargo of clean, white snow.

"Which," he says, "the children promptly ate."

"WITH TODAY'S world, you simply have to stay interested," he says. "People are more selective, more mature, more educated. It is easier for a person, especially if he's talking his head off, day after day, on the air, to disclose his stupidity."

Thus McGovern was aware of the ecology crisis long before concern became fashionable. It was his concern that caused him to call attention one day on the air to the debris littering the Berkeley hills. The following Sunday, 200 persons, from college students to housewives, turned out to clean up the woods.

WHEN HE HEARD a poem written by a Pennsylvania high school students entitled "Genesis — Last Chapter" and paraphrasing the Bible's story of the Creation into a countdown of Man's destruction of his God-given environment through pollution, his ecological sense was so impressed that he contacted the young poet and obtained his permission to record the poem to a musical background.

The record became something of a Bay Area regional hit.

But more importantly, the funds realized through its sale were turned over to the "Save the Redwoods' movement.

FOR A STILL very young man, Terry McGovern has a considerable background in radio.

In his native Pittsburgh he became one of that area's best known radio and television personalities. His career choice was a natural one, for his father, Roger McGovern, was a well-known disc jockey and newsman in Pittsburgh and Oklahoma.

Terry was active in Pittsburgh little theater, and while a student at Duquesne University created his own satirical nightclub act. While with the Army Reserve, he put together a documentary film entitled "Oh, You Knucklehead" that won a National Golden Quill award.

At KSFO, Al Newman, vice president in charge of radio programming for Golden West Broadcasters, and Peter Scott, program director, heard of McGovern, and requested audition tapes. As a result, Terry arrived in the Bay Area in June of 1969, "the first time I had ever left Pittsburgh," and began work at KSFO.

"IT WAS LIKE a dream, coming to California, and when we saw Sausalito, we knew it had to be our home," says McGovern.

"We" consists of McGovern, wife Molly, and the family pet dog Jos. Their home is a comfortable Sausalito apartment.

Despite their liking for Sausalito, the McGoverns have not been "rootbound." They spent a great deal of their first year in Northern California "exploring" — camping on Mount Tamalpais, strolling the beaches near Dillon Bay, etc.

With him McGovern brought west his interest in the theater. He met the cast members for the musical, "Hair," and became the first "outsider" to be invited into the company-formed "Ohione Tribe," appearing opening and closing nights on the stage.

MORE SERIOUSLY, McGovern has been among the hardest workers for the welfare of the Indians on Alcatraz Island. Other community activities have ranged from hosting the annual Irish Week celebration to collecting toys at Christmas time to be repaired by Bay Area firemen for needy children.

As the result of a "Seedy Street" satirical segment having fun with the hit children's television show "Sesame Street," Terry has been doing some of the voices for the actual "Sesame Street" programs.

He states his life style philosophy thusly: "Never let things defeat you."

It is a philosophy that sustained him when he lost that choice morning time slot at KSFO. There will be other happier happenings that will more than offset such setbacks, of this he is confident.

ANOTHER BIT of McGovern philosophy: "Have a good time, both physically and spiritually, as long as you don't have it at some one else's expense."

Whether facing the KSFO mike, relaxing in his home with his wife, presiding over some civic function, or working on behalf of a worthy cause, Terry McGovern seems always to be having a good time. And at no one else's expense.

A HIGHLIGHT OF his extracurricular activities at KSFO for Terry McGovern came when he and the station joined forces with Bay Area firemen to collect and repair toys for less fortunate youngsters at Christmas time.

JUST ABOUT everyone wants to be a circus clown. So when the famed Ringling Brothers visited the Bay Area, Terry McGovern arranged to train for and then appear beneath the big top as a member of the clown troupe.

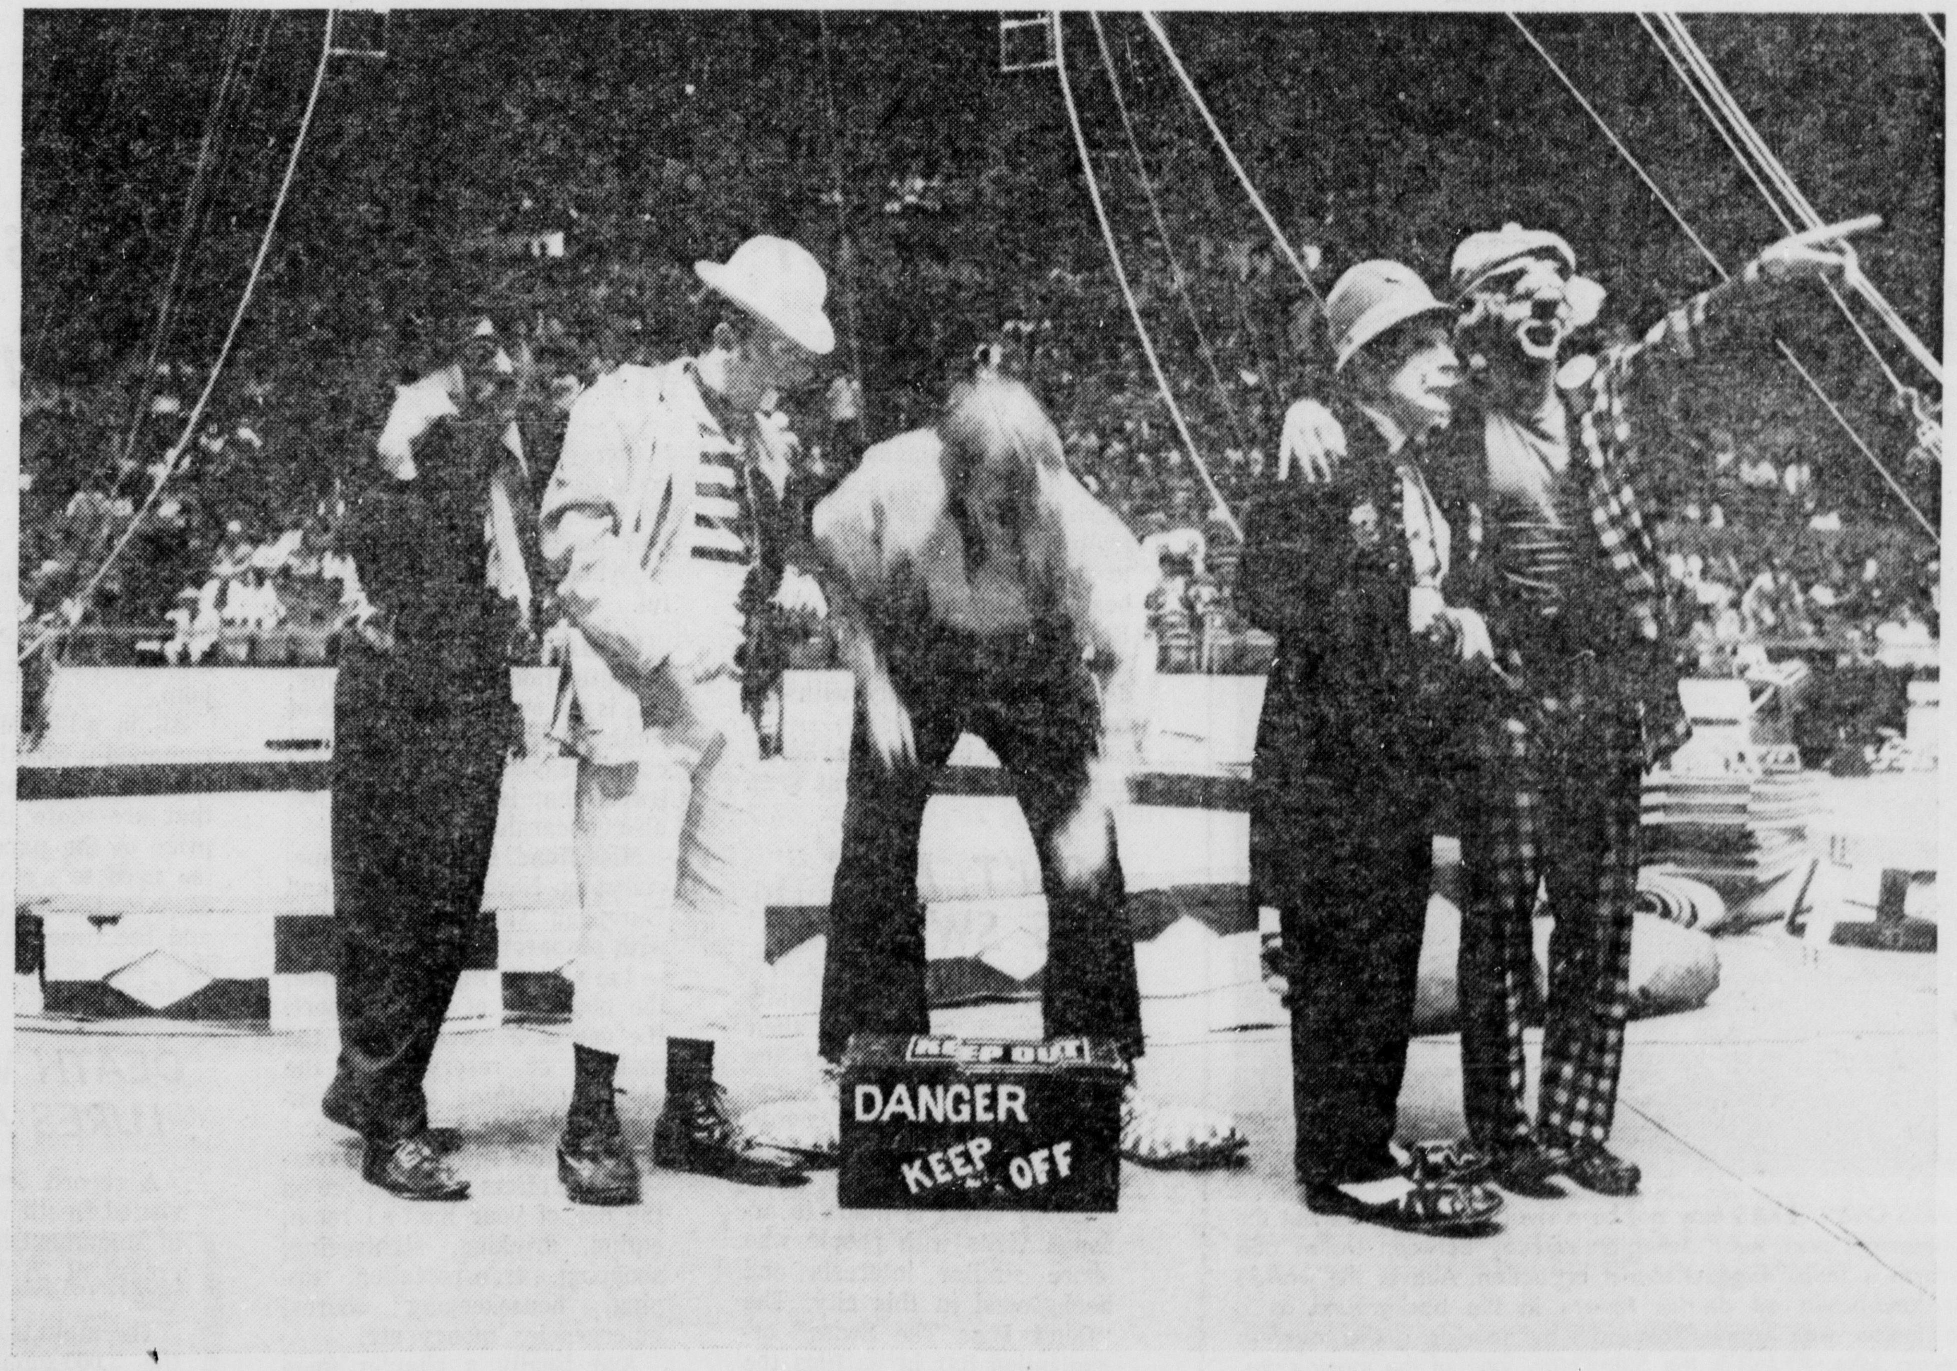
ONE OF THE more pleasant aspects of radio work is the opportunity to meet celebrities. Here Terry McGovern, at right, and hypnotist Dante posed with Hollywood motion picture star Lana Turner during a visit by the actress to San Francisco.



THE CLOWN SKIT is under way, and you can bet that the inevitable explosion is about to occur. That is TerryMcGovern, second from the left, and taking part in the antics right along with the veteran Ringling Brothers clowns. For McGovern, the performance was the fulfillment of a long-held ambition to perform beneath the big top in greasepaint and baggy pants. McGovern's imaginative mind frequently comes up with such stunts.

When California's Desert Blooms

Wildflowers Are Now Staging Their Annual Show Of Color

It is that time of the year again when wildflowers of the Southern California desert turn barren wastes into a riot of color.

Trees, shrubs, cacti, succulents and other plants all bloom in shadings that range from the brightest colors to the quietest pastels, but with the yellows and purples predominating.

TO SURVIVE summer heat, drought, chill nights and strong winds, desert plants must be a hardy lot, points out Patricia Moorten, who with her husband, "Cactus Slim" Moorten, founded and operates the Palm Springs Desert Botanical Gardens.

But from mid-March into late April, these tough plants need apologize to no garden plant for the beauty of their blooms.

Encilia with its small yellow blossoms rules the hills, but Creosote, also with a yellow flower, and Desert Mallow, a perennial with pink, apricot and orchid-colored blooms, are also well represented.

Joining in the color show are the Chuperosa or hummingbird bush, with a red trumpet flower; the Indigo bush; the Fountain Grass, a variety of buckwheat with a light purple stalk, and the Desert Lavender.

Among the trees contributing to the landscape is the Palo Verde with graceful limbs or solid green embellished by thousands of five-petal, sweet-pea-like flowers.

AND THE Honey Mesquite contributes creamy yellow tassel-type blooms.

The wildflowers include the purple-flowered Sand Verbena, the yellow-flowered Desert Gourd, the pure-white Dunes Evening Primrose, wild Daisies and Buttercups and a bevy of succulents such as the Ocotillo, the Joshua Tree and the Spanish Bayonet, or cacti such as the Century Plant, the purple Beavertail, the Jumping Cholla, the Pincushion and the Red Barrel Cactus.

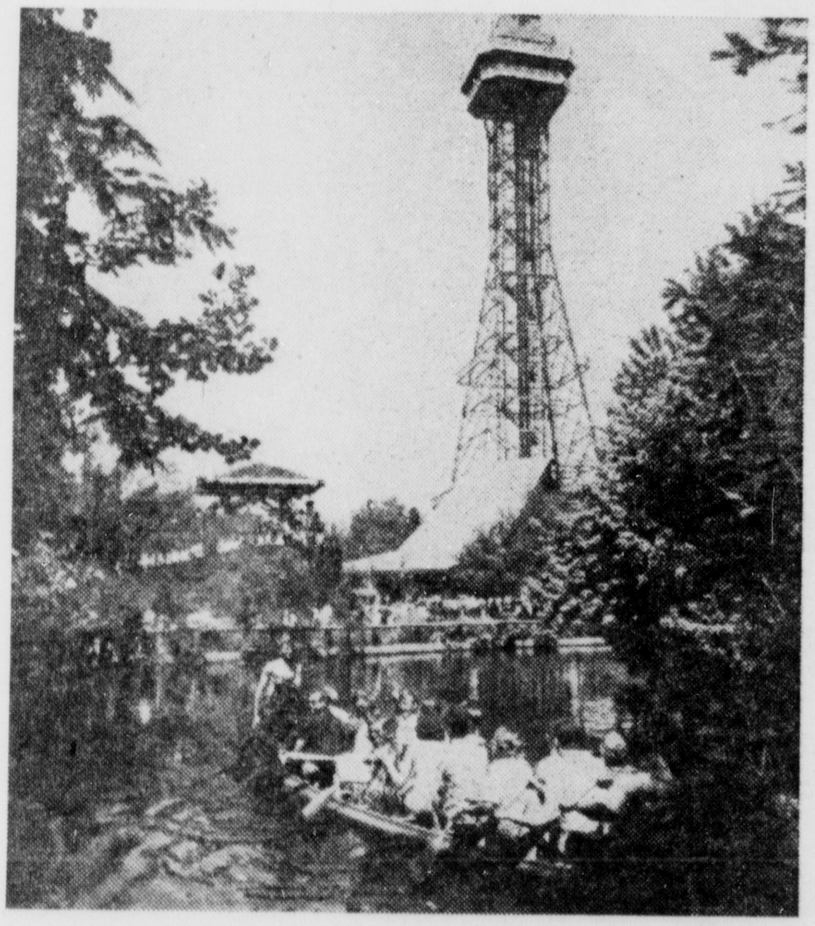
Visitors to the botanical gardens in Palm Springs, open daily 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., can preview these desert plants and be prepared to recognize them when they come upon them in their wild state.

ALL THE PLANTS in the two-acre, park-like outdoor museum (some 2,000 varieties are included) have been identified with markers.

Moorten's Botanical Gardens also include displays of rock crystals, unusual wood forms, desert curios and Indian lore, and, although only a mile from downtown Palm Springs, serves as a sanctuary for bird and other wildlife.

Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau, Box M, Municipal Airport Terminal, Palm Springs, 92262, will also answer questions and supply information on desert plant life.

THE YELLOW BLOOMS of the Encilia bush growing wild in the foothills and canyons around Palm Springs is only one of many wildflowers that turn the Southern California desert into a color spectacle with the arrival of the spring season.



SIX FLAGS OVER TEXAS may not be a rival to Disneyland, but the big amusement park near Arlington midway between Dallas and Fort Worth is Texas' biggest tourist attraction. Above, the world's largest land-based oil derrick towers in the background as a Caddo Indian war canoe "crewed" by tourists glides over a shimmering lake. At left is the Spindletop, one of the many rides, where the riders are held to the wall by centrifugal force as it spins at high speed. Six Flags Over Texas opened Aug. 5, 1961, and is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year, after attracting more than 16 million people.

A Travel Guide That Stresses Economy Without Overdoing It

In contrast to the usual guidebook for the European-bound tourist that points them, country-by-country or city-by-city, to the leading sights and the best accommodations, Abby Rand's "How to Get to Europe and Have a Wonderful Time" deals more generally with the techniques of travel.

Published by Charles Scribner's Sons and priced at $7.95 hardcover, $2.45 paperback, the book aims at helping the potential traveler to plan and conduct his trip so that it will be enjoyable without being wasteful.

WHILE THERE is considerable attention given economy, this is not overdone — a fault of some other travel books that can lure you into a mode of travel that is inexpensive but also unbearable.

Miss Rand, in the past a specialist on North American and European ski guides, begins with preparations and planning — the various flights available, the obtaining of the passport, the use of a travel agent, the making of reservations, the choice of clothing, the mobilization of finances, packing, etc.

Then after she has you overseas, she offers sound advice on the use of your hotel room, eating, drinking, sightseeing, shopping, transportation, tipping, "housekeeping" chores, emergencies, money, etc.

And finally a chapter upon the flight home, followed by some suggested itineraries, a listing of guidebooks, instruction on the converting of the metric measurements and a table on rainfall averages for leading European tourist centers.

MISS RAND'S advice is on a most practical level. Such as: "Visit the bathroom before leaving your hotel in the morning; never pass up a good john."

All in all, Miss Rand has compiled a wealth of truly helpful instructions and suggestions that are more than worth the price of the paperback edition (no need to spend the extra $5.50 for the hardcover version) and the time required to read it.

DON'T MISS THE SWISS

Opportunities to actually meet Swiss families at their homes is offered under the "Don't Miss The Swiss" program, which is being coordinated by the Zurich Tourist Office.

Every effort is made to arrange visits with people who share similar interests and background in this city. The "Don't Miss The Swiss" organization has in its files the names of cordial Swiss who are willing to serve as hosts to foreign guests.

There is no charge for the service.

DEATH VALLEY LURES MANY

A record 580,493 persons visited Death Valley National Monument in 1970, an increase of 26 per cent over 1969.

The main travel season at the 3,000-square-mile area runs from October through May when all National Park Service and private facilities within the monument are in full operation.

ANOTHER BIT of McGovern philosophy: "Have a good time, both physically and spiritually, as long as you don't have it at some one else's expense."

Whether facing the KSFO mike, relaxing in his home with his wife, presiding over some civic function, or working on behalf of a worthy cause, Terry McGovern seems always to be having a good time. And at no one else's expense.

JUST ABOUT everyone wants to be a circus clown. So when the famed Ringling Brothers visited the Bay Area, Terry McGovern arranged to train for and then appear beneath the big top as a member of the clown troupe.

THE CLOWN SKIT is under way, and you can bet that the inevitable explosion is about to occur. That is TerryMcGovern, second from the left, and taking part in the antics right along with the veteran Ringling Brothers clowns. For McGovern, the performance was the fulfillment of a long-held ambition to perform beneath the big top in greasepaint and baggy pants. McGovern's imaginative mind frequently comes up with such stunts.

Scott Land Beckons To The Tourist

This year the laird of Abbotsford is issuing an invitation to the world to celebrate Sir Walter Scott's 200th birthday.

The laird is Patricia Maxwell-Scott, Scott's great-great-great-granddaughter and hostess of Abbotsford, his beloved home. She is inviting Americans over for a summer of celebration and rededication to the memory of the man who practically invented Scotland.

SCOTT MADE and lost a fortune out of writing. He made the romantic Gothic style popular in 19th Century architecture and single-handedly put Scotland on the map. He was translated into 35 languages.

He will be the subject of numerous observances and exhibitions this year in Scotland.

He revived the kilt, the tartan, the Scottish crown jewels, clan lore, and was the first president of the Edinburgh Gas Board among many other accomplishments. He was responsible more than any one man for the blend of graciousness, history and hospitality which is modern Scotland.

HIS HOME HAS been open as a museum since the year after his death in 1836. It had been presented to him as a gift by the nation shortly before he died.

Mrs. Maxwell-Scott is owner and personally guides visitors around.

She says "the American idea of Scotland seems to be overwhelmingly that of Sir Walter's Scotland. What they expect to see is what my great-great-great-grandfather portrayed."

Mrs. Maxwell-Scott personally shows visitors around her home seven days a week.

Most visitors are astounded by his collections of curiosities, thousands of them, souvenirs of Scottish history, Napoleonic history, mementoes of characters in his dozens of novels.

When California's Desert Blooms

Wildflowers Are Now Staging Their Annual Show Of Color

It is that time of the year again when wildflowers of the Southern California desert turn barren wastes into a riot of color.

Trees, shrubs, cacti, succulents and other plants all bloom in shadings that range from the brightest colors to the quietest pastels, but with the yellows and purples predominating.

TO SURVIVE summer heat, drought, chill nights and strong winds, desert plants must be a hardy lot, points out Patricia Moorten, who with her husband, "Cactus Slim" Moorten, founded and operates the Palm Springs Desert Botanical Gardens.

But from mid-March into late April, these tough plants need apologize to no garden plant for the beauty of their blooms.

Encilia with its small yellow blossoms rules the hills, but Creosote, also with a yellow flower, and Desert Mallow, a perennial with pink, apricot and orchid-colored blooms, are also well represented.

Joining in the color show are the Chuperosa or hummingbird bush, with a red trumpet flower; the Indigo bush; the Fountain Grass, a variety of buckwheat with a light purple stalk, and the Desert Lavender.

Among the trees contributing to the landscape is the Palo Verde with graceful limbs or solid green embellished by thousands of five-petal, sweet-pea-like flowers.

AND THE Honey Mesquite contributes creamy yellow tassel-type blooms.

The wildflowers include the purple-flowered Sand Verbena, the yellow-flowered Desert Gourd, the pure-white Dunes Evening Primrose, wild Daisies and Buttercups and a bevy of succulents such as the Ocotillo, the Joshua Tree and the Spanish Bayonet, or cacti such as the Century Plant, the purple Beavertail, the Jumping Cholla, the Pincushion and the Red Barrel Cactus.

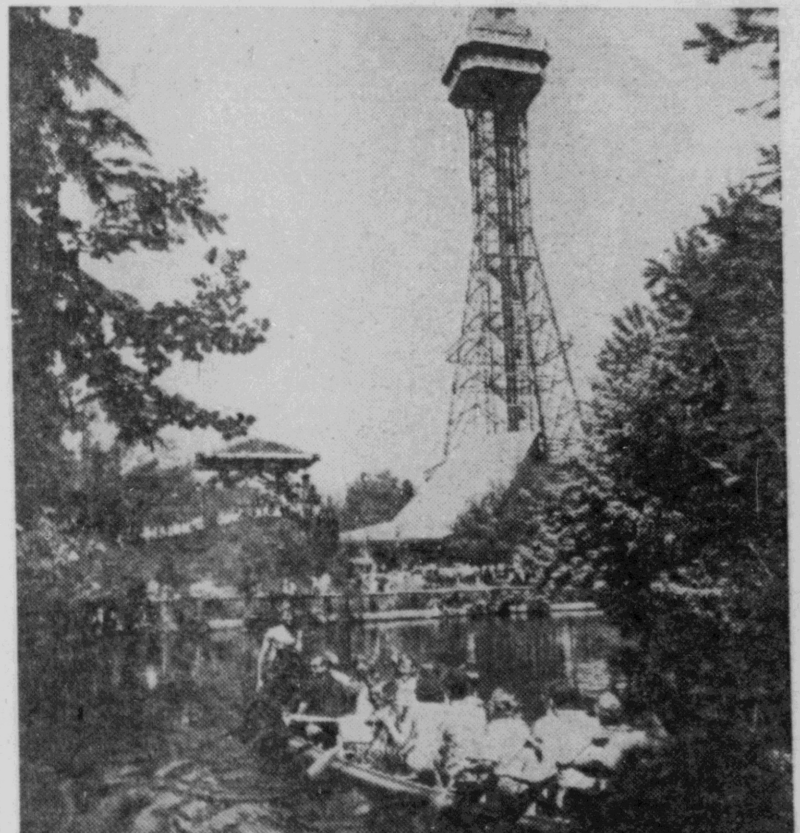
Visitors to the botanical gardens in Palm Springs, open daily 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., can preview these desert plants and be prepared to recognize them when they come upon them in their wild state.

ALL THE PLANTS in the two-acre, park-like outdoor museum (some 2,000 varieties are included) have been identified with markers.

Moorten's Botanical Gardens also include displays of rock crystals, unusual wood forms, desert curios and Indian lore, and, although only a mile from downtown Palm Springs, serves as a sanctuary for bird and other wildlife.

Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau, Box M, Municipal Airport Terminal, Palm Springs, 92262, will also answer questions and supply information on desert plant life.

THE YELLOW BLOOMS of the Encilia bush growing wild in the foothills and canyons around Palm Springs is only one of many wildflowers that turn the Southern California desert into a color spectacle with the arrival of the spring season.



SIX FLAGS OVER TEXAS may not be a rival to Disneyland, but the big amusement park near Arlington midway between Dallas and Fort Worth is Texas' biggest tourist attraction. Above, the world's largest land-based oil derrick towers in the background as a Caddo Indian war canoe "crewed" by tourists glides over a shimmering lake. At left is the Spindletop, one of the many rides, where the riders are held to the wall by centrifugal force as it spins at high speed. Six Flags Over Texas opened Aug. 5, 1961, and is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year, after attracting more than 16 million people.

A Travel Guide That Stresses Economy Without Overdoing It

In contrast to the usual guidebook for the European-bound tourist that points them, country-by-country or city-by-city, to the leading sights and the best accommodations, Abby Rand's "How to Get to Europe and Have a Wonderful Time" deals more generally with the techniques of travel.

Published by Charles Scribner's Sons and priced at $7.95 hardcover, $2.45 paperback, the book aims at helping the potential traveler to plan and conduct his trip so that it will be enjoyable without being wasteful.

WHILE THERE is considerable attention given economy, this is not overdone — a fault of some other travel books that can lure you into a mode of travel that is inexpensive but also unbearable.

Miss Rand, in the past a specialist on North American and European ski guides, begins with preparations and planning — the various flights available, the obtaining of the passport, the use of a travel agent, the making of reservations, the choice of clothing, the mobilization of finances, packing, etc.

Then after she has you overseas, she offers sound advice on the use of your hotel room, eating, drinking, sightseeing, shopping, transportation, tipping, "housekeeping" chores, emergencies, money, etc.

And finally a chapter upon the flight home, followed by some suggested itineraries, a listing of guidebooks, instruction on the converting of the metric measurements and a table on rainfall averages for leading European tourist centers.

MISS RAND'S advice is on a most practical level. Such as: "Visit the bathroom before leaving your hotel in the morning; never pass up a good john."

All in all, Miss Rand has compiled a wealth of truly helpful instructions and suggestions that are more than worth the price of the paperback edition (no need to spend the extra $5.50 for the hardcover version) and the time required to read it.

An Unseductive Nile Queen

Reviews Of New Reading

CLEOPATRA by Jack Lindsay; Coward, McCann and Geogheagan, 568 pages, $8.75. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Peter Drucker, the management analyst-teacher, speaking in San Francisco recently, ed out how important it is for business men to distinguish between what is important and what is merely interesting. Reading "Cleopatra" by Jack Lindsay, I am struck by the fact that this is an equally significant distinction for authors and historians.

Lindsay has camouflaged a social and political history of Rome from the end of Julius Caesar's reign until the final defeat of Mark Antony in the more salable gown of "Cleopatra." He has collected many interesting facts about Rome and about the Hellenistic world in which Cleopatra operated.

We learn that women were often barren because they and the men with whom they mated suffered lead poisoning from the use of lead cooking utensils and the carrying of water through lead pipes. We are presented with a good deal of speculation about the attempt of Cleopatra, Antony and others to draw about themselves the theological mystique which would relate them directly to some of the Eastern gods worshipped by many of their subjects.

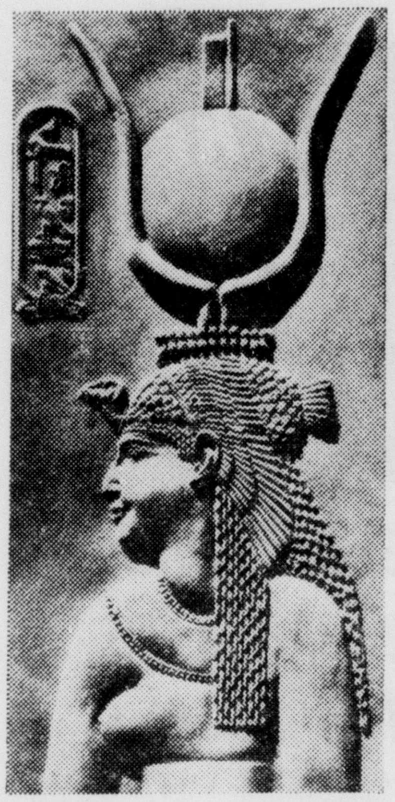
In addition, there is an entire chapter analyzing Virgil's fourth Eclogue, and a good deal of discussion abut whether or not Cleopatra's son Caesarion was actually fathered by Caesar.

All of this, and a great deal more, provides a provocative platter of intellectual hors d'oeuvres. It is not, however, the satisfying repast that a tightly-knit, well-informed biography provides.

Lindsay has transgressed against Drucker's distinction; he has given us a great many interesting historical tidbits, and he has not given us an important, cohesive picture of Cleopatra, the person, or Cleopatra, the historical force.

Part of the difficulty with "Cleopatra" would seem to be that Lindsay did not have any specific audience clearly in mind while he was writing the book. If the book is for scholars, it needs a different title and a different organization. If it is for the general audience to which it is being distributed, it needs to bring the non-scholarly reader under the spell of either Cleopatra or the period and convince the reader at least momentarily, of the importance of the author's synthesis.

Cleopatra may have captivated Julius Caesar and Mark Antony, but through Lindsay's eyes, her seductiveness was short-circuited because it never reached this reviewer.



A RELIEF of the Egyptian empress Cleopatra is included among the illustrations in Jack Lindsay's book, "Cleopatra." The photo is from the Bettman Archive.

Suspense Where We Live

THE STALKER by Bill Pronzini; Random House, 237 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Much of the enjoyment derived by Marinites and Southern Sonomans in reading this new novel comes from the fact that a great deal of the action takes place in this locality, and familiar landmarks abound.

But quite aside from that, Petaluma-born Bill Pronzini has written a taut, gripping suspense novel, with excellent potential for a movie thriller.

Six young men just out of service pull off an armored car robbery in Illinois with a $750,000 haul, and despite their amateur status, get away with it.

Eleven years later, the one-time bandits have scattered across the country, the statute of limitations having applied to their crime. From its proceeds, some have prospered and some have not.

Then, one by one, they begin to meet violent deaths. The first to go are the three who have remained in the East and Midwest. The three survivors, all living in Northern California, suddenly realize that they have become the targets of a vengeful assassin.

But despite their alertness, "the Limping Man" continues to strike and to kill.

The fear and the guilt he causes affects not only the men he is stalking, but their women as well. And the whole thing comes to a violent conclusion in a hunting shack on a slough off the Petaluma River.

Pronzini is unable to provide an answer to one key question — How did the Limping Man determine the identities of the six robbers when the police had failed?

But aside from that annoying gap, Pronzini has fashioned a well-plotted, tightly-woven and competently written novel.

It is all the more impressive in that it is his first novel, although he has been a prolific writer of published short stores. We are told on the dustjacket that Pronzini, while ordinarily now a San Francisco resident, is currently living on Majorca where he is at work on a second novel.

John Braine: No Longer Angry Man

THE VIEW FROM TOWER HILL by John Braine; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 253 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Rogers.

John Braine is probably best known in this county as one of England's "angry young men" of a decade ago. He is also the author of "Room at the Top," which was to a great extent an expression of that anger.

His newest novel indicates that he's no longer quite so angry, nor does he have anything very important to say. He has, in fact, updated himself and presented an apologia for the upper middle-class establishment.

His characters are perfectly nice people who haven't a thing in the world to worry about except the approach of old age and a growing anxiety that they may have missed some fun along the way.

This sport is introduced in the form of an old boy friend and a new girl friend, who liven things up considerably for our husband and wife principals.

The whole thing is very neatly and professionally done. Everything meshes — personalities, conflicts, events. The level of depth (or superficiality) is constant. The sexual machinations of the middle-agers is, on the whole, tastefully handled.

What bothers you is that you really don't care what happens to these people, how they get their jollies, or whether they drop dead of boredom. They never quite come off as real people, nor does the author convince you that the new morality is a satisfying answer to the problems of modern life.

Along with most modern novelists, Braine doesn't seem to realize that although sex may sell a novel, it doesn't necessarily make one. More likely he does know and puts the onus on the reader who buys the book.

Chase That Fails To Generate Excitement

HOT PURSUIT by Leo Katcher; Atheneum, 212 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Writing in the Los Angeles Times of Leo Katcher's earlier suspense novel, "The Blind Cave," Dorothy Hughes enthused:

"If once I said that only the English can write quality espionage tales, I now amend: the English and Leo Katcher. The Amblerian tradition in suspense will never lose importance while sustained by a writer with the discernment and intelligence of Leo Katcher."

Unfortunately, "Hot Pursuit" does little or nothing to sustain such fulsome praise.

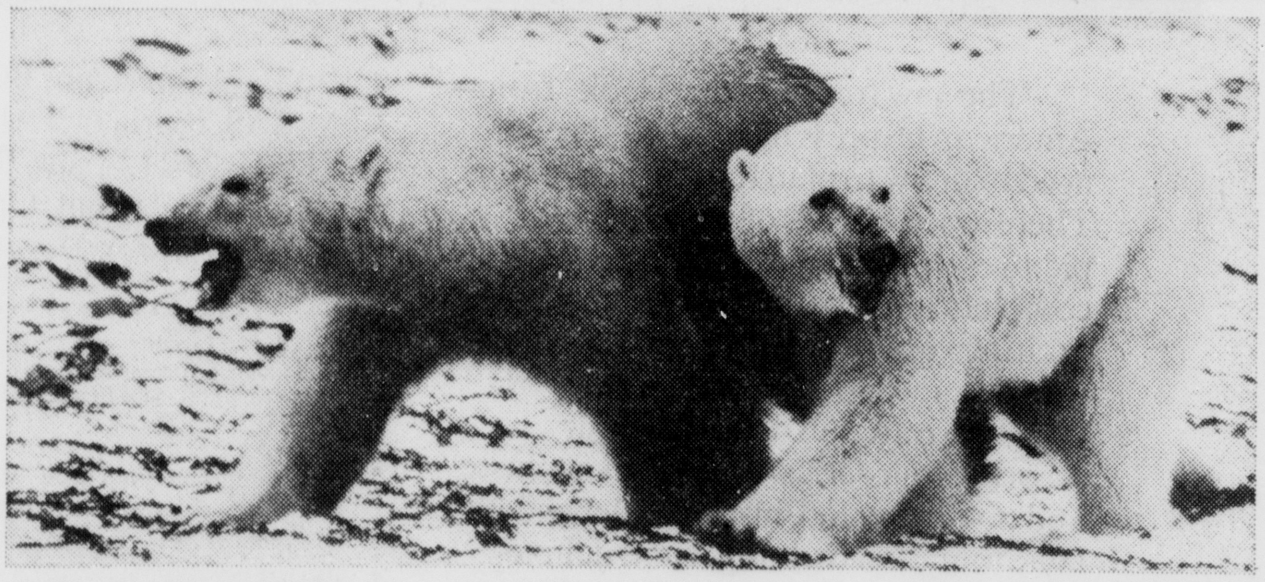
Set in the civil war-stricken Greece of the late 1940s, the novel focusses upon Robert Braden, an American guerilla warfare expert and professional soldier assigned to the Greek government. To Braden and a small party falls the mission of pursuing and punishing a Communist raiding band, and of rescuing their young hostages. The chase takes Braden through the rugged mountains of Greece, and eventually into dangerous Albania.

And all the while, Braden is aware that one of his own diverse group is a traitor.

But the book is slow in catching the reader's full attention. For one thing, Braden is a cold and uninteresting "fish." For another, the reader, by applying old and oft-used formula, has no difficulty discerning the identity of the "fifth communist," and thus suspense is minimized.

The best part of the novel comes late with Katcher's narration of the escape from Albania, when the book seems to suddenly catch fire and to generate genuine excitement. That and Katcher's knowledgeable use of Greek geography, where he spent a number of years as a foreign correspondent before becoming a full-time author, are the two best reasons for sticking with the story.

But this one falls far short of being "Amblerlian."



TWO OF THE surviving polar bears, their numbers now reduced to fewer than 12,000 and facing new perils from hunters and oil prospectors, are pictured on the prowl along the icy shores off Hudson Bay in this photograph from Time-Life Books' newly published "Nature/Science Annual 1971 Edition" with Jerry Korn as editor. A special article and picture series is devoted to their plight. There are also articles on "Taming Earthquakes" ("science can't predict tremors — but might stop them"), the battle to preserve swamplands, the U.S. food crisis, the importance of sleep, electric power brown-outs, the Apollo 13 close call, imperiled species, the American Museum of Natural History, and a discussion by Gilbert Cant of "Is the Pill Safe?" To the last, the answer is "a qualified yes." Those are only some of the features, and Time-Life embellishes it all with its usual eye-catching use of illustrations, many of them in color. At $5.95, it's a bargain for the science buff.

The Reign Of Louis Napoleon

By DON KEOWN

IMPERIAL MASQUERADE by S. C. Burchell; Atheneum, 370 pages, $10.

It is one of the ironies of history that while France honors and the world keeps alive the memory of Napoleon Bonaparte, his nephew, Louis Bonaparte, who also reigned as emperor, is ignored or made a subject of derision.

Yet of the two Bonapartes, it was the latter who most influenced contemporary France and who left his indelible mark upon the metropolis of Paris.

And the two decades during which Louis Napoleon ruled France, first as its prince-president and then as Emperor Napoleon III, constituted one of the most colorful, and most intriguing eras in European history.

S. C. Burchell, an American scholar in European history, has recreated those years, 1850-70, vividly in his book "Imperial Masquerade" that stands as a splendid example of how popular history can and should be written.

Not only does Louis Napoleon emerge from its pages sharply drawn in all his paradoxical complexity and simplicity, but so does the flavor and the spirit of his time and his people.

The Second Empire, Burchell tells us, were "adventurous, contradictory and materialistic years" marked by flamboyance and extravagance, with the frivolous and the superficial valued above the serious and meaningful.

The song from the musical revue that, translated, ran "Without finery and pleasure, we must agree, life is just a stupidity," effectively stated the feeling of the times.

But it was also an era of duality — of beauty in close proximity to vulgarity, of a totalitarian government that often reacted with indecision, of people who welcomed the Empire and yet heaped scorn upon it, of a flourishing culture that ignored its most gifted artists in favor of stilted academicians, of splendid palaces, public buildings and theaters only short distances away from unbelievably noxious slums.

Louis Napoleon, himself, was very much a dual personality, a man who wrapped himself in the glory of the Bonapartes, and yet was most unprepossessing as an individual. A somewhat dreary and introverted man who yet felt himself a figure of destiny. A materialistic-minded puritan in his moral policies and pronouncements, and yet a woman-chaser who often joined in senseless revelry.

But most contradictory of all, he was a sincerely socially-conscious monarch "who believed the future belonged to the many, not the few," and who genuinely wanted to better their lot. And who nonetheless presided during a time when the gap between the poverty-ridden and the luxury-living widened disastrously.

Not by nature a militarist, despite his background, Louis Napoleon promised his people peace, yet led them into a whole series of military adventures that ended in calamity with the Franco-Prussian War which the French absurdly brought down upon themselves.

From the pages of Burchell's fine book, Louis Napoleon emerges as a well-intentioned if ineffectual ruler, not cut out for the role of tyrant, but, strangely enough, a political figure who might have been far more successful in democratic surroundings.

He left his country a great legacy in the beauty of the Paris he and his great planner, Baron Georges Haussmann, helped to recreate. And he also served, despite all the wastefulness of the France of his time, to pave the way for his nation's entrance into the new industrial, technological age. At heart, Louis Naploeon was more impressed by science than by the arts.

It is unfortunate that Burchell presents a less clear picture of the beautiful empress Eugenie than of her husband. For the Spanish-born Eugenie was a fascinating figure who at the close of the Second Empire actually wielded more power than the ailing Louis Napoleon.

And Burchell's book terminates rather abruptly, leaving us to consult the history texts for the final fates of Louis Napoleon, Eugenie and the other figures of the time. An epilogue tracing briefly their years after the fall of the empire would have been appropriate.

But still it is a marvelous book in the manner in which it brings alive the people and the spirit of the time.

Its most memorable figures were not the popinjays of the court nor their lackeys among the intellectuals, but rather a group of young revolutionaries among the artists who despised and courageously criticized the decadence and hypocrisy of their country.

These were men like Edouard Manet, Charles Baudelaire, Emile Zola, Auguste Renoir, Paul Cezanne, Arthur Rimbaud, Gustave Flaubert, and the Goncourt brothers.

They were subjected to ridicule or to neglect, while the court and cultural decision-makers fawned upon less talented figures who avoided the reality of the present in their work and fostered the mythology of the past. A handful such as Jacques Offenbach bridged the gap. But the more solid figures within the Establishment were the scientists and engineers — the Louis Pasteurs and the Ferdinand de Lesseps.

Burchell's depiction of a time of flamboyance — "of a dying civilization" — is an exhilarating reading experience. Most importantly, Burchell has treated the times and its characters fairly, yet perceptively. He thus has created not only an entertaining book, but a work of historical scholarship that surpasses in its impact and value a great many of the more serious, "weightier" tomes. Little of Burchell's material is new. But he handles it beautifully, and evaluates it brilliantly.

More perceptive readers will note a disturbing number of parallels between the France of the 1860s and the United States of today — military adventures, rampant materialism, a love for luxury, a tendency to avoid or pervert reality, an emphasis on science, an increasingly heavy-handed government, a rebellious underground, etc.

ONE OF OUR favorite reference works, the "Guinness Book of World Records" continues to grow with each edition as man adds to his feats that range from the subline to the absurd.

The newly published 1971 edition totals 608 pages, in itself a record, up from the 544 pages of its predecessor.

Twin brothers Norris and Ross McWhirter are again responsible for the Sterling-published compendium of "firsts," "mosts," "greatest," "smallest," etc., that can only be described as amazing in its dettail.

The widest bridge? The Crawford Street Bridge in Providence, R.I., at 1,147 feet. The biggest golf course bunker? Hell's Half Acre on the seventh hole of the Pine Valley Course in New Jersey. The largest palace? The Imperial Palace in Peking. The highest waterspout? Off New South Wales, Australia, in 1898 — 5,014 feet. Densest population? Macao. Most consecutive bowling strikes in sanctioned play? By Frank Caruna and Max Stein, 29 each. Newest metal? Kurchatovium. Longest-lived comic strip? The Katzenjammer Kids.

From its pages you learn that some one jammed 46 people into a small car, some one else lay on a bed of nails for more than 25 hours, and yet another passed the driver's test on the 40th try after failing 39 times.

Giving the book a local angle is a photograph of Marin's Mike Suyderhoud, credited with the world's longest water ski jump.

As always, the book is a fascinating mixture of essential information and curious trivia.

Where else would you learn so quickly the total cost of America's space exploration program? Or the name of the holder of the world's water-treading title? Or the identity of the claimant to the international bomb-defusing crown?

And all for $5.95

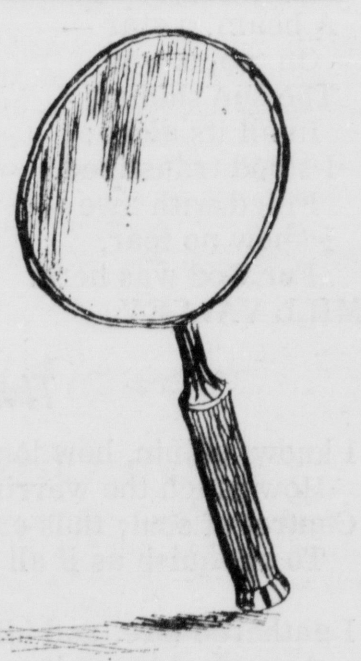
MURDER IN THE WALLS by Richard Martin Stern; Scribner's, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



Richard Martin Stern, author of spy thrillers and mystery novels, has fashioned his best book to date in "Murder in the Walls."

The mystery element is low-key and offers no great surprise. But characterizations and settings are no less than superb.

In the city of Santa Cristo in the American Southwest a prostitute is found murdered in the house operated by Flora Hobbs. She conducts her "business" in one of the region's landmarks, a fortress-like hacienda dating back to the early 17th Century.

Then another body is found out on the desert.

It is up to Lt. Johnny Ortiz of the Santa Cristo police to probe the deaths for links and to bring the killer or killers to justice. He has the help of Cassie Enright, a young black anthropologist, who is also dedicated to the thwarting of a politically-motivated scheme to demolish Flora Hobbs' house to make way for a new road.

Ortiz and Miss Enright are a couple of delightful characters, and Stern develops the romance between them nicely. Other members of his cast are a colorful and interesting lot. And the mood and feeling of the Southwest pervades the novel.

Stern has produced a superior novel in keeping with his current position as president of the Mystery Writers of America.

Reviews Of New Reading

CLEOPATRA by Jack Lindsay; Coward, McCann and Geogheagan, 568 pages, $8.75. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Peter Drucker, the management analyst-teacher, speaking in San Francisco recently, ed out how important it is for business men to distinguish between what is important and what is merely interesting. Reading "Cleopatra" by Jack Lindsay, I am struck by the fact that this is an equally significant distinction for authors and historians.

Lindsay has camouflaged a social and political history of Rome from the end of Julius Caesar's reign until the final defeat of Mark Antony in the more salable gown of "Cleopatra." He has collected many interesting facts about Rome and about the Hellenistic world in which Cleopatra operated.

We learn that women were often barren because they and the men with whom they mated suffered lead poisoning from the use of lead cooking utensils and the carrying of water through lead pipes. We are presented with a good deal of speculation about the attempt of Cleopatra, Antony and others to draw about themselves the theological mystique which would relate them directly to some of the Eastern gods worshipped by many of their subjects.

In addition, there is an entire chapter analyzing Virgil's fourth Eclogue, and a good deal of discussion abut whether or not Cleopatra's son Caesarion was actually fathered by Caesar.

All of this, and a great deal more, provides a provocative platter of intellectual hors d'oeuvres. It is not, however, the satisfying repast that a tightly-knit, well-informed biography provides.

Lindsay has transgressed against Drucker's distinction; he has given us a great many interesting historical tidbits, and he has not given us an important, cohesive picture of Cleopatra, the person, or Cleopatra, the historical force.

Part of the difficulty with "Cleopatra" would seem to be that Lindsay did not have any specific audience clearly in mind while he was writing the book. If the book is for scholars, it needs a different title and a different organization. If it is for the general audience to which it is being distributed, it needs to bring the non-scholarly reader under the spell of either Cleopatra or the period and convince the reader at least momentarily, of the importance of the author's synthesis.

Cleopatra may have captivated Julius Caesar and Mark Antony, but through Lindsay's eyes, her seductiveness was short-circuited because it never reached this reviewer.

A RELIEF of the Egyptian empress Cleopatra is included among the illustrations in Jack Lindsay's book, "Cleopatra." The photo is from the Bettman Archive.

Suspense Where We Live

THE STALKER by Bill Pronzini; Random House, 237 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Much of the enjoyment derived by Marinites and Southern Sonomans in reading this new novel comes from the fact that a great deal of the action takes place in this locality, and familiar landmarks abound.

But quite aside from that, Petaluma-born Bill Pronzini has written a taut, gripping suspense novel, with excellent potential for a movie thriller.

Six young men just out of service pull off an armored car robbery in Illinois with a $750,000 haul, and despite their amateur status, get away with it.

Eleven years later, the onetime bandits have scattered across the country, the statute of limitations having applied to their crime. From its proceeds, some have prospered and some have not.

Then, one by one, they begin to meet violent deaths. The first to go are the three who have remained in the East and Midwest. The three survivors, all living in Northern California, suddenly realize that they have become the targets of a vengeful assassin.

But despite their alertness, "the Limping Man" continues to strike and to kill.

The fear and the guilt he causes affects not only the men he is stalking, but their women as well. And the whole thing comes to a violent conclusion in a hunting shack on a slough off the Petaluma River.

Pronzini is unable to provide an answer to one key question — How did the Limping Man determine the identities of the six robbers when the police had failed?

But aside from that annoying gap, Pronzini has fashioned a well-plotted, tightly-woven and competently written novel.

It is all the more impressive in that it is his first novel, although he has been a prolific writer of published short stores. We are told on the dustjacket that Pronzini, while ordinarily now a San Francisco resident, is currently living on Majorca where he is at work on a second novel.

John Braine: No Longer Angry Man

THE VIEW FROM TOWER HILL by John Braine; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 253 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Rogers.

John Braine is probably best known in this county as one of England's "angry young men" of a decade ago. He is also the author of "Room at the Top," which was to a great extent an expression of that anger.

His newest novel indicates that he's no longer quite so angry, nor does he have anything very important to say. He has, in fact, updated himself and presented an apologia for the upper middle-class establishment.

His characters are perfectly nice people who haven't a thing in the world to worry about except the approach of old age and a growing anxiety that they may have missed some fun along the way.

This sport is introduced in the form of an old boy friend and a new girl friend, who liven things up considerably for our husband and wife principals.

The whole thing is very neatly and professionally done. Everything meshes — personalities, conflicts, events. The level of depth (or superficiality) is constant. The sexual machinations of the middleagers is, on the whole, tastefully handled.

What bothers you is that you really don't care what happens to these people, how they get their jollies, or whether they drop dead of boredom. They never quite come off as real people, nor does the author convince you that the new morality is a satisfying answer to the problems of modern life.

Along with most modern novelists, Braine doesn't seem to realize that although sex may sell a novel, it doesn't necessarily make one. More likely he does know and puts the onus on the reader who buys the book.

Chase That Fails To Generate Excitement

HOT PURSUIT by Leo Katcher; Atheneum, 212 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Writing in the Los Angeles Times of Leo Katcher's earlier suspense novel, "The Blind Cave," Dorothy Hughes enthused:

"If once I said that only the English can write quality espionage tales, I now amend: the English and Leo Katcher. The Amblerian tradition in suspense will never lose importance while sustained by a writer with the discernment and intelligence of Leo Katcher."

Unfortunately, "Hot Pursuit" does little or nothing to sustain such fulsome praise.

Set in the civil war-stricken Greece of the late 1940s, the novel focusses upon Robert Braden, an American guerilla warfare expert and professional soldier assigned to the Greek government. To Braden and a small party falls the mission of pursuing and punishing a Communist raiding band, and of rescuing their young hostages. The chase takes Braden through the rugged mountains of Greece, and eventually into dangerous Albania.

And all the while, Braden is aware that one of his own diverse group is a traitor.

But the book is slow in catching the reader's full attention. For one thing, Braden is a cold and uninteresting "fish." For another, the reader, by applying old and oft-used formula, has no difficulty discerning the identity of the "fifth communist," and thus suspense is minimized.

The best part of the novel comes late with Katcher's narration of the escape from Albania, when the book seems to suddenly catch fire and to generate genuine excitement. That and Katcher's knowledgeable use of Greek geography, where he spent a number of years as a foreign correspondent before becoming a full-time author, are the two best reasons for sticking with the story.

But this one falls far short of being "Amblerlian."

TWO OF THE surviving polar bears, their numbers now reduced to fewer than 12,000 and facing new perils from hunters and oil prospectors, are pictured on the prowl along the icy shores off Hudson Bay in this photograph from Time-Life Books' newly published "Nature/Science Annual 1971 Edition" with Jerry Korn as editor. A special article and picture series is devoted to their plight. There are also articles on "Taming Earthquakes" ("science can't predict tremors — but might stop them"), the battle to preserve swamplands, the U.S. food crisis, the importance of sleep, electric power brown-outs, the Apollo 13 close call, imperiled species, the American Museum of Natural History, and a discussion by Gilbert Cant of "Is the Pill Safe?" To the last, the answer is "a qualified yes." Those are only some of the features, and Time-Life embellishes it all with its usual eye-catching use of illustrations, many of them in color. At $5.95, it's a bargain for the science buff.

MY EASTER PRAYER

My prayer for today is for greater
Human enlightenment and compassion;
To eliminate all wars and greed,
All selfishness and hate between
Men and nations forever.

May this Easter Day fill the hearts
Of all men throughout the world,
With a strong desire to live in peace,
And sense the spirit of Christ's
Love and mercy enter into them,
That everyone should feel
Infinite happiness by living with
Each other in fraternal peace and love.

EASTER SUNSETS

The golden hues,
Rays of light,
The blinding sun
Of day portrays,
Pauses for a while,
Out on Point Reyes,
And there,
Beauty and imagination
Awake, beautiful sunsets,
Gleaming,
For all the living to see,
Nature's glowing light.

POINT REYES C. B. GEARHART

JOY CRY

Shout it through the shadowed valley —
And from the tip-top mountain crest —
Separation and evil
are dispelled;
God cared enough
to send the very best!

NOVATO GLORIA TOVANI

EASTER

I got lost — I got lost
In the shadow
Of the cross;
Suddenly a ray,
A beam, a star —
On, no, it was
The sun shining
In all its glory;
I stood transfixed,
Filled with awe —
I knew no fear,
For God was here.

MILL VALLEY AMANDA PARKER

THE BATTLE

I know, within, how long the fight's been fought,
How much the warring factions strove to win
Control of soul; thus each side vainly sought
To vanquish as if all else had not been.

I gathered lore, and idle talk, and such
As served to exalt me among both sides
Without the slightest thought to just how much
Such dalliance with truth the truth just hides.

At long, long last — and fully seen not yet —
This distant war became so real to me;
My soul was being fought for as they met!
My eyes were opened and at last I see.

Too long a craven! Now, with shield and sword,
For Christ Jesus — my Savior and my Lord.

The Reign Of Louis Napoleon

By DON KEOWN

IMPERIAL MASQUERADE by S. C. Burchell; Atheneum, 370 pages, $10.

It is one of the ironies of history that while France honors and the world keeps alive the memory of Napoleon Bonaparte, his nephew, Louis Bonaparte, who also reigned as emperor, is ignored or made a subject of derision.

Yet of the two Bonapartes, it was the latter who most influenced contemporary France and who left his indelible mark upon the metropolis of Paris.

And the two decades during which Louis Napoleon ruled France, first as its prince-president and then as Emperor Napoleon III, constituted one of the most colorful, and most intriguing eras in European history.

S. C. Burchell, an American scholar in European history, has recreated those years, 1850-70, vividly in his book "Imperial Masquerade" that stands as a splendid example of how popular history can and should be written.

Not only does Louis Napoleon emerge from its pages sharply drawn in all his paradoxical complexity and simplicity, but so does the flavor and the spirit of his time and his people.

The Second Empire, Burchell tells us, were "adventurous, contradictory and materialistic years" marked by flamboyance and extravagance, with the frivolous and the superficial valued above the serious and meaningful.

The song from the musical revue that, translated, ran "Without finery and pleasure, we must agree, life is just a stupidity," effectively stated the feeling of the times.

But it was also an era of duality — of beauty in close proximity to vulgarity, of a totalitarian government that often reacted with indecision, of people who welcomed the Empire and yet heaped scorn upon it, of a flourishing culture that ignored its most gifted artists in favor of stilted academicians, of splendid palaces, public buildings and theaters only short distances away from unbelievably noxious slums.

Louis Napoleon, himself, was very much a dual personality, a man who wrapped himself in the glory of the Bonapartes, and yet was most unprepossessing as an individual. A somewhat dreary and introverted man who yet felt himself a figure of destiny. A materialistic-minded puritan in his moral policies and pronouncements, and yet a woman-chaser who often joined in senseless revelry.

But most contradictory of all, he was a sincerely socially-conscious monarch "who believed the future belonged to the many, not the few," and who genuinely wanted to better their lot. And who nonetheless presided during a time when the gap between the poverty-ridden and the luxury-living widened disastrously.

Not by nature a militarist, despite his background, Louis Napoleon promised his people peace, yet led them into a whole series of military adventures that ended in calamity with the Franco-Prussian War which the French absurdly brought down upon themselves.

From the pages of Burchell's fine book, Louis Napoleon emerges as a well-intentioned if ineffectual ruler, not cut out for the role of tyrant, but, strangely enough, a political figure who might have been far more successful in democratic surroundings.

He left his country a great legacy in the beauty of the Paris he and his great planner, Baron Georges Haussmann, helped to recreate. And he also served, despite all the wastefulness of the France of his time, to pave the way for his nation's entrance into the new industrial, technological age. At heart, Louis Naploeon was more impressed by science than by the arts.

It is unfortunate that Burchell presents a less clear picture of the beautiful empress Eugenie than of her husband. For the Spanish-born Eugenie was a fascinating figure who at the close of the Second Empire actually wielded more power than the ailing Louis Napoleon.

And Burchell's book terminates rather abruptly, leaving us to consult the history texts for the final fates of Louis Napoleon, Eugenie and the other figures of the time. An epilogue tracing briefly their years after the fall of the empire would have been appropriate.

But still it is a marvelous book in the manner in which it brings alive the people and the spirit of the time.

Its most memorable figures were not the popinjays of the court nor their lackeys among the intellectuals, but rather a group of young revolutionaries among the artists who despised and courageously criticized the decadence and hypocrisy of their country.

These were men like Edouard Manet, Charles Baudelaire, Emile Zola, Auguste Renoir, Paul Cezanne, Arthur Rimbaud, Gustave Flaubert, and the Goncourt brothers.

They were subjected to ridicule or to neglect, while the court and cultural decision-makers fawned upon less talented figures who avoided the reality of the present in their work and fostered the mythology of the past. A handful such as Jacques Offenbach bridged the gap. But the more solid figures within the Establishment were the scientists and engineers — the Louis Pasteurs and the Ferdinand de Lesseps.

Burchell's depiction of a time of flamboyance — "of a dying civilization" — is an exhilarating reading experience. Most importantly, Burchell has treated the times and its characters fairly, yet perceptively. He thus has created not only an entertaining book, but a work of historical scholarship that surpasses in its impact and value a great many of the more serious, "weightier" tomes. Little of Burchell's material is new. But he handles it beautifully, and evaluates it brilliantly.

More perceptive readers will note a disturbing number of parallels between the France of the 1860s and the United States of today — military adventures, rampant materialism, a love for luxury, a tendency to avoid or pervert reality, an emphasis on science, an increasingly heavy-handed government, a rebellious underground, etc.

ONE OF OUR favorite reference works, the "Guinness Book of World Records" continues to grow with each edition as man adds to his feats that range from the subline to the absurd.

The newly published 1971 edition totals 608 pages, in itself a record, up from the 544 pages of its predecessor.

Twin brothers Norris and Ross McWhirter are again responsible for the Sterling-published compendium of "firsts," "mosts," "greatest," "smallest," etc., that can only be described as amazing in its dettail.

The widest bridge? The Crawford Street Bridge in Providence, R.I., at 1,147 feet. The biggest golf course bunker? Hell's Half Acre on the seventh hole of the Pine Valley Course in New Jersey. Most consecutive bowling strikes in sanctioned play? By Frank Caruna and Max Stein, 29 each. Newest metal? Kurchatovium. Longest-lived comic strip? The Katzenjammer Kids.

From its pages you learn that some one jammed 46 people into a small car, some one else lay on a bed of nails for more than 25 hours, and yet another passed the driver's test on the 40th try after failing 39 times.

Giving the book a local angle is a photograph of Marin's Mike Suyderhoud, credited with the world's longest water ski jump.

As always, the book is a fascinating mixture of essential information and curious trivia.

Where else would you learn so quickly the total cost of America's space exploration program? Or the name of the holder of the world's water-treading title? Or the identity of the claimant to the international bomb-defusing crown?

When Soil Warms, It's Time For Dahlias

Garden Page

As soon as the soil becomes warm in spring it is time to plant Dahlias, one of the favorite sources for summer flowers.

Your nurseryman has tubers on display now with color illustrations of the flowers.

The most popular types of Dahlias planted in California gardens are decorative, cactus and pompon. Of course, you will see many, many more types in flower shows featuring Dahlias.

THE DECORATIVE flowers are huge, sometimes almost reaching a foot across when grown by experts. The colors range from pure white through yellow, orange, pink, red, violet, and bicolor.

They may be formal in arrangement, or shaggy — in which case they fall into the "informal decorative" class.

Plants of the decorative Dahlias are robust growers and require lots of room to grow. Set them three to four feet apart and keep them securely tied to stakes. The terminal flower buds are removed, all but one, to provide the very large individual flowers.

THE CACTUS Dahlias have more slender petals and smaller flowers. The general appearance is shaggy in some and formal in others. The trend of popularity is toward the latter group, which are known as "semi-cactus."

Most popular colors in the cactus types are yellow, apricot, red, white and yellow. There are some bicolor forms that are very effective. They are easily made into pleasing arrangements and are long-lasting when you follow these suggestions.

Cut Dahlia flowers (when fully mature) in the evening, preferably a day or two after irrigation. Crush or cut the ends of the stems in several places and plunge into deep water overnight. They will be in excellent condition for arranging in the morning.

THE POMPONS are very formally arranged small ball-shaped flowers in shades of white, pink, yellow, red and blue. Plants are medium-height growers, well-branched, and carry a profusion of flowers. They make excellent small table arrangements in combination with many varieties of ferns.

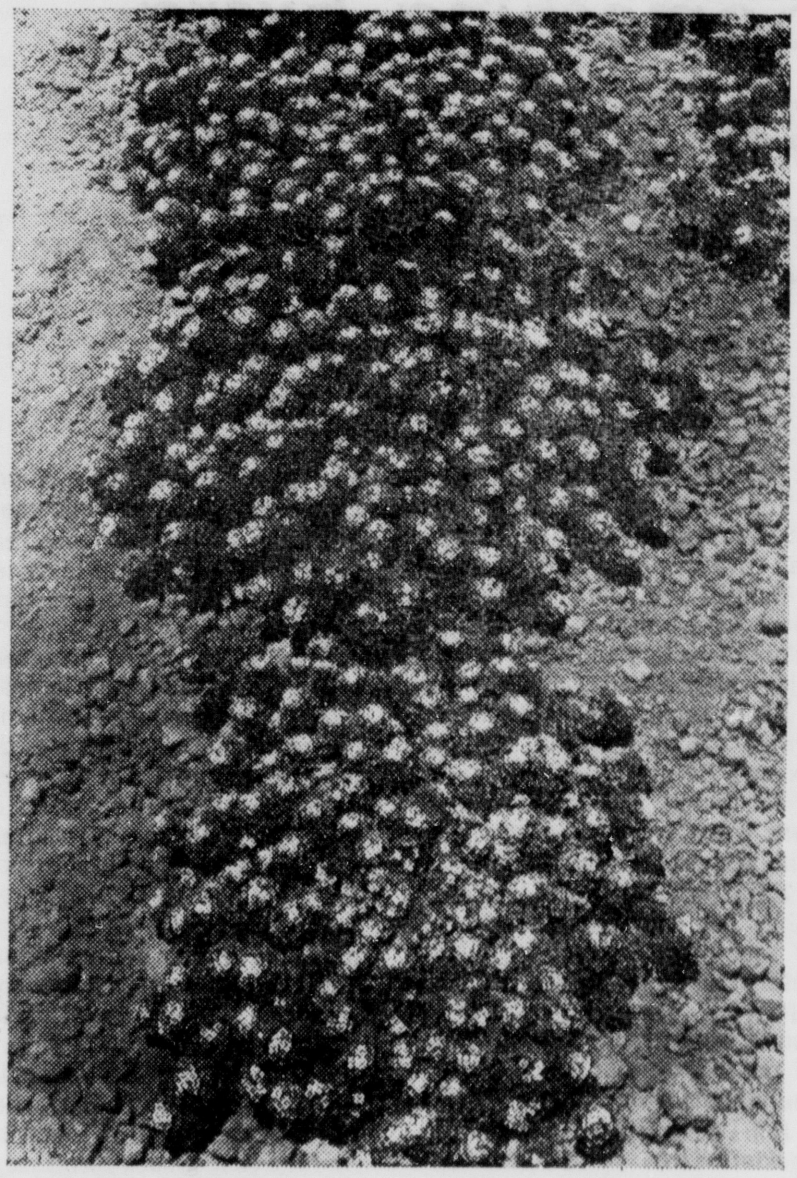
A type that is gaining in favor, and you may see on display at your nursery is the collarette.

They derive their name from the collar of broader petals surrounding a disk of smaller petaloids in a contrasting color.

After digging 10-inch deep holes and incorporating a dry food with the bottom, then add four inches of untreated soil on which the tuber is set. Place a four-foot stake in the hole and lay the tuber horizontally with the eye adjacent to the stake. Cover the tuber with two or three inches of soil and soak with water.

AS THE SHOOTS arise from the eye, add more soil until the basin is almost full. Leave a depression for adding water as required.

Be sure to keep the stalk firmly attached to the stake and increase your watering schedule as the plant grows larger and the weather gets warmer. As long as your soil is good and you have a cushion of food under the plant you will not have to add any more fertilizer.



GROUND-HUGGING, sweet-smelling alyssum is a natural as a border for a path, drive or bed. Its tiny but clustered flowers come in white, lavender, pink, lilac and purple.

Plants Make A Difference

Have you ever noticed how interior decorators feature growing house plants in their store and magazine displays?

The plants aren't for sale. They're just there because they make the tables and chairs and couches look their best.

A glossy, tubbed aralia set beside a chair brings out the wood and fabric tones. Peperomias and wax flowers, phildendrons and ivy, call attention to the beauty of a walnut finish. They make maple furniture sing, compliment mahogany and teak, and point up the charm of natural woods.

Green leaves trailing from a shelf "finishes" that shelf with taste; and a graceful little palm can add distinction to a room.

The relationship between furniture and plants is a happy one, and more and more homeowners are taking advantage of this fact, taking a tip from professional decorators and using house plants to enrich their own decor.

Here's all you have to do: Choose the plants that appeal to you most, put them in suitable containers in the kind of light they prefer, and keep them healthy with a few minutes care each week.

Suppose, for instance, you would like a tall, dramatic plant against one wall, a low, bushy one to set on a table, and a trailing vine to spill downwards from a shelf. There are dozens of plants in each category at your nursery, and from them you might choose a Queensland Umbrella Tree (tall), a peperomia (low and bushy), and a grape ivy to trail down. Your nurseryman will help you choose the right sized containers, and you can make potting easy by bringing home a bag of specially prepared soil mixture too.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant annual flowers now for late spring and summer bloom. Check what's available at your nursery — the list of colorful candidates is a long one.

✓ Tuberous Begonia seedlings can be set out now. Use them to brighten the shade garden and plant some in containers for close-up enjoyment.

✓ Plants make thoughtful Easter season gifts.

MY EASTER PRAYER

My prayer for today is for greater
Human enlightenment and compassion;
To eliminate all wars and greed,
All selfishness and hate between
Men and nations forever.

May this Easter Day fill the hearts
Of all men throughout the world,
With a strong desire to live in peace,
And sense the spirit of Christ's
Love and mercy enter into them,
That everyone should feel
Infinite happiness by living with
Each other in fraternal peace and love.

FAIRFAX DOROTHY E. LYNN

EASTER SUNSETS

The golden hues,
  Rays of light,
The blinding sun
  Of day portrays,
Pauses for a while,
  Out on Point Reyes,
And there,
  Beauty and imagination
Awake, beautiful sunsets,
  Gleaming,
For all the living to see,
  Nature's glowing light.

POINT REYES C. B. GEARHART

JOY CRY

Shout it through
    the shadowed valley —
And from the tip-top
    mountain crest —
Separation and evil
    are dispelled;
God cared enough
    to send the very best!

NOVATO GLORIA TOVANI

EASTER

I got lost — I got lost
  In the shadow
Of the cross;
  Suddenly a ray,
A beam, a star —
  On, no, it was
The sun shining
  In all its glory;
I stood transfixed,
  Filled with awe —
I knew no fear,
  For God was here.

MILL VALLEY AMANDA PARKER

THE BATTLE

I know, within, how long the fight's been fought,
  How much the warring factions strove to win
Control of soul; thus each side vainly sought
  To vanquish as if all else had not been.

I gathered lore, and idle talk, and such
  As served to exalt me among both sides
Without the slightest thought to just how much
  Such dalliance with truth the truth just hides.

At long, long last — and fully seen not yet —
  This distant war became so real to me;
My soul was being fought for as they met!
  My eyes were opened and at last I see.

Too long a craven! Now, with shield and sword,
For Christ Jesus — my Savior and my Lord.

Something Extra To Enliven Your Living Room Decor

A Build-It-Yourself Commode Lends A Touch of Elegance

By STEVE ELLINGSON

You can go all out on upholstered furniture, floor coverings and curtains, and come up with nothing if you don't finish your room with suitable, useful accent pieces to give it that extra-added attraction.

Every room needs end tables, coffee tables and the like to expand its usefulness and give it substance. Just such an accent piece is pictured at right with actress Corrina Tsopei.

THIS HEXAGONAL commode not only provides allure to your room, but you will also find it to be exceedingly functional. The doors open to a roomy storage area for all sorts of miscellany that keeps accumulating in every hoem.

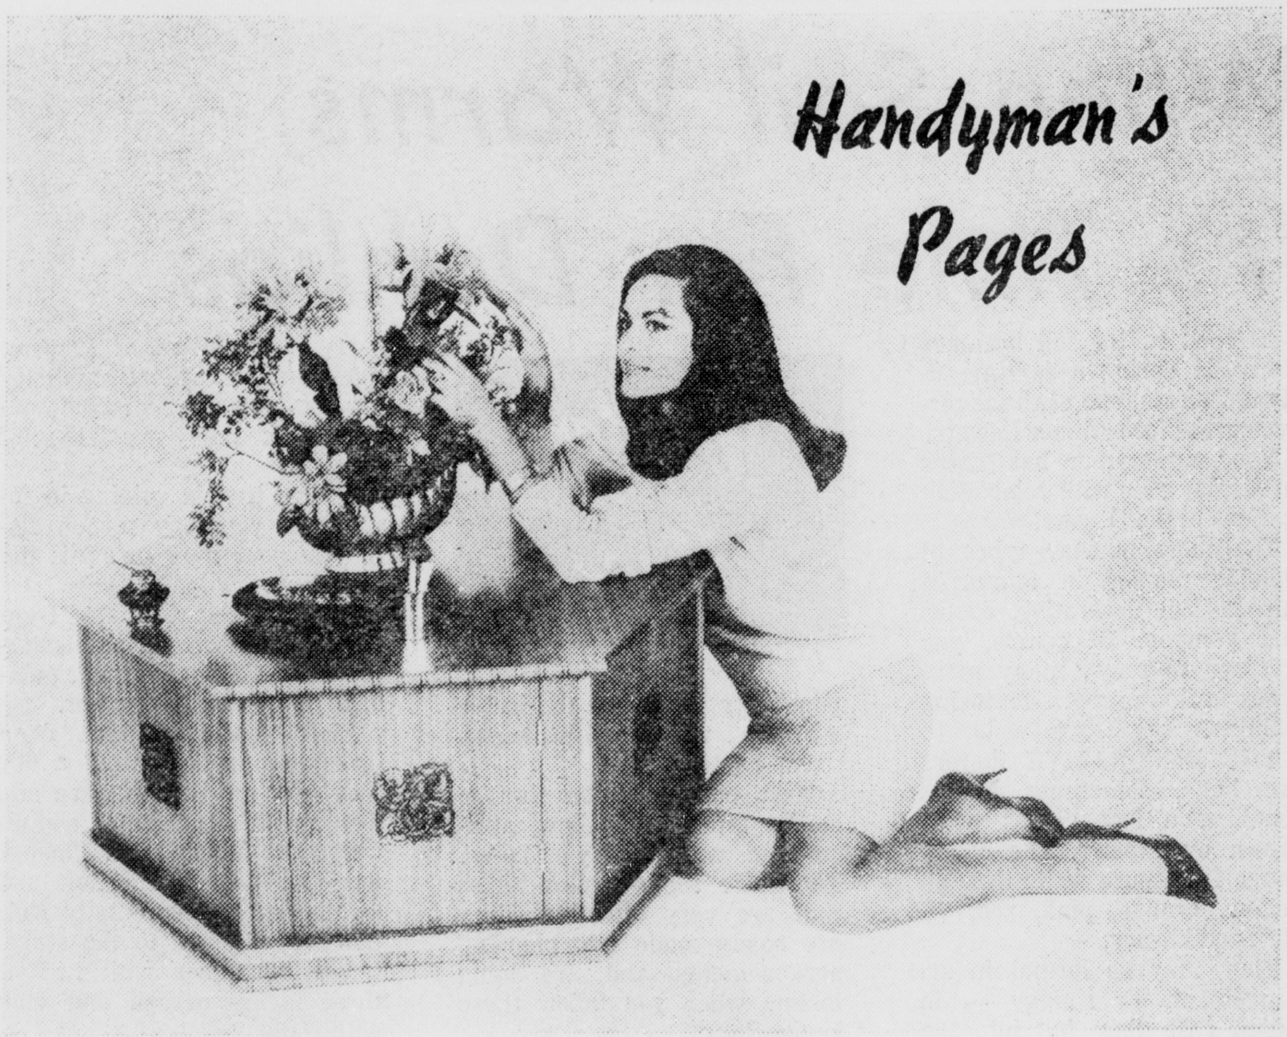
It's ideal when used as a cocktail table by a chair or sofa. It's mounted on casters and can easily be moved from one area to another, a handy idea when cleaning time comes.

It's the sort of furniture that makes things just a little easier for the busy homemaker and hostess who likes style.

Even though this commode has a rich and elegant appearance, it's something any amateur can build when he uses the full-size pattern. All you need do is trace the pattern parts on plywood, then saw them out, and finally put the parts together.

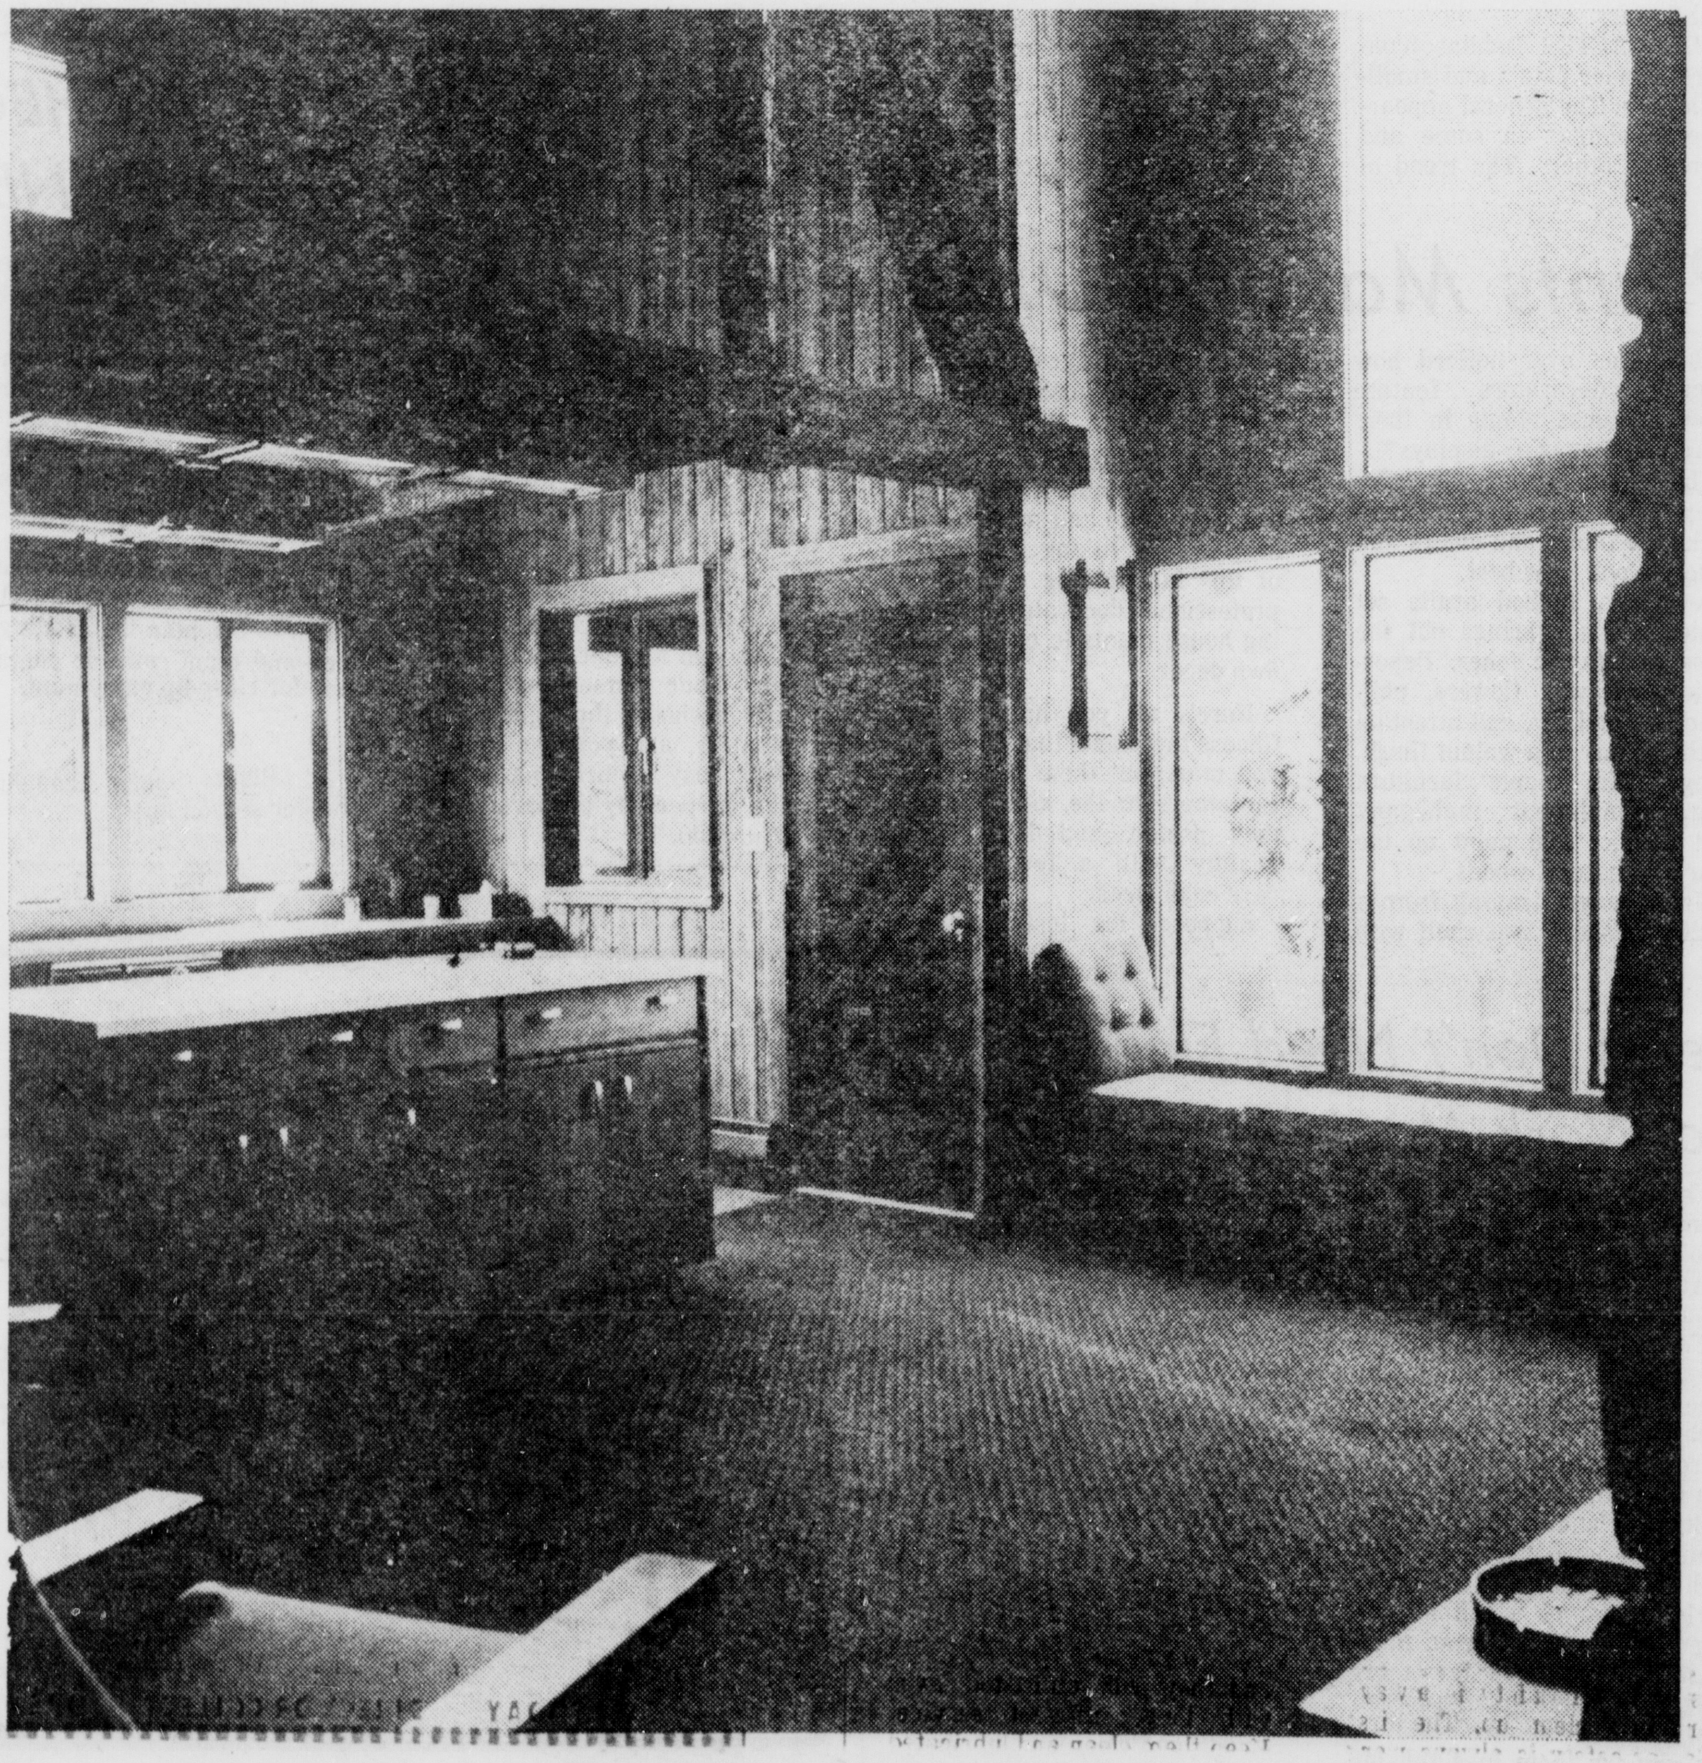
The commode shown was made of birch, but numerous other fancy plywoods are now available, should you prefer something different.

GETTING A professional finish is as simple as A, B, C when you use this type of material. And the cost of such furniture is very low when you do your own building.



THIS HANDSOME commode built by a home handyman with the help of a Steve Ellingson pattern competes for the eye's attention with the pretty model, actress Corrina Tsopei.

To obtain the full-size Commode Pattern No. 414, send $1. (Add 25 cents per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409.



OPEN LIVING IS THE THEME OF MOST "second" or vacation homes constructed in recent years. As shown here the emphasis is placed on the use of wood which requires little maintenance, serves well for years to come, and imparts a feeling of warmth and comfort. Cathedral ceilings are popular, especially when large glass areas are ed to provide view and natural illumination. The wooden kitchen cabinets have the added feature of plastic laminate tops, making them easy to maintain. Numerous plank-and-beam construction ideas can be found in a 16-page full-color brochure offered without charge by the Wood Products Industry Fund, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

When Soil Warms, It's Time For Dahlias

Garden Page

As soon as the soil becomes warm in spring it is time to plant Dahlias, one of the favorite sources for summer flowers.

Your nurseryman has tubers on display now with color illustrations of the flowers.

The most popular types of Dahlias planted in California gardens are decorative, cactus and pompon. Of course, you will see many, many more types in flower shows featuring Dahlias.

THE DECORATIVE flowers are huge, sometimes almost reaching a foot across when grown by experts. The colors range from pure white through yellow, orange, pink, red, violet, and bicolor.

They may be formal in arrangement, or shaggy — in which case they fall into the "informal decorative" class.

Plants of the decorative Dahlias are robust growers and require lots of room to grow. Set them three to four feet apart and keep them securely tied to stakes. The terminal flower buds are removed, all but one, to provide the very large individual flowers.

THE CACTUS Dahlias have more slender petals and smaller flowers. The general appearance is shaggy in some and formal in others. The trend of popularity is toward the latter group, which are known as "semi-cactus."

Most popular colors in the cactus types are yellow, apricot, red, white and yellow. There are some bicolor forms that are very effective. They are easily made into pleasing arrangements and are long-lasting when you follow these suggestions.

Cut Dahlia flowers (when fully mature) in the evening, preferably a day or two after irrigation. Crush or cut the ends of the stems in several places and plunge into deep water overnight. They will be in excellent condition for arranging in the morning.

THE POMPONS are very formally arranged small ball-shaped flowers in shades of white, pink, yellow, red and blue. Plants are medium-height growers, well-branched, and carry a profusion of flowers. They make excellent small table arrangements in combination with many varieties of ferns.

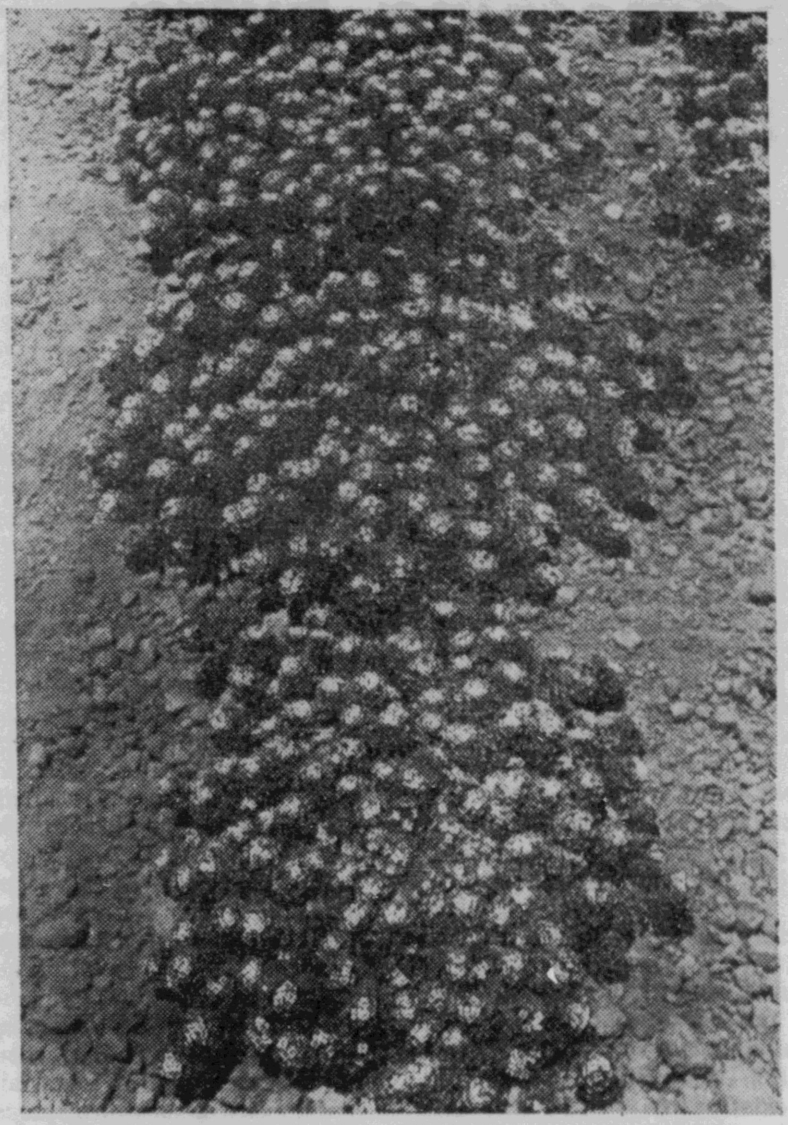
A type that is gaining in favor, and you may see on display at your nursery is the collarette.

They derive their name from the collar of broader petals surrounding a disk of smaller petaloids in a contrasting color.

After digging 10-inch deep holes and incorporating a dry food with the bottom, then add four inches of untreated soil on which the tuber is set. Place a four-foot stake in the hole and lay the tuber horizontally with the eye adjacent to the stake. Cover the tuber with two or three inches of soil and soak with water.

AS THE SHOOTS arise from the eye, add more soil until the basin is almost full. Leave a depression for adding water as required.

Be sure to keep the stalk firmly attached to the stake and increase your watering schedule as the plant grows larger and the weather gets warmer. As long as your soil is good and you have a cushion of food under the plant you will not have to add any more fertilizer.



GROUND-HUGGING, sweet-smelling alyssum is a natural as a border for a path, drive or bed. Its tiny but clustered flowers come in white, lavender, pink, lilac and purple.

Plants Make A Difference

Have you ever noticed how interior decorators feature growing house plants in their store and magazine displays?

The plants aren't for sale. They're just there because they make the tables and chairs and couches look their best.

A glossy, tubbed aralia set beside a chair brings out the wood and fabric tones. Peperomias and wax flowers, phildendrons and ivy, call attention to the beauty of a walnut finish. They make maple furniture sing, compliment mahogany and teak, and point up the charm of natural woods.

Green leaves trailing from a shelf "finishes" that shelf with taste; and a graceful little palm can add distinction to a room.

The relationship between furniture and plants is a happy one, and more and more homeowners are taking advantage of this fact, taking a tip from professional decorators and using house plants to enrich their own decor.

Here's all you have to do: Choose the plants that appeal to you most, put them in suitable containers in the kind of light they prefer, and keep them healthy with a few minutes care each week.

Suppose, for instance, you would like a tall, dramatic plant against one wall, a low, bushy one to set on a table, and a trailing vine to spill downwards from a shelf. There are dozens of plants in each category at your nursery, and from them you might choose a Queensland Umbrella Tree (tall), a peperomia (low and bushy), and a grape ivy to trail down. Your nurseryman will help you choose the right sized containers, and you can make potting easy by bringing home a bag of specially prepared soil mixture too.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant annual flowers now for late spring and summer bloom. Check what's available at your nursery — the list of colorful candidates is a long one.

✓ Tuberous Begonia seedlings can be set out now. Use them to brighten the shade garden and plant some in containers for close-up enjoyment.

✓ Plants make thoughtful Easter season gifts.

✓ Many Rhododendrons are blooming — or will be doing so soon — which means now is a good time to shop for these regal beauties.

✓ Use dwarf citrus as tubbed or patio plants. They bear heavily in containers and are ornamental throughout the year.

✓ Remember, when planting anything, good soil preparation pays off.

✓ You can give spring-blooming shrubs a light pruning simply by cutting blossoms for the house.

The Versatile Wood Bookcase

One of the most versatile storage units possible, the wood bookcase is the simplest home furniture to build, and is available, unfinished, at lumber dealers, department or variety stores, mail-order houses and other outlets.

Even the inexperienced can build an unusual storage wall by arranging various sizes of one-or-two-shelf bookcase units in an attractive pattern, some suspended from the ceiling, others resting on the floor.

One unit may be placed on end for storing records or tall books. A record changer and speakers appropriately placed in adjoining units make the wall a music center.

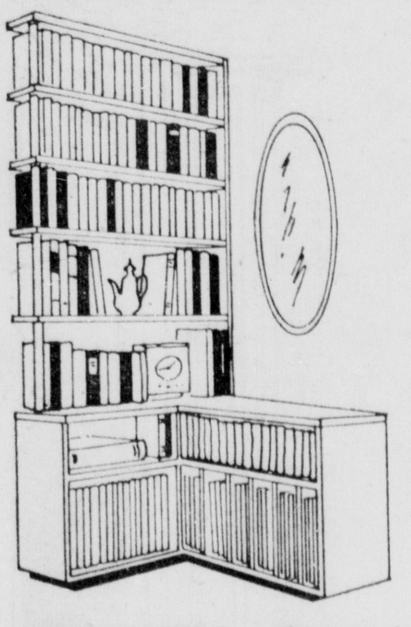
Creating a home office is simple — just add a fold-down desk-door to one of the cases at the proper height and pull up a chair.

Another approach to an inexpensive storage wall is to build a series of tall, backless bookcases of one-by-10 or one-by-12-inch pine or fir boards and arrange them along a bright-colored wall.

For a combination end table-storage unit, two bookcases may be fastened together and topped with wood or plate glass.

An especially useful trick is to convert an otherwise useless corner into a cozy nook for book shelving.

BOOK NOOK



BOOK SHELVES, cabinets of pine and fir boards all serve to brighten what was once an idle corner of a room, and provide the vital, always scarce display and storage space for such possessions as records, books and art objects. The use potential of such corners are too often overlooked in planning a home's decor and much potentially valuable space goes unused and wasted.

A Quiz On Power Tools

Remember when the advent of Spring brought forth the hammer, drill, saw and other assorted hand tools?

Spring was annual fix-it time and most of these tools remained virtually unused the rest of the year. With the variety and efficiency of electric power tools there is no longer any special season for the do-it-yourselfer.

Power tools have turned many an unhandy man and woman into everything from cabint maker to boat builder.

Still, the coming of warm weather does bring out the do-it-your-selfers in greater numbers than at any other time of the year. And, the more do-it-yourselfers, the more mishaps.

The "seasonal" do-it-yourer is more prone to accidents because he is inclined to overlook saftey precautions.

THE POWER tool manufacturers have consistently added and improved safety features on their products. However, the Power Tool Institute points out that these safety devices are no better than the man using the tool. It takes no more effort to operate a power tool safely than carelessly. In fact it probably saves time in the long run.

The rules for safe operations are simple. Spend a few moments taking the quick true or false quiz below and learn how safe a do-it-yourselfer you are.

1. The manual accompanying your power tool merely lists the places to get repairs and parts.
2. A broom, brush, dust cloth and waste-can have no place in the work area.
3. Water has no effect on the new power tools.
4. Wear what is comfortable for you to work in.
5. Tools with three-prong plugs and double insulated tools are equally safe.
6. Because of the connections within the power tools, electric cords should not be pulled.
7. Use a vise or clamp only when doing delicate work.
8. Almost all electric tools can be adapted for any job.
9. Power tools are rugged and need no maintenance.
10. Tools should not be easy to reach on a high shelf.

ANSWERS

1. (False) READ AND HEED — Don't touch a power tool until you've read and understood the instruction manual. Every tool has its own special requirements and characteristics. Find out what the tool does and doesn't do. Learn the proper applications and limitations. Get the best performance with the least danger.

2. (False) CLEAN BEFORE, DURING AND AFTER — Before you begin a project, clean up your work area. During your work, keep it clean and after you're through, clean up. The first rule for safety is always work in a clean up. The first rule for safety is always work in a clean, uncluttered area. This rule applies outside as well as inside. You won't have a more successful project from tripping over a rake or falling into a can of paint. What you will have are cuts, bruises and misery.

3. (False) IF IT'S WET, DON'T DO IT — Electricity and water don't mix. Power tools should never be used in damp or wet areas. That goes also for wet grass and hedges as well as for cellars and kitchens. If your work area isn't completely dry, wait or move to a dry area. You'll remember an electric shock a lot longer than a short wait.

4. (False) FASHION IS FOLLY — Dress for the occasion. Jewelry, scarfs, flowing sleeves and any loose clothing court trouble. Never wear anything that can get caught in moving parts. When working outdoors, it is always a good precaution to wear rubber gloves and rubber footwear. Wear a mask if you're creating a dust storm. And, for any task using power tools, wear safety glasses.

5. (True) PLUGS, PRONGS AND POWER — Unless your power tool is double insultated (and the instruction manual will say so), then it must be grounded. If the tool has a three prong plug it must be used in a three prong electric outlet. An adapter can be used that permits a three prong plug to be used in a standard two prong outlet. But, an adapter has a grounding wire that must be attached to a grounding ciruit. Don't try to outsmart the manufacturer (and yourself) by cutting off, bending back or pulling out the third prong.

6. (True) CODDLE THE CORD — The electric cord on your power tool is not a substitute handle. Do not carry the tool by the cord and don't yank it out of the electric socket. Keep the cord away from excessive heat, sharp objects and corners. You not only shorten the life of the cord, but you won't help your own either.

7. (False) FLYING OBJECTS AND FLYING OPERATIONS — Use clamps, a vise or weights to secure all your work. And, make certain you are secure too. Stand firmly and in balance. Flying lumber and metal cause serious accidents; so do flying operators.

8. (False) USE RIGHT TOOL — Each power tool is designed for a specific set of function. Do not force a tool beyond its capacities. You will shorten its life and possibly your own. Small tools are designed primarily for small jobs; don't force them to do jobs too large or heavy. We don't ask a child to do a man's job.

9. (False) TENDER, LOVING CARE — Baby your power tools and they will return the favor with long, efficient service. Keep them clean and lubricated as recommended. Use the proper accessories and attach them properly. Keep cutting edges sharp and clean. With a little care, your power tool will outlive you.

10. (True) A TOOL'S HOUSE — When you've finished, put your power tools away where they will be safe and in good condition for your next do-it-yourself session. Store them high, dry and out of the reach of children. Tools are not toys. They are also not indestructible. Put them away with care so they can continue to serve you long and well.

The correct answers to this 10-point quiz can spell the difference between pride of accomplishment and injury. Play it safe.

The Versatile Wood Bookcase

One of the most versatile storage units possible, the wood bookcase is the simplest home furniture to build, and is available, unfinished, at lumber dealers, department or variety stores, mail-order houses and other outlets.

Even the inexperienced can build an unusual storage wall by arranging various sizes of one-or-two-shelf bookcase units in an attractive pattern, some suspended from the ceiling, others resting on the floor.

One unit may be placed on end for storing records or tall books. A record changer and speakers appropriately placed in adjoining units make the wall a music center.

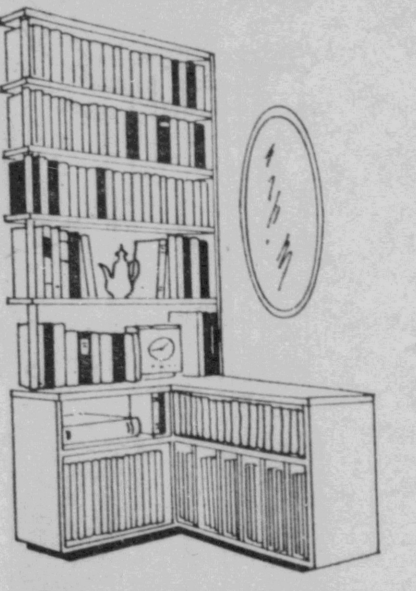
Creating a home office is simple — just add a fold-down desk-door to one of the cases at the proper height and pull up a chair.

Another approach to an inexpensive storage wall is to build a series of tall, backless bookcases of one-by-10 or one-by-12-inch pine or fir boards and arrange them along a bright-colored wall.

For a combination end table-storage unit, two bookcases may be fastened together and topped with wood or plate glass.

An especially useful trick is to convert an otherwise useless corner into a cozy nook for book shelving.

BOOK NOOK



BOOK SHELVES, cabinets of pine and fir boards all serve to brighten what was once an idle corner of a room, and provide the vital, always scarce display and storage space for such possessions as records, books and art objects. The use potential of such corners are too often overlooked in planning a home's decor and much potentially valuable space goes unused and wasted.

A Quiz On Power Tools

Remember when the advent of Spring brought forth the hammer, drill, saw and other assorted hand tools?

Spring was annual fix-it time and most of these tools remained virtually unused the rest of the year. With the variety and efficiency of electric power tools there is no longer any special season for the do-it-yourselfer.

Power tools have turned many an unhandy man and woman into everything from cabint maker to boat builder.

Still, the coming of warm weather does bring out the do-it-your-selfers in greater numbers than at any other time of the year. And, the more do-it-yourselfers, the more mishaps.

The "seasonal" do-it-yourer is more prone to accidents because he is inclined to overlook saftey precautions.

THE POWER tool manufacturers have consistently added and improved safety features on their products. However, the Power Tool Institute points out that these safety devices are no better than the man using the tool. It takes no more effort to operate a power tool safely than carelessly. In fact it probably saves time in the long run.

The rules for safe operations are simple. Spend a few moments taking the quick true or false quiz below and learn how safe a do-it-yourselfer you are.

1. The manual accompanying your power tool merely lists the places to get repairs and parts.
2. A broom, brush, dust cloth and waste-can have no place in the work area.
3. Water has no effect on the new power tools.
4. Wear what is comfortable for you to work in.
5. Tools with three-prong plugs and double insulated tools are equally safe.
6. Because of the connections within the power tools, electric cords should not be pulled.
7. Use a vise or clamp only when doing delicate work.
8. Almost all electric tools can be adapted for any job.
9. Power tools are rugged and need no maintenance.
10. Tools should not be easy to reach on a high shelf.

ANSWERS

1. (False) READ AND HEED — Don't touch a power tool until you've read and understood the instruction manual. Every tool has its own special requirements and characteristics. Find out what the tool does and doesn't do. Learn the proper applications and limitations. Get the best performance with the least danger.

2. (False) CLEAN BEFORE, DURING AND AFTER — Before you begin a project, clean up your work area. During your work, keep it clean and after you're through, clean up. The first rule for safety is always work in a clean up. The first rule for safety is always work in a clean, uncluttered area. This rule applies outside as well as inside. You won't have a more successful project from tripping over a rake or falling into a can of paint. What you will have are cuts, bruises and misery.

3. (False) IF IT'S WET, DON'T DO IT — Electricity and water don't mix. Power tools should never be used in damp or wet areas. That goes also for wet grass and hedges as well as for cellars and kitchens. If your work area isn't completely dry, wait or move to a dry area. You'll remember an electric shock a lot longer than a short wait.

4. (False) FASHION IS FOLLY — Dress for the occasion. Jewelry, scarfs, flowing sleeves and any loose clothing court trouble. Never wear anything that can get caught in moving parts. When working outdoors, it is always a good precaution to wear rubber gloves and rubber footwear. Wear a mask if you're creating a dust storm. And, for any task using power tools, wear safety glasses.

5. (True) PLUGS, PRONGS AND POWER — Unless your power tool is double insultated (and the instruction manual will say so), then it must be grounded. If the tool has a three prong plug it must be used in a three prong electric outlet. An adapter can be used that permits a three prong plug to be used in a standard two prong outlet. But, an adapter has a grounding wire that must be attached to a grounding ciruit. Don't try to outsmart the manufacturer (and yourself) by cutting off, bending back or pulling out the third prong.

6. (True) CODDLE THE CORD — The electric cord on your power tool is not a substitute handle. Do not carry the tool by the cord and don't yank it out of the electric socket. Keep the cord away from excessive heat, sharp objects and corners. You not only shorten the life of the cord, but you won't help your own either.

7. (False) FLYING OBJECTS AND FLYING OPERATIONS — Use clamps, a vise or weights to secure all your work. And, make certain you are secure too. Stand firmly and in balance. Flying lumber and metal cause serious accidents; so do flying operators.

8. (False) USE RIGHT TOOL — Each power tool is designed for a specific set of function. Do not force a tool beyond its capacities. You will shorten its life and possibly your own. Small tools are designed primarily for small jobs; don't force them to do jobs too large or heavy. We don't ask a child to do a man's job.

9. (False) TENDER, LOVING CARE — Baby your power tools and they will return the favor with long, efficient service. Keep them clean and lubricated as recommended. Use the proper accessories and attach them properly. Keep cutting edges sharp and clean. With a little care, your power tool will outlive you.

10. (True) A TOOL'S HOUSE — When you've finished, put your power tools away where they will be safe and in good condition for your next do-it-yourself session. Store them high, dry and out of the reach of children. Tools are not toys. They are also not indestructible. Put them away with care so they can continue to serve you long and well.

The correct answers to this 10-point quiz can spell the difference between pride of accomplishment and injury. Play it safe.

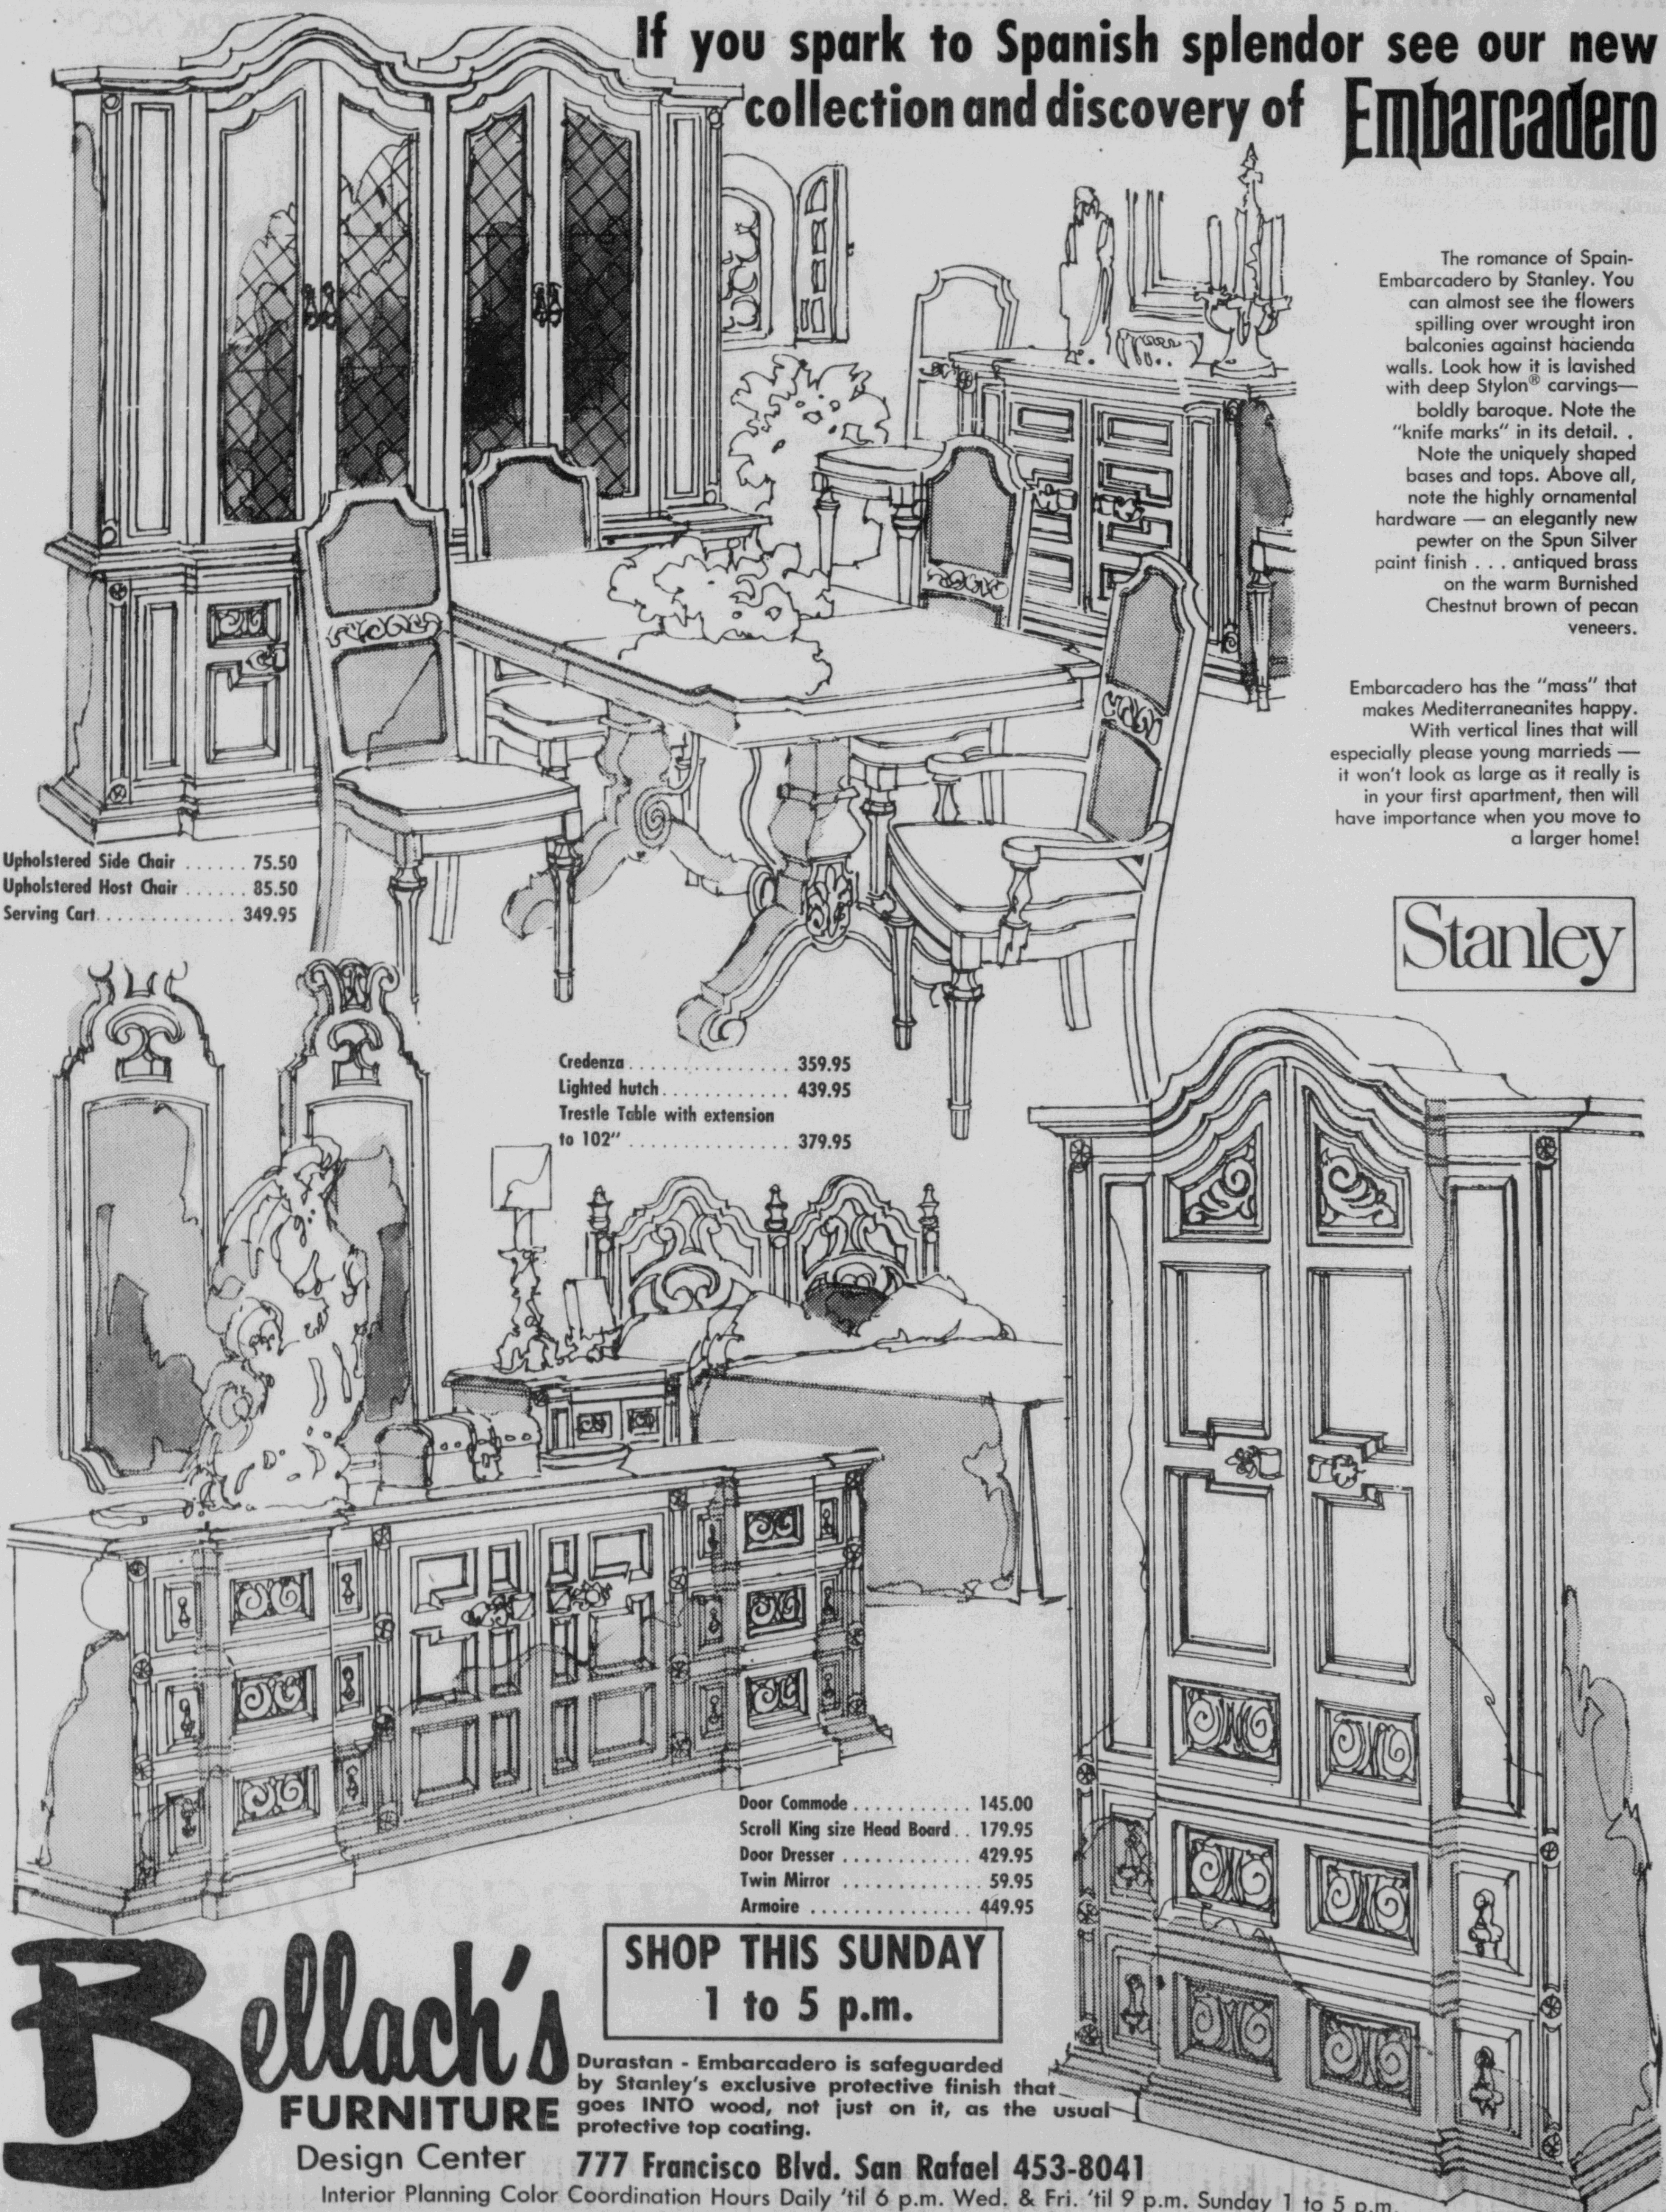
If you spark to Spanish splendor see our new collection and discovery of Embarcadero



The romance of Spain-Embarcadero by Stanley. You can almost see the flowers spilling over wrought iron balconies against hacienda walls. Look how it is lavished with deep Stylon® carvings—boldly baroque. Note the "knife marks" in its detail. . Note the uniquely shaped bases and tops. Above all, note the highly ornamental hardware — an elegantly new pewter on the Spun Silver paint finish . . . antiqued brass on the warm Burnished Chestnut brown of pecan veneers.

Embarcadero has the "mass" that makes Mediterraneanites happy. With vertical lines that will especially please young marrieds — it won't look as large as it really is in your first apartment, then will have importance when you move to a larger home!

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Can anyone remember when the network television seasons consisted of 39 weeks of fresh episodes, followed by only 13 weeks of summer repeats that could be ignored, if desired? That's almost ancient history. The gradual erosion of that ratio finds the repeats beginning now in volume in mid-March. If this keeps up, the television seasons soon may consist of 13 weeks of new stuff and 39 weeks of repeats.

NBC's "GE Monogram Series" will present a one-hour special, "Childhood! The Enchanted Years," on April 22. Specialists in the study of children will participate in this examination of the formative years of infancy.

CBS has embarked on a schedule of programs to be aired from time to time during the next six years that will examine the origins of the American Revolution as a prelude to the United States' bicentennial in 1976. The programs consist of conversations between correspondent Eric Sevareid and impersonators of various historical figures involved in achieving our independence.

Singing actress Michele Lee and her husband, James Farentino, appear in the Hollywood Television Theater production of the Paul Shyre stage adaptation of John Dos Passos' notable novel, "U.S.A." The noncommercial Public Broadcasting Service plans to offer it on May 4.

From Bus Driver, To Television Star

By VERNON SCOTT

Christopher Stone of "The Interns" was driving a tour bus through MGM studios one day and decided actors had it easier than bus drivers, or baseball players which he hoped to be, and decided to join the greasepaint set.

He gave up an opportunity to try out with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1968 and enrolled in an acting school.

Young Stone, who plays Pooch Harris in the CBS series, found little satisfaction in drama school and quit after six weeks.

HE PLAYED guest shots in "The Outcasts," "The FBI," "Mod Squad" and other shows before signing for a top role in "The Interns."

Because young actors aren't paid what they once were, Chris lives in a duplex a block above Hollywood Boulevard. He has furnished his quarters himself with a water bed, stereo set, a pair of couches, hanging lamps and a plentitude of mirrors and paintings.

It has the look of a bachelor pad.

Acting isn't quite as simple as Stone suspected it might be from behind the wheel of a tour bus. He must report to Columbia Studios at 7 a.m. and is rarely through with his acting chores until 7 p.m.

HE FIXES himself a quick cup of coffee in the morning which sustains him until lunch. At noon he eats at a lunch counter near the studio.

Almost invariably he has dinner at the Black Rabbit Inn, a restaurant which resembles houses in the neighborhood. The cooking is homelike, as is the atmosphere..

It is operated by out-of-work actors, writers and musicians.

Once in a great while Chris attempts to fix his own dinners. They consist of steak or hamburger, neither of which are recommended by local gourmets.

ON THE OTHER occasions he has his dates come up to his home to prepare dinner.

An ardent ecologist, Stone frequently spends weekends in Northern California or Baja California south of Tijuana to get away from air pollution and masses of people.

On dates he enjoys picnics in the mountains, movies or an afternoon at one of the marinas watching the sailboats ply through the Pacific.

MORE OFTEN than not, however, Stone is content to remain at home listening to his rich collection of stereo albums which range from Beethoven to Elton John. He owns most of the albums ever recorder by the Beatles.

Stone's silent protest against smog is his refusal to buy an automobile until a pollution-free automobile is manufactured.

Meanwhile he gets around town hitch-hiking, on the bus, or as a passenger with one of his dates.

"I don't mind living in California in the middle of the ecological problem," Stone says — he's a native of Manchester, N.H. "At lesat we see it, recognize it, and are working toward curing it."

Joyce Reads On Wax

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Successful writers often have been asked to record in their own voice selections from their work so that they may leave another legacy to the future.

Dylan Thomas was such a writer. And two young women who had only $5,000 saved between them gambled all of it on the belief that persons with a love of poetry would buy a recording of Thomas reading his own poetry.

Marianne Mantell and Barbara Holdridge won their gamble and Caedmon Records was born.

Now Caedmon has come forth with reproduction of some excessively rare recordings by one of the most controversial and, perhaps, misunderstood writers of all time. They may be heard on "James Joyce Reading Ulysses and Finnegan's Wake" (Caedmon TC 1340).

Joyce had a pleasant voice and his enunciation was clear. Thus it is a pleasure to hear him reading the memorable "Anna Livia Plurabelle" from "Finnegan's Wake" and a passage from the Aeolus episode from "Ulysses."

Cyril Cusack fills out the recording with readings from Joyce.

The late Dylan Thomas may be heard again on two LP's "Dylan Thomas Reading from His Works" (Caedmon TC 1342) and "In Country Heaven — The Evolution of a Poem" (Caedmon TC 1281). Another bonanza is "The Waste Land — and Other Poems" read by T. S. Eliot (Caedmon TC 1326).

Another company also has contributed to the spoken word library with "The Robin Hood of El Dorado" told by Lorne Greene (MGM YDS 303) and "Goody Two Shoes" told by Efrem Zimbalist Jr. (MGM YDS 301).

SELECTED SINGLES "My Sweet Lord" by Billy Preston (Apple 1826), "Home Sweet Oklahoma" by Leon Russell and The Shelter People (Shelter 7302), "Loving You Comes So Easy" by Melba Moore (Mercury 73183), "Waitin' On You" by Dave Mason (Blue Thumb 7122), "Love Is Plentiful" by The Staple Singers (Stax STA 0083).

TAPE DECK: American Airlines Astrostereo Popular Program No. W-70 (Kapp-Uni W-70), an Ampex tape release, is ideal entertainment for parties. It contains three hours of music on one reel and features Louis Armstrong, Roger Williams, Jack Jones, Burt Bacharach, Shani Wallis and Neil Diamond. This is a tape that may be heard on American Airlines flights.

Cassette: "Chacksfield Plays Simon & Garfunkel and Jim Webb" (London M 84151), and Ampex tape release, includes all of the major hits of these composers.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Can anyone remember when the network television seasons consisted of 39 weeks of fresh episodes, followed by only 13 weeks of summer repeats that could be ignored, if desired? That's almost ancient history. The gradual erosion of that ratio finds the repeats beginning now in volume in mid-March. If this keeps up, the television seasons soon may consist of 13 weeks of new stuff and 39 weeks of repeats.

NBC's "GE Monogram Series" will present a one-hour special, "Childhood! The Enchanted Years," on April 22. Specialists in the study of children will participate in this examination of the formative years of infancy.

CBS has embarked on a schedule of programs to be aired from time to time during the next six years that will examine the origins of the American Revolution as a prelude to the United States' bicentennial in 1976. The programs consist of conversations between correspondent Eric Sevareid and impersonators of various historical figures involved in achieving our independence.

Singing actress Michele Lee and her husband, James Farentino, appear in the Hollywood Television Theater production of the Paul Shyre stage adaptation of John Dos Passos' notable novel, "U.S.A." The noncommercial Public Broadcasting Service plans to offer it on May 4.

From Bus Driver, To Television Star

By VERNON SCOTT

Christopher Stone of "The Interns" was driving a tour bus through MGM studios one day and decided actors had it easier than bus drivers, or baseball players which he hoped to be, and decided to join the greasepaint set.

He gave up an opportunity to try out with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1968 and enrolled in an acting school.

Young Stone, who plays Pooch Harris in the CBS series, found little satisfaction in drama school and quit after six weeks.

HE PLAYED guest shots in "The Outcasts," "The FBI," "Mod Squad" and other shows before signing for a top role in "The Interns."

Because young actors aren't paid what they once were, Chris lives in a duplex a block above Hollywood Boulevard. He has furnished his quarters himself with a water bed, stereo set, a pair of couches, hanging lamps and a plentitude of mirrors and paintings.

It has the look of a bachelor pad.

Acting isn't quite as simple as Stone suspected it might be from behind the wheel of a tour bus. He must report to Columbia Studios at 7 a.m. and is rarely through with his acting chores until 7 p.m.

HE FIXES himself a quick cup of coffee in the morning which sustains him until lunch. At noon he eats at a lunch counter near the studio.

Almost invariably he has dinner at the Black Rabbit Inn, a restaurant which resembles houses in the neighborhood. The cooking is homelike, as is the atmosphere..

It is operated by out-of-work actors, writers and musicians.

Once in a great while Chris attempts to fix his own dinners. They consist of steak or hamburger, neither of which are recommended by local gourmets.

ON THE OTHER occasions he has his dates come up to his home to prepare dinner.

An ardent ecologist, Stone frequently spends weekends in Northern California or Baja California south of Tijuana to get away from air pollution and masses of people.

On dates he enjoys picnics in the mountains, movies or an afternoon at one of the marinas watching the sailboats ply through the Pacific.

MORE OFTEN than not, however, Stone is content to remain at home listening to his rich collection of stereo albums which range from Beethoven to Elton John. He owns most of the albums ever recorder by the Beatles.

Stone's silent protest against smog is his refusal to buy an automobile until a pollution-free automobile is manufactured.

Meanwhile he gets around town hitch-hiking, on the bus, or as a passenger with one of his dates.

"I don't mind living in California in the middle of the ecological problem," Stone says — he's a native of Manchester, N.H. "At lesat we see it, recognize it, and are working toward curing it."

GETTING INVOLVED IN NATURE

Lisa Bissattini of San Rafael works on a God's Eye, a Mexican religious decoration made from yarn and twigs. Lisa's project was one of many activities offered to approximately 75 Marin youngsters today during a camping program at Bothin Youth Center above Fairfax. Camp Marinerama '71, sponsored by the Girl Scouts and the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, was designed to stimulate the interest of children in nature by means at hikes, campcrafts, nature study, contact with animals and ecology games. The free weekend camp began yesterday and concludes tomorrow.

Nixon Will Make Final Decision In Calley Case

CLEMENCY CALL

Wallace, Maddox Speak To Crowd

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—Two deep South political leaders, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and Lt. Gov. Lester G. Maddox of Georgia, urged in a "Rally for Calley" Friday night that the people put pressure on President Nixon to grant clemency to Lt. William L. Calley Jr.

Calley, 27, stands convicted by court-martial of deliberately murdering Vietnamese women, children and old men who were unarmed, unresisting and were pleading for mercy and screaming as they died.

He was put in the stockade here after his conviction Monday but was ordered out and back to his apartment by Nixon Thursday night in an under-guard, "confined to quarters" status. As such he could not attend the rally but could hear it on radio.

About 3,000 persons attended the affair, arranged by the American Legion post at Columbus, the city next to this base where Calley was tried. Six big wooden collection boxes were placed on the floor of municipal auditorium for donations to Calley.

"You have a cause, but you mustn't forget about it," Wallace told the audience, which gave him several standing ovations. "I believe that in the final analysis President Nixon is going to do the right thing.

"We do call on the American Congress and on the President because everyone here tonight had some loved ones in Vietnam or Korea."

Before the rally, Wallace paid a brief visit to Calley in the latter's bachelor apartment on the post, where a military policeman guards him day and night.

"Thank God for Lieutenant Calley and thank God for people like you," Maddox told the rally. "Don't write your governor, congressman, television, radio or newspapers.

"Just write President Nixon and tell him what you want and the President will respond just like he did last night, and he'll go all the way. Freedom is going to triumph in this country, or military men are going to be backed by the people and backed by the President and backed by our country, so help us God."

Wallace, who was a third party candidate for president in the last election, referred to the fact that an appeal for Calley through the military and then the federal courts could take years, perhaps five.

"There is no sense in this world to take so long for an appeal," Wallace said. "And I say the politicians in Washington better not prolong this past the next presidential election.

"The action of President Nixon (in releasing Calley) was in response to the attitude to people like you . . . because of the mass of people like you. In my judgment the silent majority is not going to be silent any longer." "When you are in combat you are thinking about yourself," Wallace said, "and the reason Lieutenant Calley was in Vietnam was because the government sent him there. He might have made an error, but when you are in combat you want to stay alive."

The witnesses at the Calley trial said there was no combat in the My Lai hamlet during the American infantry sweep of March 16, 1968.

Wallace said the Calley case was having the effect of bringing "the good people of this country together and meetings such as tonight are going to eventually straighten this country out."

The auditorium was evacuated for 25 minutes prior to the start of the program because, police said, the management got a telephone call that a bomb would go off at 8 p.m. The few hundred who were in the building at that time stood outside until 8:03 when police decided nothing was going to happen.

President Cites 'Public Interest'

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon announced Saturday that he would personally review the case of Lt. William Calley Jr. and make the final decision on the sentence in the case.

Presidential aides said Nixon had decided to exercise his discretionary powers as commander-in-chief because of the "widespread public interest" in the case of the 23-year-old officer who has been sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians in My Lai.

John D. Erli Erhlichmann, an assistant to the president, said Nixon felt it important to add "a nonlegal, nontechnical review" to the normal military review process.

He said Nixon made the decision Friday evening after consultation with several cabinet officers including defense secretary Melvin R. Laird, attorney General John Mitchell, Health, education and Welfare secretary Elliot L. Richardson and Robert Finch Counselor to the president.

Nixon Thursday ordered Calley removed from the stockade at Ft. Benning, Ga., and confined instead to his quarters while the case is reviewed. The effect of the president's action today, would be to keep Calley under house arrest until the president himself reviews the case.

"The significance of this announcement today is that before the sentence is put into operation at any stage of the review procedure the president will personally review the case and make the final decision," Ehrlichmann told newsmen at an unusual morning briefing.

"This he has the right to do under the constitution as commander-in-chief and under the code of military justice . . . as the superior conventing officer," he said.

Nixon took the action following an unprecedented outpouring of public sentiment, the only convicted so far in the My Lai massacre in which more than 100 Vietnamese civilians reportedly were killed three years ago. Ehrlichmann said there was ample precedent for the president's action. He pointed out that Abraham Lincoln intervened in several military cases during the Civil War.

"The president felt that with this case having captured the interest of the American people to the degree it has it was important for him to make clear at this time that the review procedure would contain more than the technical, legal review required," Ehrlichmann said.

When asked to amplify what other elements would go into the president's review of the case, he replied, "That's sort of in the heart of the man."

There was no immediate indication when the matter would come to the president's attention. It is estimated that 30 to 60 days will be required to prepare the records of the case for the next step in the military review process.

This step would be for the convening authority, Lt. Gen. Alfred Connor, the commander of the Third Army, to have his judge advocate examine the case and make findings on both the guilt or innocence and the sentence.

From here the case would go to the court of military review and then to the court of military appeals.

In the ordinary course of events, the case would then come to the secretary of the army for final disposition but in Calley's case, it will go to the president.

At each step in the review process, the sentence could be reduced but not increased.

The President planned to spend the rest of the weekend working on his updated report on Vietnam and further U.S. troop cuts.

Officers Killed By Ambushers

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI)—Two policemen were ambushed and killed by shotgun blasts last night when they responded to a phony report of a burglary.

"It was a set up," said Lt. Donald J. Mawn. "The officers arrived and pulled in the driveway and were shot down from ambush. The lady (who lived at the home) said she didn't call police."

Police said Paul C. Teel, 25, was hit as he stepped out of the patrol car. Leonard A. Christiansen, 30, fired three shots and managed to summon help on the car radio, but was dead by the time other officers arrived.

A shotgun believed stolen from a California Highway Patrol car burned during a disturbance here two years ago was found nearby. Three shotgun casings were also discovered.

Police issued an all points bulletin for four young men who witnesses said they saw running from the scene. They were believed to have fled in 1962 or 1963 yellow Chevrolet and were wearing "hunting" clothing—wool shirts, caps and cordoroy jackets.

All the suspects in the 9:30 p.m. shooting were believed to be Negroes.

Police said Teel and Christiansen had pulled into a driveway which was bordered by heavy foliage on each side.

BEHR JOINS, TOO

Demos Assail Veto On Span Crossing

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Democrats today assailed Gov. Ronald Reagan's veto of the controversial San Francisco Bay southern crossing bill as a victory for the "highway lobby at the expense of the people."

On the Republican side, the criticism was shared by Sen. Peter H. Behr of San Rafael, who said through an aide he would vote to override the governor's veto if such a move is attempted.

Marin's assemblyman, William T. Bagley of San Rafael, also a Republican, said he was inclined to vote to override but wanted to hear arguments first.

Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, D-Van Nuys, said there was "no need" to submit construction of the proposed bridge to a Bay Area plebiscite as proposed by Reagan.

"If the governor is sincere in his repeated demand for economy in government, he won't ask taxpayers to spend more for the privilege of restating their opposition to the bridge via the ballot box," Moretti said.

"Only five months ago the people in that area confirmed their opposition to the span by electing state representatives pledged to oppose its construction," he said.

Said Behr, "It is highly unfortunate that Governor Reagan misread the will of the overwhelming majority of the people in the Bay Area."

Reagan vetoed the bill by Democratic Assemblyman Robert Crown of Alameda yesterday and proposed that Bay Area voters decide whether the estimated $300 million to $600 million structure should be built.

Crown said he will ask the legislature to override the veto when the lawmakers return to Sacramento after their annual Easter vacation next week. It

Army Defends Actions In 'White Paper' To Units

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Army sent to its units throughout the world today a "White Paper" defending its prosecution of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. It said it had a "moral and legal obligation" to prosecute the officer for the murder of civilians at My Lai.

The document said the Army prosecuted Calley because there was an "overwhelming body of evidence" his actions at My Lai violated the Geneva conventions.

"They (the conventions) cannot be abandoned and adopted again at will by the United States armed forces, depending upon the character of the conflict or the non-observance of the conventions by the enemy," the Army said.

Calley, 27, a former infantry platoon leader, received a life sentence for the murder of 22 Vietnamese civilians at the hamlet March 16, 1968.

The paper described the action taken against Calley as "painful and difficult." But it said the Army would have "failed to meet its obligation to the laws of our nation had it not acted." "Congress ratified the Geneva accords and as formal treaties, they constitute part of the "supreme law of the land" under the constitution, the Army said.

"Acknowledging this responsibility to the nation and the Congress the Department of the Army has had a moral and legal obligation to adopt a continuing policy of investigating fully all allegations of violations of the laws of war involving American personnel," the paper.

High-Level Hamilton Rounds Set

A group of five Marin County officials will travel to Washington, D.C., later this month for a series of meetings with Air Force and Federal Aviation Agency representalives on possible joint civilian-military use of Hamilton Air Force Base.

The meetings — first high-level sessions between Marin and Washington officials since the way was opened officially late in 1969 for joint use at Air Force bases — are designed solely as exploratory, according to a spokesman for the county delegation.

Ray W. Foreaker, chairman of the county aviation commission, said yesterday the county group seeks to find out whether the federal government wishes to proceed on a joint-use plan for Hamilton and, if so, what kind of an operation it might envision.

Besides Foreaker, the county delegation will be made up of Louis H. Barr, chairman of the board of supervisors; supervisors John F. McInnis and Arnold M. Baptiste, and Richard Nave, another aviation commissioner.

The meetings, tentatively scheduled for two of three days the week of April 18, are being arranged by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District.

The group will take to Washington a scheme drawn up for the aviation commission that Foreaker views as a basis for discussion.

The proposal calls for construction of a 25,000-square-foot

Heavy Fighting In Central Highlands

SAIGON (UPI) — Communiques reported heavy fighting today around Fire Base 6 on South Vietnam's Central Highlands where North Vietnamese suicide squads were trying to oust U.S. and South Vietnamese defenders.

Two Americans were reported slain in the battle and U.S. headquarters in Saigon said four other U.S. soldiers were killed and six wounded Thursday in an accidental artillery attack on an outpost near the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) border.

A spokdeman said one artillery shell fired by "friendly" forces struck a night bivouac manned by troops of the U.S. 101st Airborne Division's 3rd Brigade nine miles west of Cam Lo and about four miles south of the DMZ. The incident was reported "under investigation."

Elswehwere in South Vietnam, Communist forces renewed the attack on Duc Duc, the district capital already in ruins from a terror raid a week ago.

The battle at Fire Base 6 brought the war back to the strategic Central Highlands for the first time in several weeks.

UPI Correspondent Robert E. Sullivan reported that the bodies of two Americans were found and removed from the hilltop position this morning. Sullivan said the bodies were not those of helicopter crewmen. The U.S. Command had reported Thursday that one crewman was killed and one wounded when two U.S. Army UH1 Hey copters were shot down while trying to rescue retreating South Vietnamese soldiers when the base was overrun.

Military sources said there were American advisers and a chemical "people sniffer" team at the base, 280 miles northeast of Saigon, when it was attacked, Wednesday, but had declined to say what had happened to them. Hanoi Radio reported "some" of the Americans had been captured. Sullivan's report was the first word on their fate since the Hanoi broadcast.

A military spokesman said 1,180 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed in three days of fighting in and near the base, eight miles southwest of Dak To and six miles east of the Cambodian border. South Vietnamese casualties were listed at 61 killed and 82 wounded, including 41 killed and 57 wounded in Friday's fighting.

In Cambodia, the high command reported U.S. helicopter gunships mistakenly strafed Cambodian troops last Tuesday, killing one Cambodian soldier and wounding eight. Buddhist monks said the same attack killed eight monks and 20 other civilians. The incident occurred

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Sad Decision

BERLIN (UPI)—East Germany's refusal to open the Berlin wall over Easter to allow family reunions for the first time in five years saddened many West Berliners today.

"I thought I would be able to see my sister for the first time since 1966," Frau Ruth Finger said.

Frau Finger was one of 500,000 West Berliners with close relations in East Berlin. They have not been allowed to see them since the Whitsun Holiday in the spring of 1966.

This year their hopes were high because the East Germans themselves proposed negotiations on opening the wall.

But in three meetings between West Berlin and East German officials, the last held in East Berlin March 27, the East Germans refused to confine the talks to the issuance of Easter wall passes to West Berliners.

Water Limits

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Mexico City, faced with a water shortage, will limit supplies to its downtown office district to 10 hours a day, Mayor Alfonso Martinez Dominguez said today.

Martinez said the federal government is drilling 60 wells at a cost of $43 million to meet the capital city's needs.

Blast Nixon

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet newspapers today denounced as "disgraceful" the decision by President Nixon to delay the imprisonment of Lt. William L. Calley.

Both Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, and the Young Communist League newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda, commented on the Calley case.

Pravda said U.S. military leaders are afraid that the Calley case will turn the youth against the army, and for that reason the Pentagon has organized "a campaign in support of this murderer, who has become a symbol of America's disgrace.

Reject Contract

LONDON (UPI)—Workers at one of British Ford's key plants dealt a setback today to hopes for speedy settlement of Ford's nine-week-old strike, Britain's costliest on record.

A vote at the firm's factory at Halewood, near Liverpool, rejected a management pay increase offer as Ford officials were predicting the company's 50,000 strikers would be back on the job Monday.

At a mass meeting of nearly 5,000 workers, strike organizers urged Ford Halewood employees to "continue the struggle, stay out on strike and call on the rest of the Ford workers in the country to support us."

Despite the reverse at Halewood, Ford officials said they were still confident this weekend would be the last in the long, costly walkout.

Satchmo Improves

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jazz trumpeter Louis "Satchmo" Armstrong, hospitalized with heart trouble, was reported significantly improved today after suffering a setback earlier this week.

A spokesman for Beth Israel Hospital said the 70-year-old Armstrong "made a significant improvement overnight but he still remains critically ill."

Armstrong entered the hospital's intensive care unit in critical condition March 15 but improved to the point where he sang to the hospital staff.

Pakistan Charges Harassment

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Pakistan accused India again today of interference in its internal affairs, this time charging that four Indian warships harassed a Pakistani merchant ship at sea.

Radio Pakistan, the voice of the central government, said in its morning news broadcast the government lodged a strong protest with the Indian High Commission in Islamabad, West Pakistan.

It was the latest in a series of Pakistani accusations against India of meddling in the civil war between East Pakistan and the central government, based 1,000 miles away across Indian territory in West Pakistan.

The broadcast said the Indian vessels began to harass the Pakistani freighter Ocean Endurance 70 miles west of the Indian naval base at Dawarka.

Long Trial Seen In Henderson Case

FT. MEADE, Md. (UPI)—A bombardment of motions and a flood of witnesses promises to make the court-martial of Col. Oran K. Henderson nearly as long as the just-concluded four-month trial of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. (See Calley story, page 1.)

Henry B. Rothblatt, New York attorney and chief civilian counsel for Henderson, said before the 90-minute opening session Friday that he would "bombard the court with motions" in an attempt to get dismissal of the charges.

His first five motions caused the judge, Col. Peter S. Wondolowski, to adjourn the first day of preliminary hearings after only 90 minutes and set the next session for Tuesday.

Henderson, 50, highest-ranking officer still charged with My Lai crimes, is accused of covering up the My Lai massacre and lying to a special Pentagon inquiry into it. He was commander of the American Division's 11th Brigade which made the sweep into My Lai.

Lt. Col. Frank J. Dorsey, chief military counsel for the defense, said after the Friday session: "Almost everybody who was in the American Division, is a prospective witness" in the court-martial.

He also told the judge during the proceedings that because of defense motions, the preliminary hearings probably would last for 45 to 60 days, overlapping the court-martial of Capt. Ernest Medina, which begins May 24 at Ft. McPherson, Ga.

The government, represented by Maj. Carroll J. Tichenor, already has submitted a list of 78 prospective witnesses, including Capt. Hugh C. Thompson, a helicopter pilot who made the first report of civilians killed at My Lai.

First Lindsay For President Office Opened By Young Demos

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The first John Lindsay for President headquarters was opened yesterday with appropriate hoopla — but nary a word from the New York mayor.

A Stanford University coed cut the blue ribbon on the financial district office and three dozen young Democrats celebrated with punch and chocolate-chip cookies.

Then the Lindsay supporters placed a pre-planned telephone call to the Republican mayor. But an aide told them Lindsay was visiting a day care center and couldn't take the call.

Neil Macey, 23, cochairman of the youthful organization trying to get Lindsay to seek the Democratic presidential nomination, was undaunted.

He said a mayor's aide told him on the phone "they knew all about our organization. I received a very positive response."

Macey, a Stanford graduate student, and Carl Nes, his co-chairman and long-time friend, rented the headquarters over a barber shop for $150 a month. They hope to open a second in San Jose, Calif., later this month and organize a "March on the Nation" in June. The "march" would be a cross-country bus trip to New York where they hope Lindsay will receive them.

"You've got to start small when you have a candidate who is not even a member of the party," said Nes, 23.

In New York, another group of young people held a news conference Friday to urge Lindsay's candidacy. They wore buttons saying the mayor should "switch and fight."

The enthusiasm of the young Lindsay supporters wasn't shared by most top California Democrats. They'd prefer the mayor didn't switch parties and run in the state's crucial presidential primary.

"There's too much support, deep and ingrained, for candidates we already have," said State Senate majority leader George Moscone. "It's too much for John Lindsay to overcome.

"The real problem Democrats have is choosing which of our heavies should get the nomination."

However, former congressman George Brown Jr., who has a big following among California's young, peace-oriented Democrats, has agreed to speak April 30 at a Lindsay rally in San Jose.

Brown said he was encouraging Lindsay to run, but added: "That doesn't mean I'll wind up supporting him." He said the mayor's candidacy would "contribute to the dialogue and help people find out what the issues really are."

First Shells Across Canal Since Mideast Truce Ended

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Egyptian and Israeli forces exchanged gunfire across the Suez Canal cease-fire line for the first time since the end of the truce arrangement on the waterway, the semiofficial Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said today.

The newspaper also said President Anwar Sadat believes this month will determine whether there will be renewed fighting in the Middle East.

Diplomatic sources said meanwhile that Israel has decided at the urging of the United Nations to come up with a proposal of its own for reopening the Suez Canal as a first step toward Middle East peace.

In Amman, Arab guerrillas accused the Jordanian army of shelling a refugee camp north of the capital and King Hussein's government underwent a barrage of criticism from various regimes throughout the Arab world. A Palestinian spokesman said Army troops attacked the town of Jerash, north of Amman with machineguns, mortars and other weapons.

The newspaper Al Ahram said the cross-canal gunfire exchange occurred "recently" in the Roso El-Ish area when an Israeli patrol of two frogmen tried to cross the canal into the Egyptian-held west bank.

The report said Egyptian forces discovered the Israelis and let them approach the Egyptian side of the canal in an attempt to capture them but the frogmen discovered they were watched and dived back into the canal in an attempt to return to the other side under cover of Israeli fire. Egyptian forces returned fire.

Although Al Ahram did not give a date, political sources said it was referring to a Monday incident reported by the U.N. truce supervision organization. It was the first firing since the truce ended March 7.

The newspaper said Sadat "feels that the present month will be, to use his words, the dividing month between a political solution and war because during this month all positions will emerge clearly, leaving no room for doubt."

The item in Al Ahram came shortly after a letter from President Nixon to Sadat which according to diplomatic sources reassured Egypt the U.S. will persevere in efforts to break the Middle East deadlock.

Novato Pair Fined For Pot Possession

Mark Robert Topper and Eugenia Henriette Polos, both of Novato, have been fined $200 each in Marin Municipal Court after pleading guilty to a misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana.

Judge David Menary Jr. also placed the pair on probation for one year. The charge was reduced from a felony count. A charge of cultivating the weed was dismissed.

Joyce Reads On Wax

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Successful writers often have been asked to record in their own voice selections from their work so that they may leave another legacy to the future.

Dylan Thomas was such a writer. And two young women who had only $5,000 saved between them gambled all of it on the belief that persons with a love of poetry would buy a recording of Thomas reading his own poetry.

Marianne Mantell and Barbara Holdridge won their gamble and Caedmon Records was born.

Now Caedmon has come forth with reproduction of some excessively rare recordings by one of the most controversial and, perhaps, misunderstood writers of all time. They may be heard on "James Joyce Reading Ulysses and Finnegan's Wake" (Caedmon TC 1340).

Joyce had a pleasant voice and his enunciation was clear. Thus it is a pleasure to hear him reading the memorable "Anna Livia Plurabelle" from "Finnegan's Wake" and a passage from the Aeolus episode from "Ulysses."

Cyril Cusack fills out the recording with readings from Joyce.

The late Dylan Thomas may be heard again on two LP's "Dylan Thomas Reading from His Works" (Caedmon TC 1342) and "In Country Heaven — The Evolution of a Poem" (Caedmon TC 1281). Another bonanza is "The Waste Land — and Other Poems" read by T. S. Eliot (Caedmon TC 1326).

Another company also has contributed to the spoken word library with "The Robin Hood of El Dorado" told by Lorne Greene (MGM YDS 303) and "Goody Two Shoes" told by Efrem Zimbalist Jr. (MGM YDS 301).

SELECTED SINGLES "My Sweet Lord" by Billy Preston (Apple 1826), "Home Sweet Oklahoma" by Leon Russell and The Shelter People (Shelter 7302), "Loving You Comes So Easy" by Melba Moore (Mercury 73183), "Waitin' On You" by Dave Mason (Blue Thumb 7122), "Love Is Plentiful" by The Staple Singers (Stax STA 0083).

TAPE DECK: American Airlines Astrostereo Popular Program No. W-70 (Kapp-Uni W-70), an Ampex tape release, is ideal entertainment for parties. It contains three hours of music on one reel and features Louis Armstrong, Roger Williams, Jack Jones, Burt Bacharach, Shani Wallis and Neil Diamond. This is a tape that may be heard on American Airlines flights.

Cassette: "Chacksfield Plays Simon & Garfunkel and Jim Webb" (London M 84151), and Ampex tape release, includes all of the major hits of these composers.

WAITING FOR THE AMBULANCE

Jack W. Martin of 168 Montego Key, Bel Marin Keys, waits to be taken to Marin General Hospital after his small foreign car was involved in a three-car crash at 10:15 a.m. yesterday at Third and Heatherton streets in San Rafael. Police said a car driven by Carmela M. Garcia, 65, of 16 South Knoll Road, Mill Valley, collided with Martin's vehicle after first striking a car operated by Gerald B. Renner, 41, of 586 Kernberry Drive, San Rafael. Martin was treated for forehead and shoulder cuts.

Harlan Center Will Be Opened For Limited Use This Month

Harlan Center, built on the site which once housed the College of Marin's historic Harlan Hall, will be opened for limited use April 12 — months before completion.

The decision was made Thursday by the Marin Junior College District board in order to aleviate over-crowding at other college buildings, Earlene Jones, college publicist, said yesterday.

The new building, under construction since November 1969 at a cost of about $1 million, is finished inside but much exterior work remains, she said.

Exterior walkways, landscaping and outside construction work remain unfinished, Mrs. Jones said, adding that the district will not formally accept the building until construction ends.

The old Harlan Hall, with its mission architecture, was demolished in 1969 after standing as the unofficial symbol of the college for 40 years.

When the college opened in 1926, classes were held in the converted Butler mansion in Kentfield with an enrollment of 125 students.

Three years later, trustees opened bids for what was referred to as "the new classroom building" and the job went to the firm of Younger and Horstmeyer at a cost of $53,594.

It, like the new Harlan Center, was named after the late George H. Harlan Sr., first college board president and a leader in the creation of the junior college district.

The Marin Junior College District board also:

PRESIDENT -- Entered closed session to discuss with its selection committee the appointment of a president for the north campus. No decision was made and the board will consider the matter again Monday following a scheduled workshop.

LIBRARY GRANT — Authorized applying for a $14,499 library grant for materials.

ROCK CONCERT — Continued to its next meeting an evaluation of the rock concert held at the College of Marin gymnasium in February.

DROPOUT — Received a report on students who leave the college indicating the dropout rate decreased from 7 per cent in fall 1969 to 6 per cent in fall 1970. The report listed student financial difficulties as the major reason for student withdrawals.

GRADUATION — Set June 18 at 8 p.m. for graduation ceremonies. Board President Elizabeth M. Deedy will be the commencement speaker.

WORKSHOP — Set April 29 at 7:30 p.m. for a special meeting to study educational specifications and master-planning of the north campus. Meeting place will be announced.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to Monday at 8 p.m. at the College of Marin testing office for a special session to study fiscal 1971-72 budget proposals and to continue its closed session to select a president for the north campus.

Traffic Changes Set In Petaluma

The Petaluma Police Department will begin enforcing two new traffic signs next week.

The right lane of westbound traffic on East Washington Street at North McDowell Boulevard has been changed to a right turn only lane. Arrows signaling the right turn have been painted on the roadway.

A stop sign has been located at South McDowell Boulevard at Casa Grande Road. Southbound traffic must stop before entering Casa Grande Road.

Behr Not For Cutting PUC Budget

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael, yesterday joined the five Democratic members of a Senate committee in urging no cut in the Public Utilities Commission budget.

The six members of the public utilities and corporations committee, in a letter to the Senate Finance Committee, urged restoration of $300,000 cut from the PUC's budget by the Reagan administration.

Behr is cochairman of the public utilities and corporations committee. Its seventh member, Republican George Deukmejian of Long Beach, did not sign the letter.

The six senators wrote that "at a time when over $400 million in rate increase applications are before the commission, proper analysis demands proper funding."

The Reagan administration's budget for the PUC next year is $12.4 million, over $300,000 under the current fiscal year.

Signing the letter were Behr and Alfred E. Alquist of San Jose, Ralph Dills of San Pedro, Arlen Gregorio of San Mateo, Lawrence Walsh of Huntington Park and Senate President pro tem James R. Mills of San Diego.

Board Of Education To Study Teacher Pay Plan

The Marin County Board of Education, meeting Monday at 8 p.m. at the district office in Corte Madera, will receive a teachers salary proposal calling for a 5 per cent cost-of-living increase.

The teachers also are asking that two more steps be added to their eight step salary schedule thus establishing higher experience level pay.

Currently the eight-step schedule ranges from $8,185 to $13,816 per year.

The teachers' 10-step proposal, including the 5 per cent increase, would establish a range from $8,594 to $15,280 per year and would offer a $500 per year bonus for a masters degree. Total cost of their salary package would total about $58,000, teachers say.

The board also will consider preliminary plans for a $300,000 school for deaf children. To be located adjacent to Adaline E. Kent School in Kentfield, the school has been wrapped in red tape since 1966. If plans proceed on schedule, it should open in spring 1972 to about 30 students.

Other agenda items call for board consideration of an environmental education study program for Marin and further review of the county schools office special education budget. That budget totals about $4 million of which $1.3 million is paid with county funds.

Skylab To Watch Earth's Life, Says Shepard

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The manned satellite Skylab, to be launched in 1973, will be able to measure the growth and movement of life on the earth, astronaut Alan B. Shepard says.

It will be equipped with infra red cameras which will monitor worldwide crop and timber growth and the migrations of birds and animals, the astronaut declared Wednesday in a talk before the Commonwealth Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Shepard was crew commander during the Apollo 14 mission.

One Couple Reduces Request On Damages

One of two feuding Tiburon couples suing each other in Marin Superior Court yesterday reduced its request for damages from $75,000 to $5,100.

James Murray, attorney for James L. and Claire Green of 2300 Vista Del Mar Lane, made the change in Judge Thomas F. Keating's court without explanation.

The Greens are suing their neighbors, Nathaniel and Violet Marans, who live above at 2312 Spanish Trail Lane. The Marans, meanwhile, are asking Keating to determine a common boundary between the properties and to award them $5,660 in damages.

The suits are for damages allegedly suffered in a feud between the couples which dates back to 1967, according to the Marans, and to 1965, according to the Greens.

Green took the stand in the case yesterday, describing himself as a "fairly intelligent and very reasonable person."

"Never on any occasion have I attempted to harass them," he said.

The Marans allege they have been the victims of ripped up fence posts, vines and a tree and have had 400-watt floodlights aimed at their home and dog manure thrown on their car.

Green has said that Marans threatened him many times and once pulled out a gun.

William O. Weissich, attorney for the Marans, caused a stir in court when he pulled out a gun to ask Green if it was the one with which he had been threatened by Marans.

"You're not going to hand it around to these combatants, are you?" Keating asked.

Green said it was not the controversial weapon.

Testimony will continue Monday.

takes a two-thirds vote of each house to overturn a veto.

The bill would have prohibited the state Toll Bridge Authority from building a Southern Crossing over the bay without the express permission of the legislature.

Moretti charged the veto "represents another victory for the state's highway lobby at the expense of the people."

Reagan said the "divergence of opinion is so great and the matter so important" that voters in the counties directly affected should decide its ultimate fate.

He also issued an executive order freezing further design work on the project for six months. He said this would give the legislature time to approve a special election.

The bill overwhelmingly passed both houses on a bipartisan vote. Sen. Clark Bradley, R-San Jose, was the only Bay Area lawmaker to vote against it.

Senate Democratic leader George Moscone of San Francisco, a potential contender for governor in 1974, said he was "rather astonished" that Reagan rejected the bill and said the veto stood a "very good chance" of being overridden.

"He should have been honest about it," Moscone said of Reagan's veto, "and just said he is committed to those people who are committed to building, building, building regardless of the social consequences."

Said Assemblyman William T. Bagley, "I'm inclined to vote for an override of the veto but as always I would certainly give the other side a chance to state their case."
their case."

Bradley declared himself "very pleased" with Reagan's action and disclosed he had encouraged Reagan to veto the bill.

"When it is submitted to the voters and the facts are properly brought out, the people will approve it by a substantial majority," he forecast, adding he believed the "ecological argument" against the bridge wasn't based on facts.

Conservationists had asserted the bridge would have the effect of contributing to air pollution by encouraging the use of smog-producing automobiles.

Instead, he said the span would "reduce air pollution because it will provide for better circulation of traffic. The less that a truck or car has to stand and idle the less air pollution is produced. A car or truck is at its lowest efficiency when it is idling."

Several years ago the legislature appropriated about $10 million for planning and design of the span. The state Department of Public Works reported about half that sum has been spent.

First bids for initial construction had been scheduled for issuance late this year. Construction was expected to take about four years to complete.

Auto Stolen From Used Vehicle Lot

Dexter Toyota told San Rafael police yesterday that a station wagon was stolen from its used car lot at 445 Francisco Boulevard during the past four months.

The auto was described as a 1964 blue Pontiac, license MXY-381.

passenger terminal east of the present runway, a new taxiway and an access road to the terminal area from Bel Marin Keys Boulevard. An estimate of the cost is $3.1 million, including $550,000 for the terminal.

The proposal, which Foreaker stressed has not been adopted by either the aviation commission or the board of supervisors, was prepared last summer as an outgrowth of a study by civil engineer Winfield O. Salter of San Rafael on the prospects of joint use.

Foreaker said that if the response from the federal government is favorable as to joint use, "We would begin to do some additional study work — what to do, what would it cost, how would it be paid for. We want to know whether we are spinning our wheels."

Critical of the county delegation's trip is Benjamin R. Ostlind, a former aviation commissioner and chairman of the airport development committee of the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce.

Ostlind, who advocates a more elaborate joint-use plan that would involve county purchase of private property for an industrial park, said yesterday the new scheme would provide the county with no direct revenue from passenger service.

Landing fees, he said, would go to the Air Force. "The passenger service is a bonus," Ostlind said, "but the county has lost site of the goal — you make money on the lease and sale of land nearby that is made valuable because of the airport."

The cost of Ostlind's plan, which also would include a second runway, has been estimated to run at least $11 million. Said Foreaker while holding open the door to major development, "It would be foolish to get into this venture" until exploring the federal government's stance on joint use.

Ostlind retorted that channels have been opened within the Department of Defense, apart from the Air Force itself and the FAA, through which to work on a master plan for full development. Because of this, he said, the Washington trip later this month "can only hurt."

The joint-use concept was spelled out as part of Air Force policy as late as 1966, but it was not until official Defense Department encouragement of such operations late in 1969 that Marin began to plan for the day when commercial jets would be sharing space with military aircraft.

The aviation commission is on record favoring use of Hamilton for scheduled airlines, primarily California carriers. Golden West Airlines currently is seeking permission to use Hamilton.

Fine Against Union Is Upheld

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—California's Supreme Court has upheld a $55,000 fine Thursday for the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

A San Bernardino County Court had found the union guilty of illegal strike activity there at the American Potash Chemical Corp.'s plant.

The trial court said that the union violated injunctions against excessive picketing and intimidation of employes and customers.

In its appeal, the ILWU contended it was not responsible for the acts of the local involved in the walkout.

New Kidnap Bill In The Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill making the kidnap of an elected official punishable by death or life imprisonment has been proposed by a Republican lawmaker who said the measure was sought by the Reagan Administration.

Assemblyman Charles Conrad of Sherman Oaks said Friday that he was asked by Gov. Ronald Reagan's staff to introduce the measure "although the governor hasn't made a speech about it and I don't want any hullabuloo about it."

Gromyko Sees Better Relations

MOSCOW (UPI)—Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko of the Soviet Union said today the Soviets favored better relations with the United States, but he criticized negotiations that resembled a "fencing contest."

Gromyko discussed Soviet foreign policy during the last major speech before a weekend recess in the 24th Congress of the Soviet Communist Party.

Gromyko, like several other speakers this week, praised the "great logical force" of a six-hour report delivered Tuesday by Leonid I Brezhnev, the party's General Secretary.

"Washington should weigh with all seriousness what was said by Leonid Brezhnev in his report," Gromyko said. "The Soviet Union comes out for normal relations with the United States. It considers it possible to improve Soviet-American relations.

"However," he added, "Washington must back up its statements with concrete deeds. We are not for negotiations that resemble a fencing contest. We are for serious negotiations."

Gromyko's remarks, carried in summary by the Soviet news agency Tass, also included a sharp reference to China that reflected Brezhnev's remarks.

"The improvement of Soviet-Chinese relations would be of great importance for the struggle against imperialism and aggression" he said. "It depends on the Chinese leaders and the Chinese side which direction the development of relations between the USSR and the Chinese Peoples Republic will take."

Gromyko also called for steps to improve the situation in Europe. He said necessary steps included the covening of an all-European security conference and "the completion of talks on West Berlin."

"We have no territorial demands on any state," he said. "We have no intention of inflicting damage on anybody's lawful rights and interests. We demand the same in reference to our country.

Gromyko said relations with both Frnace and Italy have improved steadily, and he praised the conclusion of treaties by Poland and the Soviet Union with West Germany.

PAPER

and telegrams from persons commenting on Calley's conviction continued to pour into the Pentagon Friday. One office said about one-third of the comments it received supported the Army court's action at Ft. Benning, Ga., this week.

Spokesmen said the White Paper would be distributed throughout the world.

"It amounts to telling the army why we did this, why we had the trial," a spokesman said.

The White Paper said the My Lai incident "as tragic as its consequences have been for the victims, their survivors and the army unit and men implicated in the allegations" fitted clearly under the provisions of the Geneva Conventions.

"When the allegations became known, the Army had only one legal course of action —to investigate the allegations and prosecute the accused if the evidence so warranted," the statement said.

at Kampot, 80 miles south-southwest of Phnom Penh.

Maj. Gen. Ngo Dzu, commander of South Vietnam's 2nd Military Region, said Fire Support Base No. 6 is vital because if it is lost, "Dak To will be under siege.

Dzu described the North Vietnamese attackers around Fire Support Base No. 6 as "suicide men."

Dzu said documents captured from North Vietnamese indicated the border Ranger bases of Ben Het and Dak To were the primary objectives of the communists with Duc Lap and Bu Prang—other border ranger outposts 150 miles to the south —as secondary objectives. He said the documents also indicated the Communists hoped to cut Highways 14 and 19.

Dzu suggested the North Vietnamese were trying to tie up South Vietnamese troops "so we cannot send any more into laos."

In Saigon, South Vietnamese spokesmen said communist gunners fired 100 rounds of mortar fire into Duc Duc, 350 miles northeast of Saigon on South Vietnam's upper coast.

Cultural Center Plea Scheduled

Members of the Third Way House of Petaluma will meet Monday to discuss ways to get community support for the organization's proposed cultural center for youth.

The group will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Kenilworth Junior High School.

The Third Way House is a nonprofit organization consisting of adults and youth seeking to help teen-agers solve their problems.

Tests Urged On Food Chemicals

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., says more than 1,000 chemical regularly added to foods have never been tested for their potential to cause cancer, birth defects or gene damage.

Ribicoff said Friday his Senate executive reorganization subcommittee had gathered the information on food additives and would hold hearings on the subject next week.

He said hundreds of chemicals on the government's generally recognized as "safe" list have not been fully tested for harmful effects.

Vandals Break Bank's Window

Vandals broke a $200 window in a bank yesterday or today and shattered the rear window of a car parked at 220 Belle Avenue, San Rafael police said.

The window of the Redwood Bank, 1435 Fourth Street, was smashed between 5 p.m. yesterday and 1:30 a.m. today, police said.

The window in the car belonging to Dexter Toyota was broken shortly after 10 p.m. yesterday, police said.

Minor Injuries In Cycle Crash

Two 18-year-old Petalumans sustained minor injuries last night when the motorcycle they were riding ran into a drainage ditch on Novato Boulevard near San Marin Drive, outside Novato.

The California Highway Patrol said David Jennerman and Donna Jennerman, both of 1200 D Street, were treated for cuts at the Hamilton Air Force Base hospital. Officers said the accident occurred about 9: 30 p.m.

Terra Linda CSD To Work On Big Study

The Terra Linda Community Services District board last night officially agreed to aid and participate in a study to help determine the future of the Terra Linda, Marinwood and Lucas Valley area.

The Terra Linda and Marinwood service district boards and the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association had unofficially decided Wednesday to find an alternative to annexing with the city of San Rafael. Each of the boards was asked to ratify last week's unofficial decision as soon as possible and the Terra Linda district board last night became the first to do so.

The first major step in the plan calls for representatives from the groups to ask the Fireman's Fund American Insurance Co. — which has planned a development on the Lucas Green property — not to seek annexation to the city.

The Terra Linda board last night authorized a letter to the insurance company asking it to meet with the Terra Linda district board before making a final decision.

Damaged Galaxy To Be Scrapped

WASHINGTON (UPI)"-A $39.4 million C5A Galaxy jet transport—the world's largest plane—which was damaged by fire last spring at Palmdale, Calif., will be scrapped rather than repaired.

The Air Force announced the decision Friday, saying major parts would be salvaged for use on later model. Investigators traced the fire to a motor in a hydraulic system. The crew members escaped the fire, which broke out as the plane was being taxied for takeoff.

The Air Force now has 79 of the giant planes. It has spent more than $3 billion on the planes plus an additional $1.3 billion for spare parts and maintenance equipment.

A New Chapter In Manson Case

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Another chapter in the Manson family murder mystery opened Friday when Charles Manson and three of his followers went on trial for two more murders.

Manson and Susan Atkins, already convicted of the seven Tate-Labianca slayings, and Manson followers Bruce Davis, 27, and Stephen Grogan, 19, are the defendants in the latest action.

Manson, Davis and Miss Atkins, 22, are accused of killing musician Gary Hinman. Another Manson follower, Robert Beausoleil, already has been convicted and sentenced to death in that case.

Hanna Center Asks Use Permit

A use permit for a group home for boys sponsored by the Hanna Boys Center will be considered at the Petaluma Planning Commission meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

The center plans to establish a supervised home for boys at 47 Sixth Street.

OBITUARIES

Memorial For John Wollak

Memorial service for John J. Wollak, San Anselmo food broker who died Thursday in a local hospital after a long illness, will be at 2:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo.

Wollak, whose home was at 9 Alpine Lane, had lived in Marin for the past 22 years.

A native of Switzerland, he came to this country when he was 7 years old, living first in New York. For many years he headed the firm, John J. Wollak Inc., in San Francisco. At the time of his death he was vice president and chairman of the board of directors of the company.

Wollak was a member of Marin Commandry No. 73, Knights Templar; Islam Temple, San Francisco; Euclid Lodge No. 136, Free and Accepted Masons, Hoboken, N.J.; Royal Arch Masons of California, Chapter No. 102, Marin County Shrine Club, Pacific Dairy and Poultry Association, California Cheese and Butter Association, and was a past vice president of the Tolibia Cheese Association and a director of the Italian-American Chamber of Commerce.

He is survived by his wife, Kermit; three daughters, Mrs. Dorothy Ashe of Santa Rosa, Mrs. Anthony Willegal of Whitehead, Wis., and Mrs. Shirley Cooper of Hayward; a son, John Cook of Santa Ana; a sister, Mrs. Mel Rodermond of York, Pa., 11 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Arrest Made In Stolen Property Probe

A 22-year-old San Francisco man was arrested by San Rafael police yesterday on suspicion of concealing stolen property after a garage mechanic became suspicious of his actions.

David Eldon Schoeder, who has been known to use at least five other names, was arrested shortly after he was seen by the mechanic near a toolbox in the service department of Marin Automobile Co., 1504 Fourth Street, police said.

Police stopped Schoeder on Shaver Street and recovered two air impact wrenches believed to have been stolen yesterday from Cain's Tire, 1531 Fourth Street, and from R and R Automatic Transmissions Repair, 1542 Fourth Street.

Schoeder — also known as David Finocchi, David Ortega, David Palmer, George Henkiez and John Paul Luther — was booked into Marin County Jail to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday.

Cape's Morale Is Questioned

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI)—Apollo 15 workers are having problems with the lunar landing craft, and astronaut James B. Irwin thinks it might be a result of slipping morale at Cape Kennedy.

Irwin said Friday recent technical problems with the moon landing spacecraft are "a function of a lot of trained people leaving. I think maybe majorale is slipping perhaps."

Apollo 15 commander David R. Scott, however, said in a separate interview he was concerned about the bugs but was confident the Cape workers would overcome the problems and meet the July 26 launch date.

DANIEL LINGWOOD

Daniel Lingwood of 1323 Leafwood Drive, Novato, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 75.

Lingwood was born in Los Angeles and lived most of his life in Bakersfield, where he was a driller in the oil fields. He retired at 60 after operating a service station in Los Angeles, and moved to Marin one year ago.

He is survived by a daughter, Dorothy J. Endicott of San Rafael; a son, Cleon M. Lingwood of Bakersfield; a sister, Maude B. Soule, and a brother, Edward of Bakersfield, and another brother, James of Los Angeles.

Funeral will be Tuesday in Bakersfield, with burial at Union Cemetery.

OLGA MAYORGA

Olga Mayorga, 58, who died in a local convalescent home Monday, will be buried in her native country of Nicaragua.

Mrs. Mayorga, the mother of Cristina Simmons of Terra Linda, had lived in Marin County the past two years. She had been in this country 11 years.

She was a housewife and a widow.

AUSTIN DILL

Austin Earl Dill of San Anselmo, a custodian at San Rafael High School for 10 years, died yesterday at a San Francisco hospital after a long illness.

Dill, 65, of 17 Park Drive, had been retired for three years. He had been a resident of Marin County for 15 years.

He is survived by his father, W. W. Dill; a sister, Elizabeth Martin, a brother, Clyde, all of South Bend, Ind.

Funeral will be held in Mississippi.

The State's Jobless Rate Climbs

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's unemployment rate climbed to 7.1 per cent last month to outstrip the national figure of 6 per cent.

The Reagan administration said Friday that the state's rate for February was 6.7 per cent and the rise was mainly due to "the continued decline of the aerospace industry."

The month of March actually saw a slight increase in the employed ranks and a pencil-thin drop in the jobless number "but the gains were less than normal for this time of the year so the rate showed an increase," according to the state Human Resources Development Department.

The national rate for February was 5.8 per cent.

HRD Director Gilbert L. Sheffield said California's rate has averaged 7 per cent since last September with the exception of February which included "an unusually long dry spell that produced more construction jobs and a 4-day holiday that may have had a temporary effect on the number reporting as unemployed."

Statistics showed that employment was 7.94 million in March, up 18,000 from February. Jobless were 675,000 persons, a decline of 21,000.

The director explained the employment total was less than usual "chiefly because of a decrease in manufacturing which normally shows a rise at this time of the year.

"This can be mainly attributed to the continued decline of the aerospace industry, compounded by several trade disputes and the after-effects of the earthquake in the Los Angeles area."

California's unemployment rate was 5.2 per cent in March 1970.

HRD gave this area brakdown for March:

—Los Angeles County, 7.5 per cent in comparison with 7.1 per cent in February. Jobless were 264,900 persons—a rise of 900.

— San Francisco-Oakland area, 5.8 per cent in comparison with 5.1 per cent in February. Jobless were 92,100 in comparison with 90,500 in February.

—San Diego, 7.1 per cent in comparison with 7.2 per cent the month before. The March figure was 442,400 as compared to 441,500 the previous month.

—San Jose, 7.5 per cent for both months. The number of unemployed rose from 419,700 to only 422,200.

Mill Valley Pair Hurt In Crash

Two Mill Valley women suffered injuries in an auto accident Thursday near Novato.

Helen Gubka, 58, of 71 Woodside Lane, was reported in satisfactory condition today with a spinal fracture at Marin General Hospital. Ann Lowery, 57, of 286 Shoreline Highway, was treated for scrapes on her arms.

The hospital reported that the women were brought to the hospital about 12:40 p.m., but details of the accident were not available today.

$400 Dory Stolen At Gate Six Berth

A dory, valued at $400, was stolen from near a houseboat at Gate 6 Tuesday, Marin County Sheriff's Office reported yesterday.

The boat was owned by Oscar Erion, who was asleep on his houseboat at the time of the theft, deputies said.

Plea For Angela To Be Released

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The head of the Angela Y. Davis defense committee said yesterday Miss Davis should be freed on bail pending her trial because Lt. William Calley was released during his appeal.

"Even though Calley is a convicted felon, he was freed pending appeal by President Nixon while Angela Davis is spending her 100th day in Marin County jail," Franklin Alexander, head of the National United Committee to free Angela Davis, said at a news conference.

Miss Davis, 27, Communist and former teacher at the University of California at Los Angeles, is accused of murder, kidnaping and conspiracy in a courthouse shoot-out last Aug. 7 in San Rafael which left four men dead, including Judge Harold J. Haley of Marin Superior Court.

She has filed a motion asking for bail pending her trial, but efforts to disqualify judges assigned to the case have prevented a ruling on it. Her codefendant, Ruchell Magee, 32, a San Quentin convict, got a judge to disqualify himself last month on grounds of bias.

Miss Davis's attorneys moved Thursday to have Judge Alan Lindsay, 54, of Oakland, disqualified for alleged racial prejudice.

Court aides said yesterday that Lindsay intends to challenge the contention he is a "white racist" and is spending most of his time researching counterarguments with the assistance of both Marin and Alameda County counsels.

Lindsay has until April 11 to file a countermotion. Then the State Judicial Council will assign a judge to hear evidence on whether Lindsay is prejudicial or not and decide whether he can remain on the case.

Alexander noted yesterday that thousands of Americans had written the President protesting the Calley verdict and sentence.

Miss Davis, he said, had received "millions" of letters supporting her. Alexander said they were arriving at the rate of 40 bags a week.

"Professor Davis has not been convicted of any crime whatsoever and she is presumed to be entirely and completely innocent of the charges leveled against her by the state of California," added Margaret Burnham, one of her attorneys.

Miss Davis is accused, under a California law which holds an accomplice equally guilty, of buying the guns brought into the courtroom of Judge Haley last August. Magee is charged with firing a shotgun blast which killed the judge after he and four others were taken hostage.

Orrick To Lead Opera's Board

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Lawyer William H. Orrick Jr. is the new president and chief executive officer of the San Francisco Opera Association.

The association also said Friday that R. Gwin Follis has been named chairman of the board.

The two were elected at the annual meeting of the board of directors Thursday. Orrick succeeds Prentis Cobb Hale, who will remain on the board.

Orthopedic Help At Marindale

The Independent-Journal erroneously reported in some editions yesterday that Marindale School in Terra Linda is a facility for the mentally retarded. The school is for the orthopedically handicapped.

Poindexter Trial Set For Monday

NEW YORK (UPI)—The U.S. attorney's office has subpoenaed newsmen here and in Chicago and Detroit as witnesses at the Trial of David R. Poindexter which opens Monday, it was learned yesterday.

Poindexter was arrested last October with Angela Davis, a black militant being tried on charges of murder, kidnapping and conspiracy stemming from the Marin Hall of Justice shootout last summer. He was charged with harboring a fugitive.

The news media representatives are to present news stories and broadcasts to counter a possible defense that it was not known generally Miss Davis was wanted, a spokesman said. Miss Davis was on the FBI's most wanted list when she was apprehended.

Subpoenas were issued to representatives of the New York Times, Time-Life, Newsweek and three television networks with headquarters in New York, newspapers and three television stations in Chicago and two papers and three television stations in Detroit.

Welfare Package Backed By Supervisors On File

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — County supervisors-supported legislation rivaling Gov. Ronald Reagan's welfare revision plan is before the Assembly.

Assemblymen Peter Schabarum, R-Covina, and Ken MacDonald, D-Ojai, filed their proposal Friday and said the program is aimed at reducing welfare costs without shifting the burden to the county property taxpayers.

The four-bill package is sponsored by the County Supervisors Association of California which previously expressed concern that the governor's proposal would increase property taxes. Reagan denied this.

A key provision of the supervisors' program—some of which parallels Reagan's—would transfer from the Department of Social Welfare to the Department of Human Resources Development the unemployed fathers' aid category.

This would be aimed at finding jobs for able-bodied recipients. The measure would also set a ceiling of $50 plus costs of child care on the amount of work-related expenses paid a recipient.

Like Reagan's proposal, the supervisors' bill calls for consolidating old age assistance, aid to the blind and aid to the disabled and automating their grant payments as is currently done in the federal social security system.

Two Injured As Car Rolls Over

A San Francisco man and woman suffered minor injuries in a one-car crash at 2:30 p.m. Thursday eastbound on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, west of San Geronimo Valley Drive, the California Highway Patrol reported.

The driver, Robert Bates, 28, was treated at Marin General Hospital for multiple bruises and scrapes. A passenger, Nancy Rifkin, 28, was treated for head bruises, neck strain and a cut thumb.

Officers said Bates failed to negotiate a curve and the auto rolled over and hit an embankment.

Sixth Worker Dies From Acid Fumes

BERWICK, Maine (UPI)—A sixth man died early today from deadly fumes released at a tannery when faulty directions were given to the driver of a chemical tanker truck.

James F. Royce, 18, of Farmington, N.H., died about 6 a.m. at Frisbie Memorial Hospital in Rochester, N.H., where he had been under intensive care since the accident Friday morning in Berwick which also claimed his father's life.

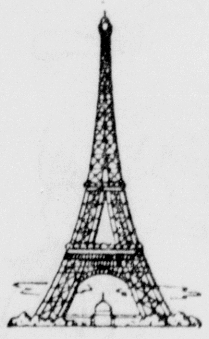
THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Celebration For 100th Birthday

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. R. F. Howard, who was born April 2, 1871, in Virginia City, Nev., is being honored this evening at a party at the home of her grandson and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Stinchcomb, in San Anselmo.

Louise Howard's father was a miner, and her mother was a trapeze artist, and an interpreter for the early Virginia City Courts who spoke English, Spanish, French, Italian, Chinese and the local Indian dialect.



The former Louise Bennett was graduated from high school in Virginia City, taught piano and played for the dances in town. After her father's death her mother was married to Peter Bellani, and the family owned and managed the Peter Bellani Hotel in Virginia City until they moved to San Francisco in 1903.

Grandma Lou, as the honoree is known, was wed to a cowboy, R. F. Howard, who gave up "the wild life" to become a carpenter and moved his family to a home at Sixth and Folsom Streets in San Francisco, which was destroyed by the fire, which resulted from the 1906 earthquake.

Relatives who will attend the 100th birthday party are Mrs. Howard's daughters, Mrs. Clarence Abbott and Mrs. Jack Lehman, both of San Francisco; her three great grandsons; and four great-great grandchildren.

SURPRISED SUNDAY when 50 friends and relatives appeared at their home were Mr. and Mrs. James L. Regalia Jr. and James L. Regelia Sr. of Novato.

The trio is on a six-week's tour of Europe, and the party, hosted by Mr. and Mrs. Michael T. Rains, also of Novato, the junior Regalias' daughter and son-in-law, was to say bon voyage.

Countries the Regalias plan to visit are Germany, Switzerland, Austria, France and Italy, where they will stay with relatives.

MRS. EDNA Schumacher of Mill Valley has as her house guest Mrs. Helen Eldridge from Ketchikan, Alaska. This is their first meeting in 35 years.

LITTLEST SLUGGER

SEW SIMPLE

Adjustment Eases The Back

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I don't have many adjustments to make on a pattern. However, I am wide across the back, and If I get a larger size pattern so that the back doesn't pull, the neckline and shoulders are too large. Please tell me what to do for more ease in the back.

MRS. H.S.

DEAR MRS. H.S.,

This is rather a simple adjustment to make. Draw a straight line on your pattern from the shoulder to the waistline. If the dress doesn't have a waistline seam, continue the line well into the skirt. This line should be at the center of the width of the shoulder but not through any dart if there is one.

Cut your pattern and spread it slightly, depending on the ease you need, usually ¼ to ½ inch is the most that would be needed. Since the Front of the shoulder is the correct width, you will have to take a small fold out of the back of your pattern within the shoulder area, similar to a dart, about 3 inches long, tapering to nothing at the end. Now you will have the room you need across the back but the shoulder should be the original width and will then fit the front shoulder properly. The size of this small fold in your pattern would depend on the width you added to the back; they must be the same.

MRS. JOY Benson, Hnolulu, Hawaii, is the Tailor Trix pressing board winner this week for her sewing suggestion:

"One day when I was writing in the families appointments on the calender, I made a few for myself. Now the whole family knows when my sewing day is here, and the cooperation is beautiful. I keep the appointment with enthusiasm as never before. What a great way to accomplish all those outfits I want to make without feeling guilty about letting other things go."

DEAR EUNICE,

My material has one inch stripes, and the dress I have chosen will have a chevron effect in the front because the front seam is cut at an angle. Since all women are conscious of their size, please tell me which way these stripes should go. Should they angle up like a "V" or come down like a triangle?

MRS. B.A.

DEAR MRS. B.A.,

Whenever you are in doubt about a problem concerning stripes or plaids, take a piece of ruled paper, if it's plaid, add the vertical lines. Then place the small pieces of the pattern given in the cutting guide of your pattern, on the paper which in turn will represent your pattern. This is a very simple way to see just exactly how the stripes or plaids will look when the garment is complete.

I tried this when I was working out your problem and it seemed to me that the dress would have slimmer lines if the stripes pointed up to the shoulders, in other words, forming a "V" at the center front.

DEAR EUNICE,

I recently bought a piece of striped polyester knit, and even though the salesgirl cut it exactly on the woven line of the knit, it simply won't lie smooth when I try to place it even on the fold. One end goes up hill and when I try to smooth the ends straight there is a large diagonal ripple in the middle. This was an expensive piece of knit, and the shop has only the finest fabrics. Was there a defect in the knit? I thought when stripes were woven instead of printed, they would always end up even.

MRS. G.H.W.

DEAR MRS. G.H.W.,

There is always a chance that a woven stripe will be more even than a printed one. However this is not the problem in your case. The polyester knits are "heat-set" after they have been woven. A great deal of care is taken to be sure the fabric is perfectly even on grain, but in this case there was probably one end that fed into the rollers faster than the other end. This piece of knit will probably never lie nice and smooth even if you washed it, because of the heat-set process. Return your merchandise to your shop, and they in turn will send it back to the manufacturer. I have recently gone through one of our finest knits mills in the East and was amazed about the operation. There is every possible precaution taken in inspection, finishing, etc. to insure you a perfect piece of fabric. Naturally, the price of the fabric is some indication of the finished product, but no one would knowingly sell a piece of fabric they knew wasn't perfect.

Garcia-Wechsler Engagement Told

Mr. and Mrs. David K. Wechsler of San Rafael announce the engagement of their daughter, Sandra, to Robert J. Garcia of Berkeley.

Sandra is the sister of Steven J. Wechsler of Sacramento and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester L. Lewis of Oakland. She is a graduate of San Rafael High School and the University of California at Davis. The future bride teaches the fifth grade at K. I. Jones School in Fairfield.

Robert is the son of Mr. and Mrs. LeVerne Garcia of Berkeley and the brother of Peter Garcia of Berkeley, LeVerne Garcia of El Dorado and Mrs. Nicholas Baloff of Stanford. He was graduated from Berkeley High School and U.C. at Davis and is a third year student in the School of Veterinary Medicine at Davis.

The couple plan to be married July 17 at the Concordia Club in San Francisco.

Informal Rites Save Fuss, Time

NEW YORK (UPI)—In a survey, the 27 per cent of young brides who opt for an informal wedding said they did so for these reasons: Financial, time and fuss.

They either didn't have the money for a large wedding or, if they had, wanted to spend it on something else. The time necessary to plan for a large wedding was not available. The young brides were turned off by the prospect of all the fussing that goes on in connection with a large or formal wedding.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

'Nice Guy' Protects His Own Interests First, Then Is Silent

DEAR HELEN:

We all know him too well — the "nice guy" who goes along with what he thinks is most popular so people will like him. He doesn't have opinions strong enough to stand up against criticism. He's the perennial "yes man."

Here's my definition of a nice guy. How many fit that image?

A "nice" guy keeps silent about deeper invasions into Indochina because "we've always had war" and "those guys must know what they're doing." Besides, it isn't his neck — he's over draft age, and has a defense plant job.

A nice guy shrugs off My Lai and remains silent on the war in general.

He protects his only interest (himself) and has never made history. He seldom has the guts to speak out, fearing he might offend somebody (who could help him later on if he remains ingratiating).

Throughout history, he has never invented anything, led a revolution, or challenged the status quo.

A nice guy needs security from the constant winning of smiles, more handshakes and a paternal slap on the back.He feels desperately that people must "love" him. He needs garnished compliments and flowery praise.

He may have daydreams about being a "man," but if it means speaking out, he soon begins to squeak like a mouse.

The nice guy is apt to say "Some of my best friends are Negroes..." but puts his house up for sale if one moves into the neighborhood.

When minority groups ask for something more, he's all sympathy — until they come too close.

The nice guy will never get fired from his job. He doesn't have the courage to stand up and be counted for any ideal. To do so may hurt his "don't rock the boat" image.

Often the nice guy survives only through the props of ego building from his patient wife or family, who know when to apply soft soap.

He will be paraded through a corridor of lilies at his death, with a smile on his face, his only mission in life accomplished: that everyone sing out his praises and cast their eyes adoringly on —the loved one. (Could be they're relieved to be done with him.)

A nice guy is a neuter, sexless creature with a charming personality. He is too "nice" to cry out against the inhumanity of war, racism or injustice. Behind his charm lies a character nurtured with so much saccharine, it has turned him into a docile heap of rubble.

A nice guy gains his goal of collective love at the expense of the world which has paid dearly for his needs, while real men have struggled and died.

A "nice" guy is the opposite of a "MAN." And the world is all to full of nice guys. — LYNN.

DEAR LYNN:

You omitted one thing: A "nice guy" is terribly, terribly dull. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help you. Address Helen Bottel in care of the Independent-Journal.

Women Best Car Buyers

The female, not the male, of the household should be the family's used-car buyer, or at least the shopper; a national magazine asserted today.

Women are more used to shopping and more apt to like it, asserted the April issue of American Home magazine. "And shopping is what it takes to turn up a good buy in a used car."

"Too many men can be intimidated by a salesman who senses their ignorance and plays on it. Women, with no automotive myths to live up to, are free to ask all the 'dumb' questions they want, and maybe turn up some important answers," it says.

Here are some hints on used-car buying given in the magazine.

Include $150 to $250 in your budget for getting the car into top shape. "This repair reserve might save you major headaches, which can be acquired trying to avoid minor ones," asserted the article.

Decide beforehand if you plan to keep the car for some time or resell it soon. A car that "holds its price" might not be a good buy since you, after all, are paying the price it "held."

The best time to buy a used car is when new cars are selling well, generally in spring and early summer. More used cars are available then because they are being taken in as trades.

"Generally, four-door sedans offer the best value as used cars because they depreciate faster than their fancier relatives — and, too, the fancier cars have more gadgetry to go haywire." "A good rule of thumb is: The older the car you buy the simpler it should be, for there will be less likelihood of something going wrong with it."

German Women Play It Safe

When it comes to investing savings, German women want to play it safe. This is the conclusion of an unusual study conducted by a marketing analysis group in Nuremberg, West Germany.

When the German woman thinks about tying up savings, she opts first and foremost for security. The profit motive plays only a secondary role.

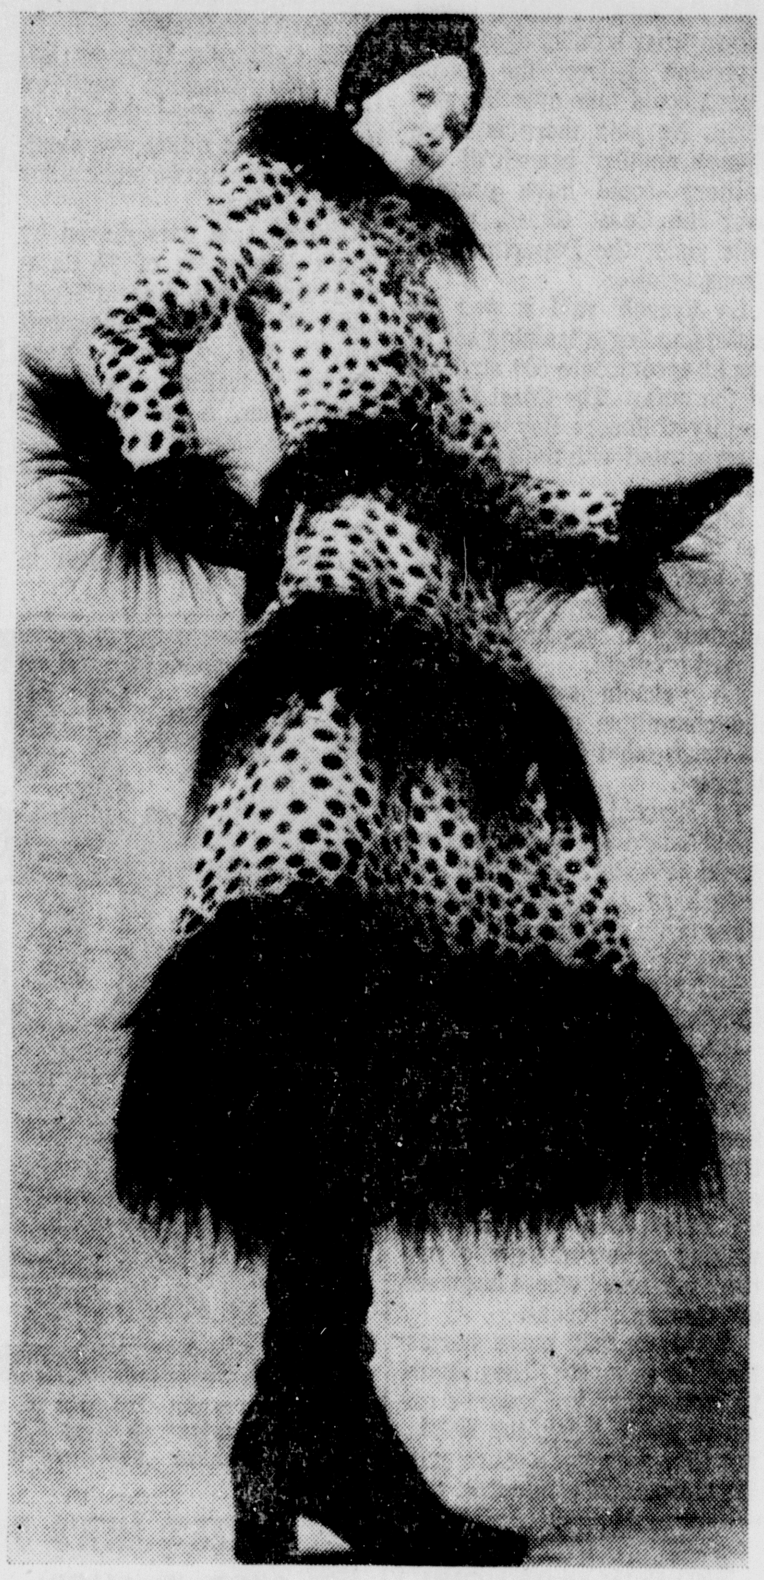
Seventy-five percent of the women surveyed viewed the stock market as a sheer speculative affair. Eighty percent equated the stock market with quick profits or quick losses. Most women had next to no idea about bonds and similar obligations.

The study concluded the German woman's instinct is oriented toward holding onto what she has and multiplying it with a go-slow attitude.

Conservationists Plea To Furriers

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI)—The movement to conserve rare animals is spreading. Now it affects top couturier houses of this world fashion center.



THIS SOMALILAND cheetah coat inlayed with horizontal stripes in black monkey from Christian Dior's '71-'72 winter collection is likely to be one of the last made from the fur of an endangered species. The International Fur Federation, a trade group with furrier members in 17 countries, has agreed to stop buying furs of Bengal tigers, leopards and cheetah and is asking members to take a three-year-moratorium on other animals' fur while the conservation union studies whether they are endangered also.

(UPI telephoto)

The fur shows that have been underway here include coats of Bengal tiger, leopard and cheetah, all endangered species. But the pressure to keep the skins on the animals themselves is growing, just as it did two years ago in the United States when the fur industry moved to stop importing or using furs of these rapidly disappearing wild beasts.

Now the pressure is on Paris from the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and from customers and the press.

THE INTERNATIONAL Fur Federation, a trade group with furrier members in 17 countries including France, says it has agreed to the conservation union's demand that the federation recommend to members in May that they stop buying certain skins.

The conservation union lists as on the brink of extinction the Bengal tiger, the snow leopard, the cloudy leopard, the giant otter and the la plata (South American) otter.

The federation said it also agreed to ask members to take a three-year moratorium on other kinds of leopards and cheetahs while the conservation union conducts a scientific study to determine extent of endangerment to them.

The federation refused to agree on recommending bans on jaguar and ocelot coats and "we have no funds for a survey to prove the danger to these animals," a spokesman for the union, headquartered in Morges, Switzerland, said. He added that "more than 200,000 ocelots were killed for coats in 1969 alone."

THE CONSERVATION union is supported in part by funds from the United Nations scientific, educational and Cultural Organization (UNESCO). Whether the federation's recommendation to its members will empty Paris high fashion salons of some of the rare furs is not yet known. A federation spokesman said it could only recommend, not compel.

The news media and public opinion only recently have taken up the fur conservation cause. French television recently featured a debate between designers and conservationists and Animal Magazine campaigned with such slogans as "Leopard skin coats look better on leopards."

Federic Castet, chief fur designer for Christian Dior, said the luxury coats of cheetah, Bengal tiger, ocelot, jaguar and panther in his recent show came from "old skins in our stocks for several years."

Most of the Dior designs were made from animals such as mink that is commercially bred and not endangered.

Castet said the firm was not buying tiger and leopard now. "We do not want to kill these species, that would not be in our interest" said the designer whose clientele includes some of the world's wealthiest women.

"However we think they should be controlled (and not banned). . A certain number would die anyway from other means such as illness."

Castet has another plan which under the power of the Dior name could influence the whole fur industry. He is working on a method of imitating fur of the rare cats by painting tiger stripes and leopard stripes on non-rare or artificial skins "since some women always will want this type of fur."

TO PUBLISH ENGAGEMENT AND WEDDING STORIES IN THE I-J

Forms for engagement and wedding story information to be printed in the Independent-Journal are available from the I-J offices in San Rafael, Novato, Mill Valley and Southern Sonoma

Wedding forms should be returned promptly to the I-J office in your area and information will be printed immediately after the wedding. Photographers should be urged to submit a print of the wedding picture promptly. Color photographs cannot be used.

The Independent-Journal does not print wedding stories or photographs received more than seven days after the wedding.

An engagement form may be accompanied by a professional black and white photograph, which may be picked up at the I-J office after publication. Snapshots, polaroid or color pictures are not suitable.

'THE TENTH MAN'

Ellen Ernst and Gerald Genese appear in a scene from "The Tenth Man," a play by Paddy Chayefsky, the current theater bill at the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts. Opened last weekend, the play will be presented today at 8:30 p.m. and also April 16 and 17 and April 23 and 24. The play has been called a "rare blend of humor, the occult and concern for the human condition. It is being directed by Robert Adler.

OVER 200,000

Calley Record Sales Booming

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—A song set to the tune of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and entitled "the Battle Hymn of Lt. Calley" has sold more than 200,000 records since the conviction of Lt. William L. Calley, a record company says.

A spokesman for Shelby Singelton Productions, Inc., said the demand for the record, a country and western-type rendition, is "absolutely fantastic."

The record was released about 10 days before Calley's conviction Monday for murdering 22 Vietnamese women, children and old men at My Lai. It got off to a slow start.

"On Tuesday we sold 10,000 copies," said Miss Bobbye Hinson of Singelton. "Wednesday sold about 40,000 and Thursday we sold 154,000."

The figures for Friday were not immediately available.

"It has been doing absolutely fantastic. Some radio stations are playing it for an entire hour without interruption. People are using it as a means to protest the verdict, I think.

"The phones are ringing off the wall. We have had to press an additional 5,000 records this week just for promotional purposes."

The song was written by two amateur songwriters,

Coast Guard Seeks Two Rock Station

The Coast Guard, with the support of a special study group, wants to acquire the Two Rock Ranch Army Station west of Petaluma for use as a training school.

Arthur La Franchi, Petaluma Chamber of Commerce president, said yesterday the coast guard has sent a survey team to the post, due to be closed June 30 under a Defense Department economy move.

La Franchi said it is not known what hurdles need to be overcome before the Coast Guard could take over the property. He said there is some chance another branch of the military could have priority over the Coast Guard, which falls under the Department of Transportation.

La Franchi said it was his understanding a training school would accomodate 500 students at the outset. The Coast Guard facility at Bodega Bay would be incorporated with the school, he said.

La Franchi leads a committee of 17 Petalumans, selected by Rep. Don H. Clausen, R-First District, which voted unanimously to support the Coast Guard proposal.

La Franchi said, however, the committee would continue to weigh other ideas for use of the post.

La Franchi said he believed Coast Guard use of the property would be a stable one since that branch of the service is not necessarily controlled by the effects of war and peace and would bring a good calibre of residents.

Other uses suggested for the post have included a law enforcement training center, national cemetery, Head Start training center, secondary vocational training institute, Indian reservation and military waiting station for wives of military personnel whose husbands are serving overseas.

Residents may make suggestions for new uses. They should be sent either to Clausen's office in Santa Rosa, the Petaluma City manager's office or to the chamber of commerce.

Pharmacy Cigarette Ban Likely

The president of the Marin County Pharmaceutical Association said yesterday that the expects Marin pharmacists to go along with a proposal of the American Pharmaceutical Association that members not sell cigarettes in their stores.

"There's no doubt about it," Paul Lofholm said when asked whether tobacco product sales would be ended in Marin drug stores.

He said that he was a delegate to the convention in San Francisco Thursday where members voted to ban sales.

Despite Lofholm's enthusiasm for the proposal, other pharmacists said privately they did not agree with the ban on cigarettes.

A San Rafael druggist said that he thought it was unfair to put pressure on one type of retailer to end sales. "They'll just go somewhere else to buy cigarettes," he said, referring to smokers, and suggested that a federal ban on the manufacturer of cigarettes as the only effective control.

Goldwater Views My Lai Incident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If Sen. Barry Goldwater had commanded the Army at the time of the My Lai massacre, he would have "written it off" as part of the brutality of war.

Civilian noncombatants have always suffered most in war, the Arizona Republican, a retired major general in the Air Force reserve, said Friday in a statement.

"I can't speak for others, but had I been the commanding general of the Army at the time of the My Lai incident, I would have admitted such an incident did occur, expressed my deep and profound regret and then written it off as part of the brutality and uselessness and waste which are natural ingredients in any war," Goldwater said.

Driver Hurts Back In Crash

Walter Langdon, 59, of 30 Rosemont Drive, San Anselmo, was listed in good condition today in the Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael after being injured yesterday in a three-car collision on Highway 101 near Corte Madera.

The California Highway Patrol said Langdon received back injuries when the car in which he was riding was sandwiched between two other autos about 4:50 p.m.

Officers said cars driven by Paula Evens, 20, of 30 Rosemont Drive, and Vincent Sancimino, 65, of 146 Meadowcroft Drive, San Anselmo, were stopped in traffic in the northbound lanes. A car driven by Marvin H. Meyer, 21, of Moscow, Ida., hit the rear of the Evens car, causing it to hit the Sancimino vehicle.

Langdon was a passenger in Mrs. Evens's car.

Plea Made For Transplant Organs

LONDON (UPI)—The vital organs of dying persons should be made available for medical transplant in order to put the needs of the living ahead of the "irrelevant caprices" of reluctant family members, a Newcastle University professor said Friday.

Prof. Henry Miller, vice chencallor of the university, told a London biology conference that only specific prior orders by the deceased should prevent use of such organs for transplant.

Electronic Age?

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Court reporters may soon be a thing of the past. The Board of Supervisors has begun a study to determine if the 450 court reporters in Superior and Municipal courts can be replaced—electronically.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Retirement Brings Status Loss In Society Geared Toward Work

Leisure often is associated with social status — a hangover, perhaps, from the days the idle rich were envied. But today, millions of people have time on their hands due to early retirement and shorter working hours. To the senior citizen who thrived on activity and work, the prestige is gone. As one oldster said, "This business of being put out to pasture is for the birds." Many working people regard those with nthing to do as being disabled, on relief, school dropouts, unemployed or prisoners. They also include retirees in this category — until they are in the same boat. Now the shoe is on the other foot, yet it is difficult to change preconceived notions of long standing. As a result, the retiree finds little status in leisure and more so when his health is failing and his income limited.

IN OUR COUNTRY, status is based on personal accomplishments, occupation and position in the labor force. Many years ago, the late cartoonist, Carey Orr was discussing retirement with a 50-year-old financier. Mr. Orr listened patiently as the wealthy man told about his 14 factories and how he was about to sell his empire for millions and retire. Carey Orr then asked him: "Who did you say you were?" "Why I'm Mr. X, president of such-and-such company." To this Orr replied: "And, who will you be after you sell out?" It left Mr. X with a blank expression.

Today status still is equated to current, rather than past, accomplishments. If retirement is inevitable, anticipate loss of prestige. The best solution is to plan ahead by acquiring different skills, hobbies, and avocation.

STAMP COLLECTING or photography helps, but it may not be enough. Leisure should be productive to avoid the pitfalls of retirement. Time spent in this way should not be confused with relaxation. Above all, cultivate a sense of humor. It is invaluable in offsetting the consequences of being busy doing nothing and an asset at any age.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

SEDATIVE HANGOVER

Miss R. writes: Do sleeping pills affect the mind the next day? A friend of mine who uses them has hallucinations at times.

REPLY

Sedative hangover from certain types of drugs usually consists of drowsiness, headache and depression. Prolonged use or abuse of barbiturates may induce irritability, confusion and a host of neurological symptoms. Hallucinations are most unusual after taking sedatives.

CAVITIES IN BABY TEETH

Mrs. R. W. writes: If cavities develop in baby teeth should they be pulled or filled?

REPLY

Filled unless they are about to fall out. Baby teeth should be preserved if, for no other reason, than to act as space retainers until the permanent set comes in. Consult your dentist. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on dental caries.

WOOL FAT

K. R. writes: Is lanolin the same as cholesterol?

REPLY

Not exactly, in that lanolin (hydrous wool fat) contains cholesterol and other fatty acids.

INFECTED KIDNEY

Y. G. writes: I have an infected kidney. Can I transmit these germs to my family?

REPLY

No. Kidney disease is not contagious.

Man Who Set Airport Fire Sent To Prison

William Phillip Nance, 20, of Santa Rosa, convicted of setting a $250,000 fire at Gnoss Field last October, was sentenced to state prison yesterday by Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court.

Nance had been found guilty by a jury of arson and burglary in connection with the fire at the Marin County Airport north of Novato. The jury also found him to have been sane at the time of the crimes.

The fire, last Oct. 25, destroyed the Spectrum Air building and the Blue Yonder coffee shop, as well as a $150,000 executive aircraft leased by Willaim Penn Patrick, San Rafael cosmetics manufacturer. Patrick had loaned the plane to former Sen. George Murphy for his unsuccessful reelection campaign.

Prison Escapees Set For Trial

Trial has been set for the week of May 24 in Marin Superior Court for Gary Edward Atwood, 34, and Eugene P. Waymire, 33, charged in connection with an escape from San Quentin Prison Feb. 13.

They have pleaded innocent to charges of escape, car theft, burglary and assault with a deadly weapon.

The pair was captured near Indian Valley Golf Club outside Novato Feb. 14 after they allegedly burglarized and stole a truck from a San Rafael pool supply firm.

Wheel Stops At Ohio For Blossom Queen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The spinning wheel of states stopped at Ohio and Christina Ann Schuler, 19, was chosen 1971 Cherry Blossom Queen.

Miss Schuler, a radio and television major at Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., will reign over the remaining two days of Cherry Blossom festivities. The Bellefontaine, Ohio, brunette will be officially crwoned today after a parade down historic Constitution Avenue.

Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton spun the Wheel of States Friday night in a traditional ceremony at the annual Cherry Blossom ball, which marks the start of the Washington spring social season.

Students Offer Rides For Needy

A group of San Rafael High School students will sponsor a horse and donkey ride tomorrow outside Point Reyes Station to benefit a needy family in Texas.

Rides will be given from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the area next to the West Marin Veterinary Center to raise money for the H.V. Holt Foundation. The group opened an account yesterday at Crocker Citizens Bank where donations can be made.

The family has two children that need to use a kidney machine and the high school group hopes to ease the heavy cost of the hospital bill by raising part of the money.

Kidney Group Needs Helpers

Volunteers are needed by the Marin County Chapter of the Kidney Foundation of Northern California, according to chapter officers.

Those interested may call Mrs. Roger Erickson, Mrs. H.S. Hall or Mrs. Lester Young.

The next meeting of the chapter, whose projects include purchase of equipment for kidney disease sufferers, will be at 7:30 p.m. April 12 at the San Rafael Improvement Club, Fifth Avenue and H Street.

Ambrosini Named Tomales Postmaster

Alice E. Ambrosini, who has been acting as postmaster for the Tomales Post Office, was officially named to the post yesterday by the Post Office Department.

Mrs. Ambrosini has worked for the post office for about 10 years. She is a Republican.

Crash Brings Arrest For Pot

A 22-year-old San Rafael woman was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday for investigation of possessing marijuana after she was involved in a minor accident southbound on Highway 101, south of Paradise Drive.

The California Highway Patrol reported Kathleen Adams, of 87 Marinita Avenue, was arrested about 12:15 a.m.

She was a passenger in a car involved in the accident and an officer noticed a plastic bag containing suspected marijuana in her open handbag, the highway patrol reported.

Miss Adams was released on her own recognizance, to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Deputies Arrest Naked Runner

A 17-year-old youth, reported running nude through a Nicasio field, was booked into Marin County Juvenile Hall Wednesday, Marin County Sheriff's Office reported yesterday.

Deputies said Scott Allan Martin, of no known address, was booked on suspicion of disturbing the peace and possessing Marijuana and dangerous drugs.

He was apprehended in a field near Halleck Creek Road, deputies said. His van, parked nearby, was found to contain suspected marijuana and various pills and powders, according to deputies.

All in a day's work . . .

We are in the business of reporting the news - what goes on in the community. The Novato Western Weekend is big news because it is a big event in Novato to which many contribute. If our reporting of it - plans, preparations and the big Weekend itself - helps this community celebration to succeed, we are delighted. Yet it's all in a day's work because we consider community news of importance to our readers.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, April 3, the 93rd day of 1971.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase. The morning stars are Venus, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Mercury and Saturn.

Those born on this day are under the sign of Aries.

American astronaut Virgil Grissom was born April 3, 1926.

On this day in history:

In 1860 the Pony Express postal service began with riders leaving St. Joseph, Mo., and Sacramento, Calif., at the same time.

In 1865 the Union Army occupied Richmond, Va., onetime capital of the Confederacy.

In 1946 Gen. Masaharu Homma of Japan, who ordered the "death march" of Americans captured in Bataan, was executed for war crimes.

In 1962 the federal government ordered New Orleans to integrate the first six grades of public schools.

A thought for today: British lecturer John Collins said, "Mistrust a subordinate who never finds fault with his superior."

Inmates Demand Minimum Wage

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (UPI)--Nearly 200 inmates at the California Men's Colony were confined to their cells Thursday after they went on strike demanding a $1.65 an hour minimum wage for prison work.

Officials said the prisoners, described as "mostly black militants," also demanded a new law library with unlimited privileges and legal counsel at prison disciplinary hearings.

"Everything they want is out of our jurisdiction," a prison spokesman said.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

South Can Be Polite And Still Pull Off Big Victory

A famous baseball player once said. "Nice guys finish last." This isn't quite true of bridge players. You can be pleasant and polite and finish 19th or thereabouts. If this is satisfactory, polish up your manners rather than your bridge game.

QUEEN WITH ACE

West opened the seven of hearts, and South captured the queen with the ace. He entered dummy with the king of clubs to try the spade finesse, losing to the king.

West led his other heart to the king, and East returned a diamond. Down one.

South was so polite he almost bowed from the waist. "A very pretty opening lead," South burbled. "Nobody can win against such accurate defense."

It was enough to make a bridge player sick. South would have made his contract if he had thought more about the hand and less about fancy compliments.

COMMUNICATIONS

The first trick made the heart position quite clear. If East had the king of spades in addition to his good heart suit he would have bid the hearts. In short, South should have seen exactly what was coming.

After winning the first trick, South should take the two black aces, next the king of clubs; and then should lead dummy's ten of clubs. When East is unable to cover the ten of clubs, South discards the ten of hearts.

DIAMOND ACTION

If West tries to get out with a diamond, South wins a trick with the king. If West leads a heart, South ruffs the king of hearts and gets to dummy with a trump to discard two diamonds on the jack and nine of hearts.

This efficient line of play would give East and West the chance to display their politeness. And South could show what a polite winner he could be.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one club, and the next player passes.

Aviation Group At Center Again

Marin aviation commissioners will begin meeting again in the supervisors' chambers of the Civic Center.

Chairman Herbert M. Hanson announced that the next meeting will be held at 8 p.m. next Tuesday at the Civic Center. During the five-month ban on night meetings at the Civic Center, the aviation commissioners met at Gnoss Field and in the Marin Municipal Water District office in Corte Madera.

Next Tuesday, commissioner David B. Vail will report on improvements being planned for the county heliport next to Richardson Bay Bridge. SFO Helicopters wants improvements made in the parking area and entrance road before the county starts collecting higher fees from SFO.

SPECIAL SERVICES

Tomorrow To Mark The Start Of Easter Week

Tomorrow begins one of the most important weeks in Christendom, concluding next Sunday with Easter.

Many churches will bless and distribute palms during services tomorrow — symbolic of Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem.

A feature of tomorrow's 11 a.m. Palm Sunday service at the First Baptist Church of San Anselmo will be the appearance of the Real Life Youth Chorale of the First Baptist Church of Lancaster.

The 55-voice high school choir is presently on a seven-day spring vacation tour. The group will present a program of sacred classics, gospel songs and golf songs.

At Church of All Faiths in Corte Madera, the Men's Choir, a two-year-old organization, will present special music at the 10:30 a.m. service.

Also many churches will join together on Good Friday to share the experience of the Cross. One of these services will be held at the Christian Church, 50 Los Ranchitos Road in San Rafael, beginning at 12:45 p.m.

Theme of service, sponsored by four churches in the area, will be "Thoughts on the Cross." Speakers will be pastors of the sponsoring churches — Rev. Sam Walberg, Evangelical Free Church; Rev. Warren Conrad, Valley Baptist Church; Rev. Charles Boman, Christian Church, and Rev. Bill Brown, Calvary Baptist Church.

Good Friday meditations will be held at 1 p.m. at Peace Lutheran Church, Tennessee Valley Road, Mill Valley. An open invitation has been extended by the church's pastor, Rev. Kenneth W. Behnken, who will lead the service.

Following is a partial listing of Easter Week Services at churches in Marin.

First Presbyterian Church, Novato — Easter; services at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. with Rev. D. M. Rayment speaking on "New Men on the March."

St. Francis Episcopal Church, Novato — Palm Sunday: Holy Eucharist with blessing of the palms, 8 and 10 a.m.; Maundy Thursday; Holy Eucharist, 10 a.m. and Holy Eucharist and stripping of the altar, 7 p.m.; Good Friday: morning prayer and ante-communion, 10 a.m. with joint three-hour service beginning at noon at Episcopal Church in Ignacio; evening prayer and stations of the cross, 8 p.m.; Holy Saturday: morning prayer and ante-communion, 10 a.m. and blessing of the Paschal candle and Holy Baptism, 7 p.m.; Easter: sunrise eucharist, 6 a.m.; Holy Eucharist, 8 a.m.; choral eucharist and sermon, 9:15 and 11 a.m.

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, San Rafael — Palm Sunday: blessing of the palms and Holy Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: Holy Eucharist and stripping of the altar; Good Friday: noon to 3 p.m. service; Easter Even: lighting of the Paschal candle and Holy Baptism, 4 p.m.; Easter: services at 7, 9 and 11 a.m.

Lutheran Church of the Resurrection, San Rafael — Good Friday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Easter: Holy Communion and special choral music, 9:45 a.m.

Trinity Lutheran Church, San Rafael — Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Good Friday: services beginning at 1 p.m. with Holy Communion; Easter: services at 8:45 and 11 a.m. with Holy Communion and special choral music.

Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur — Palm Sunday: services at 9:30 and 11 a.m. with Rev. William N. Johnson speaking on "A Captive World"; Maundy Thursday: a contemporary service, concluding with a Tenebrae, 8 p.m.; Good Friday: Rev. Joseph Hughes, pastor of the Church of All Faiths, Corte Madera, will speak on "God's Friday", 1 p.m.; Easter: sunrise service at Church of All Faiths, 6:30 a.m.; regular services at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. with Johnson speaking on "About a Distracting Conservation."

Methodist Church of Mill Valley — Palm Sunday: breakfast, 8:45 a.m. with sanctuary service, 11 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: Holy Communion, 8 p.m.; Good Friday, no special service; Easter Sunday: family service, 9:30 a.m. and special Easter celebration, 11 a.m.

Church of All Faiths, Corte Madera — Palm Sunday: special music by the men's choir, 10:45 a.m.; Maundy Thursday: candlelight communion service, 7:30 p.m.; Good Friday: community service, Redwoods Presbyterian Church, 1 p.m.; Easter: community sunrise service with breakfast, 6:30 a.m.; service, 10:30 a.m.

OF GOD AND MAN

What Is The Best Evangelism Type?

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

In his last conversation with his disciples, Jesus Christ urged them not to treat their faith as a private treasure but to share it with men of all nations.

Some Christians still take very seriously this final instruction of their Lord. They attach high importance to the task of disseminating the good news of the gospel as far and wide as possible.

Others, however, seem to feel it is no longer necessary, and perhaps not even good manners, to tell non-Christians about Christ. They ask: "Why should we try to cram our religion down the throats of people who already have a religion of their own?"

If the question were valid in that form, it would be unanswerable. But it is loaded with three serious misapprehensions.

The first is the assumption that all or most non-Christians "already have a religion of their own." In point of fact, "there are hundreds of millions of human beings on earth today who are not firmly rooted in any religious faith, and are seeking, with varying degrees of desperation, to find some world view that will make sense of their lives.

The second misapprehension is reflected in the phrase, "our religion." Christianity is not a tribal possession of western white men. It originated among Semites of the Middle East, but was intended from the start to be a universal faith. If its earliest adherents had been as chary of "exporting our religion" as some contemporary Christians are, the inhabitants of Western Europe, and their American descendants, might still be worshipping Zeus, Apollo, Worden or Thor.

The third and worst error concerns the nature of the task which Jesus laid upon his disciples. They were not asked to bully, browbeat or brainwash anyone. They were simply to make known to others the profound change that had taken place in their own lives —and in their attitude toward life — as a result of their encounter with Christ.

Dr. David H. C. Read, minister of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York, points out that Jesus strongly condemned the arrogant and high-handed kind of prosletyzing that consists of "grabbing somebody by the throat and shouting, 'Now you look here, I've got the whole truth, and unless you accept my truth you will be condemned by God.'"

Admitting that some Christians have taken exactly that approach, he says, "It is this kind of religious imperialism that has given evangelism a bad name."

"The true evangelist forswears all attempts at pressure, physical or psychological," Read says. "He is not concerned with enlarging the membership or influence of his own church. He simply knows what Christ has meant to him and wants to share this happy discovery with others."

But a sensitive concern for the religious freedom of others is not the only reason why some Christians have ceased to practice or support evangelism.

A more basic hangup in many cases is lack of conviction that Christ really is "the way, the truth and the life" which all men are seeking.

Those who have personally experienced liberation in Christ are eager to assure others that it's for real. The faith of such first-hand witnesses can be highly contagious. It is the best —and perhaps the only genuine —form of evangelism.

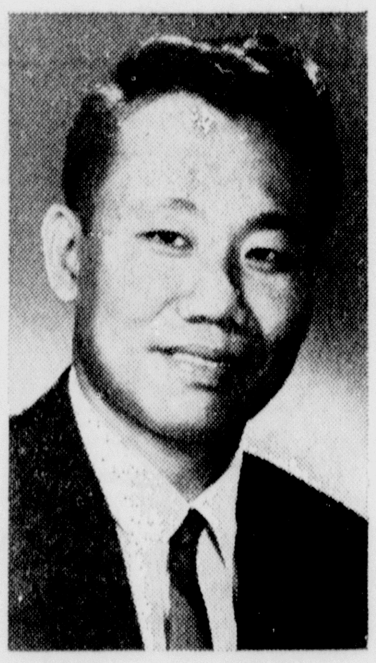
Lutheran Synod Church Rents New Quarters

The Church of the Living Word has rented facilities at the Church in Ignacio, 400 Ignacio Boulevard, for regular Sunday vesper services.

The group, a mission of the Wisconsin Evangelical Lutheran Synod, had been meeting at the Bank of Marin in Novato.

The first service in the new quarters will be Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Armin Keibel of Concord will be the speaker.

Services are conducted on a rotational basis by Keibel, Rev. Robert Waldschmidt of Belmont and Rev. Robert Hochmuth and Vicar John Boehringer, both of Santa Clara.



SOLOIST— Rev. Tjoen An Thio, pastor of the First Southern Baptist Church in Mill Valley, will be one of three soloists for John Stainer's "The Crucifixion," by the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary Oratorio Choir at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in John A. Broadus Hall Chapel.

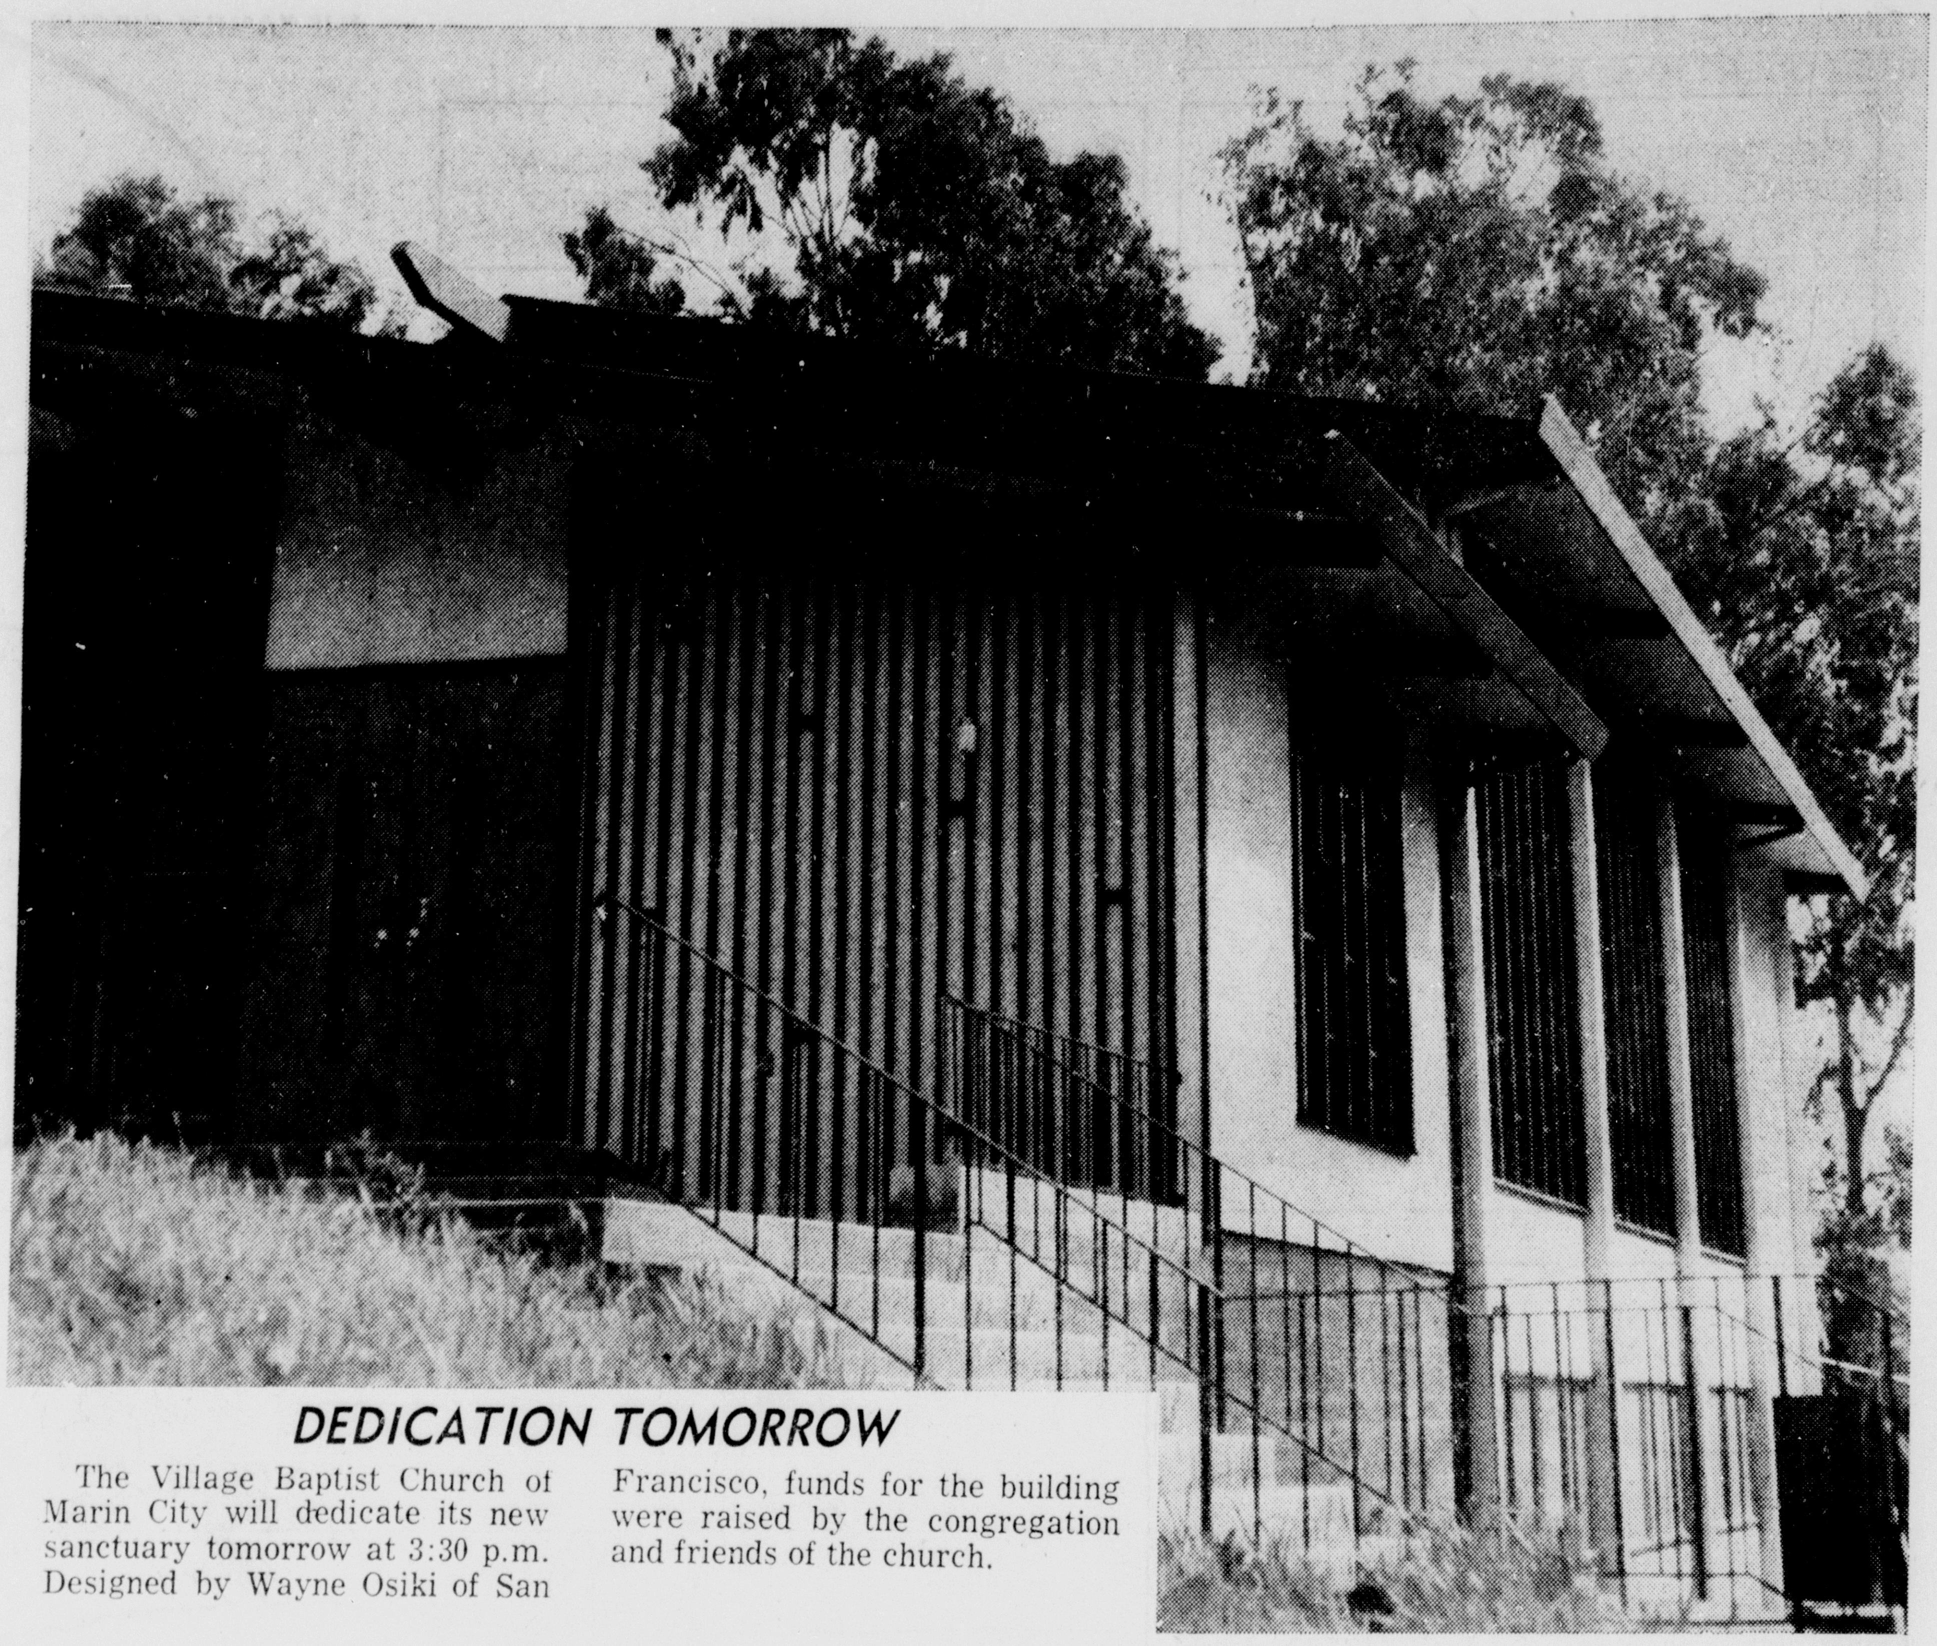
'Seven Last Words' To Be Presented

"The Seven Last Words" by Dubois will be presented at 8 p.m. Good Friday by the chancel choir of the United Methodist Church of Novato.

Soloists will be Mrs. John Davis and Mrs. Harold Wright, sopranos; John Davis and Don Pearce, tenors, and Steven Darling, baritone.

Easter Breakfast

The First Congregational Church, 8 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael, will hold a public pancake breakfast next Sunday — Easter Sunday, between 8:30 and 9:45 a.m.



DEDICATION TOMORROW

The Village Baptist Church of Marin City will dedicate its new sanctuary tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. Designed by Wayne Osiki of San Francisco, funds for the building were raised by the congregation and friends of the church.

Church Packing Up For Indiana Move

ROSEMEAD, Calif. (UPI) — The 300 members of the congregation of the San Gabrien Gospel Temple are going home to Evansville, Ind.

"We've been giving thought to this move to Indiana for nearly two-and-one-half years," Pastor C. J. Mears, 47, said recently.

One church member explained "we've kind of tired of the hustle and bustle," smog and problems at public schools.

However, Mears said neither earthquakes nor divine revelations prompted the move. He said a major reason was to strengthen the gospel assembly movement, which was founded in the Evansville, Ind., area about 55 years ago.

To accomplish the move, members of the congregation are leaving behind jobs, friends and a 500-seat church building constructed by members 10 years ago.

"We're all kind of anxious to get back to a spot of land large enough where you can grow vegetables where there is a slower atmosphere, and where many of our relatives live," one congregation member said. The actual move is expected to begin in two or three months.

Mears said the decision to leave was almost unanimous and was made after weeks of prayer and periodic fasting.

Three years ago some 500 persons from five southern and central California congregations moved to Missouri, Tennessee and Georgia after their pastors saw visions of earthquakes.

Old Testament Course Going; Ends June 16

The College of Marin is offering a new course in the adult education spring quarter entitled "Understanding the Old Testament". The class is meeting Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. in Room 3, Communications Building, beginning March 31st.

Course content is based on the historical and philosophical foundations and present day implications of the Bible, including the Pentateuch, Prophets, Psalms, and Eccleias. These will be explored academically and in depth.

The course is intended as the first of a series designed to broaden public scholarly appreciation of a full range of scriptural writing, according to Dr. Jared B. Sharon, director of community education.

A fee is being charged for the sessions, ending June 16.

The Covered Dish Social—Law Breaker

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Covered dish suppers may be a traditional American social event, but any church or other public organization which holds one in Maryland is breaking the law.

State health officials decided bringing in food from many homes was unsanitary and too difficult to trace when there was a case of food poisoning. Organizations are now urged to have meals prepared in licensed kitchens.

Crusade worker

Plans For Crusade To Be Given

Robert L. Jones, advance worker for Billy Graham's summer crusade at the Oakland Coliseum, will speak on plans for the crusade tomorrow at 11 a.m. at the First Baptist Church of Mill Valley, 285 Miller Avenue.

Jones, who has been with the Graham organization since 1968, formerly was a salesman and district manager for the Carnation Company in San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland.

Graham's crusade is scheduled for July 23-Aug. 1.

RABBI WILL LECTURE AT DOMINICAN

Dominican College of San Rafael has announced that Rabbi David Davis of Marin's Congregation Rodef Sholom will join the college's Theology Department next year.

According to Lillian Seaver of the school, Davis will be the first rabbi ever to teach at the college during the regular school year.

She said he is scheduled to teach old testament literature and Contemporary Jewish Religious Thought in 1971-72 and An Introduction to Rabbinic Writings and An Introduction to the Dead Sea Scrolls in 1972-73.

Passover Seder Set Next Saturday

Congregation Rodef Sholom will observe the Passover Seder next Saturday at 6:30 p.m. with services in the social hall of the Temple, 117 North San Pedro Road, San Rafael.

Conducting the services will be Rabbi David Davis. He will be assisted by Mrs. David Krinitsky who will lead the Passover singing.

TOO LATE — San Rafael High second baseman Bruce Howard applied the tag too late to Terra Linda runner Gary Trono, who stole second on the play in the seventh inning. It was Trono's second stolen base of the game, and moments afterward he scored the winning run, 5-4, at San Rafael's Albert Park.

A 375-FOOT BLAST

Terra Linda Rallies, 5-4

Larry Kerr slammed a 375-foot single that brought Rick Trono home from third base in the bottom of the seventh yesterday to give the Terra Linda High School Trojans a 5-4 victory over San Rafael in a Marin County Athletic League baseball game at Albert Park.

Kerr's blast, his first hit of the day, soared over the head of Bulldog centerfielder Dirk Gansloser and gave the Trojans their second victory in as many MCAL games. It was also the second straight win for pitcher Scott Seefeldt, who retired the final seven of eight men he faced in relief of starter Mike Sabel.

Seefeldt, who shut out Redwood on Tuesday, came on with the bases loaded and two out in the fifth, after San Rafael had tied the socre with a pair of runs on two errors and an infield hit. The big righthander lost the first man he saw, Gansloser, who singled infield to bring the lead run home, but he got Holt Greene on a fly to left and took command thereafter.

Kerr, the MCAL's all-league first baseman, had not hit the ball out of the infield his first three times up, but he unloaded on the first pitch he saw from Mike Spezzi and ruined an otherwise sterling performance by the Bulldog reliever. Spezzi went through the fifth and sixth innings without being touched, and set down seven consecutive batters before the roof caved in.

There were only two extra base hits in the game, Kerr's blow notwithstanding, but they both produced runs. San Rafael rightfielder Holt Greene belted a triple in the top of the fourth to be precise spot where Kerr was to hit his later, and it scored Bruce Howard from first base. In the bottom of that inning, Mike Allen laced one between them in leftcenter and Jerry Seefeldt scored the second run of the inning for the Trojans.

San Rafael's Dave Urquhart was the only player to get two hits. He singled twice, scored once and batted in a run.

Rookies May Create New Fans For Giants

Palm Springs — Horace Stoneham believes the Giants will make a strong attendance comeback at Candlestick Park this season.

"We're going to be all right," said Stoneham. "We'll do a million at the gate."

The president of the Giants, an exceptionally keen analyst of the attitudes of sports fans, wasn't that optimistic two months ago. In fact, at a stockholders meeting Feb. 11 he made a somewhat gloomy report.

At that meeting of the baseball club's stockholders, Stoneham reported a $798,000 operating loss for 1970 and attributed it directly to low attendance at Candlestick, 740,720, down from 873,603 in 1969. He also told stockholders that he didn't foresee any improvement for 1971.

"Real estate has to be our salvation," Stoneham summed up his annual stockholders report, referring to real estate holdings of the club in Casa Grande and between the twin cities of Minneapolis-St. Paul.

What caused Stoneham to change his evaluation of the situation? What facts did he have indicating a change in attitude of bay area sports fans who didn't display enthusiastic interest in the Giants the past two seasons?

Stoneham cited two facts: (1) A sharp increase in ticket sales for opening day in Candlestick April 12; (2) a telephone call he received from an old Giant fan in New York.

"I had no idea he even heard of Stone or Speier but he was as excited about them as we have been," Stoneham said. "I asked him where he had heard about the two rookies and he reported they were getting quite a play in the New York sports pages."

Stoneham didn't belabor the point he made but the logical inference was clear — if Steve Stone and Chris Speier could stimulate the interest of an old Giant fan in New York they at least have created some curiosity among Giant fans beside the Golden Gate.

Stone is the rookie pitcher out of Kent State. Speier is the rookie shortstop out of Alameda. Both have been sensations in Cactus League games this spring.

"We know nothing about this game if we're not right about these young men," said Stoneham.

Nobody would ever accuse Stoneham of not knowing the game of baseball or talented players. However, Stoneham isn't the only baseball man who expects big things from the S&S rookies this year. Every major league scout who has seen them feels the same way about the S&S potential.

Peter Hoffman views the S&S combination differently. Hoffman is ticket manager of the Giants. He sees dollar signs in the S&S gate potential like this: $&$.

Olivares Grabs Bantam Crown

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI)—Ruben Olivares, a slugger who turned boxer, today resumed his reign as bantamweight champion of the world after pounding out a 15-round unanimous decision Friday night over Mexican countryman Chucho Castillo.

Fighting a tactical battle in which he forced Castillo to come to him, Olivares used a jolting left hook to pile up a one-sided margin over the man who lifted his crown last Oct. 16.

But it was Castillo, known as a boxer, who scored the only knockdown of the fight. In the sixth round, he caught Olivares coming in for one of the few times and dropped him with a left. Olivares bounced up at once but took a mandatory eight count.

A crowd of 18,141, which paid $254,155 to witness the bout at the Forum, sensed late in the bout that Castillo was about to lose his title. They chanted Olivares' name.

"I was never worried during the fight," Olivares said with his usual happy smile in his dressing room. "I was completely confident."

It was the third title meeting for Castillo and Olivares. In their first fight, April 18, 1970, Castillo also posted a 15-round decision.

In their October meeting, Olivares suffered a cut left eye in the first round and the fight was halted in the 14th by excessive bleeding.

"We planned to fight Castillo at long range, not because we feared him, but Olivares didn't want to risk another eye cut," said manager Arturo Hernandez.

Castillo received $80,000 for his first title defense while Olivares, who had the big end of the purse in their first two meetings, settled for a challenger's cut of $30,000.

GREENSBORO GOLF TOURNEY

Barber, Brown Share Lead

GREENSBORO, N. C. (UPI)—Pete Brown gazed forlonly at the open door. "Now that I've shot a 69 and am ahead, look at it rain."

A short time later, Miller Barber trudged in with a 70 to tie Brown for the lead and the icy downpour continued.

It rained hard all afternoon, cloaking Sedgefield Country Club in a wintry gloom but the round was completed and no one could match them. Brown and Barber saw their five-under-par 137s stand up for the second round lead of the Greater Greensboro Open as challenger after challenger fell back on the soggy greens.

But the co-leaders held only a one-stroke advantage over Jerry Hard and Terry Dill going into today's third round. Hard shot a three-under-par 67 Friday and Dill chalked up a 68.

Ten others were at 139, including Lee Trevino and Bob Charles, who shared the first round lead with Barber. Playing at the height of the storm, Trevino and Charles each had one-over-par 72s. Also at 139 were Australian Bruce Crampton, U. S. Open champion Tony Jacklin, who got one eagle and just missed a second for a 69 Friday, and rookie pro Brian "Bud" Allin, whose seven-under-par 64 was the tournament's best round.

Art Wall, Julius Boros and Dave Stockton were among the group at 141 and defending champion Gary Player was at 145. Billy Casper, who defends his Masters title next week, barely made the cut with a 146, four over par and nine shots off the pace.

Jack Lewis, the former amateur star, trailed the first round leaders by only a single shot but failed to make the cut when he took a 10 on the par 5 ninth hole—including a two-stroke penalty for hitting a moving ball—and wound up with an 83-151.

Despite the deluge, 38 golfers broke par.

Brown, who hasn't won since last year's San Diego Open, had an erratic round. He sank six birdie putts, including two 15-footers, but he also was saddled with four bogeys.

Rancho Cotate Downs Sonoma

Shortstop Ron Sproat singled home two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning yesterday to give the Rancho Cotate High School Cougars an 8-7 North Bay II League baseball victory over Sonoma High at Rohnert Park.

The victory was the second straight for the Cougars in league play. They play starting today in the Healdsburgh Invitational Easter Tournament.

Explosive Novato Rally Defeats San Marin, 9-3

Judnick's Bat Leads The Way

The explosive nature of the Novato High School Hornets was vented yesterday by a seven run rally in the sixth inning that carried them from behind to a 9-3 win over San Marin High in a baseball game between crosstown rivals in Novato.

The Hornets staked the Mustangs to a three run lead in the fifth before beginning the seige that led to their second straight Marin County Athletic League victory. San Marin now has a loss to go with a tie against Marin Catholic on Tuesday.

Novato cranked out 11 hits, three by leftfielder Dave Judnick and six of them in the fateful sixth inning, and Hornet pitcher Jeff deRecat held San Marin to just four hits while going the distance for the win. DeRecat was wild, walking seven, but it didn't hurt him much, and he had plenty of energy left at the end.

San Marin financed its three run rally with two hits — by Rick Jensen and Jim Thompson — a pair of walks and an error. The Hornets, during their rampage, just plain cracked the ball. The crushing blow was a bases-loaded and bases-clearing double by John Kidder. It was his only hit of the day, but he finished with four runs batted in.

Judnick had opened the sixth with a double and was singled home by Dennis Stanley, who in turn was singled home by Art Herrnberger. Kidder scored after his double on a single by Bill Busher, and Busher scored when Judnick came up for his second time in the inning and hit a sacrifice fly.

All the Hornets' runs were earned and came off San Marin starter Greg Mazeres. He hasn't seen a great deal of work this spring, and consequently became tired in the late going, after looking good through the fourth inning.

Drake Wins A Thriller Over Tam

The fortunes of Drake High School's baseball team fluctuated like a risky stock yesterday until the final inning, when the Pirates came up with two runs and defeated the Tamalpais High Indians, 8-6 in a Marin County Athletic League game at Mill Valley.

John Billings, who started the game on the mound and finished in the outfield, redeemed the Pirates by scoring the winning run after Tam had swept away a four run Drake lead the previous inning. The victory evened Drake's MCAL won-lost record at 1-1, and dropped the Indians to 0-2.

Drake began with a bang in the fourth inning, scoring five times off Indian ace Mike Johnson. Billings, who began the winning rally with a single, started that inning with a walk, moved to second on a single by Al Curtiss, and scored along

Marathon: Redwood Outlasts Marin '9'

The Redwood High School Giants parlayed a leadoff double by Scott Berry and some sloppy fielding by Marin Catholic into the run that broke a 1-1 tie in the top of the 11th inning last night and led them to a 3-1 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory at Albert Park in San Rafael.

The outcome, which evened Redwood's MCAL record at a win and a loss, spoiled a monumental performance by Wildcat righthander Mickey Simmons, who went all the way, allowed only four hits, and struck out 12. Coming on the heels of Tuesday's 12-inning, scoreless tie with San Marin, when Tom Olson went the distance for Marin and struck out 19, the Kentfield team's pitching staff may well wonder if maybe the rest of the team is conspiring against them. After all, one run in 23 innings isn't exactly offensive fireworks.

The victory went to big John Moresco, who pitched the last three innings, albeit not without some tense moments. In the ninth he found himself facing Olson, one of the better hitters in the league, with two outs and the bases loaded. He missed with two pitches before firing a strike, but then threw two more strikes and was out of trouble.

Moresco's relief job, good as it was, didn't outshine the work of starter Gene Frey, a sophomore, who went the first eight. He struck out seven and, except for the lone run off him, didn't seem much bothered by Marin batters. He retired because he was tired, not because he was in trouble.

Berry, hitless in three at bats before the 11th, lined his double up the alley in right center. The next batter, sophomore Darrell Edralin, hit back to Simmons, who, hastily trying for Berry at third, threw the ball into the leftfield corner, and the winning run scooted home.

A little unneeded insurance was added subsequently when Bob Brown scored on a passed ball. Moresco set the Wildcats

UCLA Ace Wicks Signs: $2 Million?

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—"Yes, it simply was a matter of dollars and cents," said UCLA's Sidney Wicks, the big man with the soft voice and now large wallet following his signing of a five-year contract with the Portland Trail Blazers of the National Basketball Association.

"I really didn't have much preference one way or the other with regard to the NBA or the American Basketball Association," said Wicks at the formal Friday afternoon news conference here to announce he is "officially now a Trail Blazer."

Texas of the ABA, he said, made a final offer, and Portland made a final offer.

"The Portland offer was the best for me, and I took it," he said.

Wicks followed the advice of Sam Gilbert, his agent and Los Angeles businessman and UCLA alum who helped Lew Alcindor with his negotiations at Milwaukee.

Portland general manager Harry Glickman said of the Wicks' signing, "He has received as good advice from Sam Gilbert as any player ever to come into professional basketball."

Terms of the Portland deal with Wicks were not revealed, but better estimates indicate Portland put $1.5 to $2 million in its package deal with the Bruin superstar.

Portland, in signing Wicks the same week he was drafted, preserved some prestige for the NBA, which is in a signing battle with the ABA. The newer league already has signed Artis Gilmore, Howard Porter, and Jim McDaniels from this year's crop of college stars. The NBA has landed Wicks and Ken Durrett from LaSalle thus far.

Wicks said he was looking forward to playing for Roland Todd, who tried to recruit Wicks for University of Nevada-Las Vegas when Wicks finished at Santa Monica City College. But Wicks went to UCLA instead to help continue Bruin dominance of college basketball.

San Rafael, Tam Trackmen Lead Marin League Race

Tamalpais and San Rafael high school track and field teams both coasted to easy victories in Marin County Athletic League meets yesterday to lead the standings with 3-0 won-lost recores. Tam crushed Novato, 96-27, while San Rafael pounded Marin Catholic, 100-35.

In other league meets, Terra Linda romped over San Marin, 101-34, while Redwood demolished Drake, 119-14.

The Tam Indians were led by all-around superstar Gerald Robertson, who collected three victories, in the 120-yard high hurdles, the 180 low hurdles, and the high jump. His high hurdle time of 15 seconds ranks as the league's best so far this year.

San Rafael got a triple win from its top athlete, Paul Crovo, who nabbed the 100 and 220-yard dashes and long jump. In the 100, Crovo sprinted to a 10.2 seconds time, tying the fastest time in the league thus far.

The San Rafael 440 relay team improved its best effort by .2, down to a league-leading 44.5.

Terra Linda's leading jumper, sophomore Mark Lowey, took the high hurdles, high jump, and triple jump, to lead Trojan scorers. San Marin's middle distance star, Chakra Chappell took two of his specialties, the 440 and 880, to pace the Mustangs.

Boccabella Cracks Homer As Montreal Expos Romp

By United Press International

A change of uniform seems to have worked wonders for Ron Swoboda.

The outspoken outfielder, traded by the New York Mets to Montreal Thursday, made his first day in a Expo uniform a memorable one as he smashed a home run and 380-foot sacrifice fly in an 18-5 rout of the Pittsburgh Pirates "B" team. (Catcher John Boccabella of San Anselmo also homered for Montreal.)

Swoboda, dealt away after criticizing Mets' Manager Gil Hodges last season, produced a run in his first at-bat with a long fly. The ball would have easily been a home run in Montreal's home field—Jarry Park. He later homered to left field.

Rusty Staub had a pair of homers for the Expos and Montreal broke open the game with an eight-run assault against rookie Mike Everett in the ninth.

In other action Friday, Houston beat the New York Yankees 2-1 and then downed the Minnesota Twins 5-3 in a 15-inning round robin game at the Astrodome. The Astros touched Minnesota's Stan Williams for five runs in the second inning to take the second game.

Carlos May drove in three runs with a single and a triple to lift the Chicago White Sox to a 9-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs. The White Sox ripped Ferguson Jenkins, expected to start for the Cubs in their opener next week, for 10 hits and nine runs.

Merv Rettenmund, Clay Dalrymple and Paul Blair homered to highlight a 13-hit attack that carried the Baltimore Orioles to a 12-2 romp past the New York Mets. Dalrymple's homer followed a single by Dave Johnson in the eighth and Blair added a three-run shot in the ninth. Tommie Agee homered for the Mets.

Rick Monday hit a solo homer and the Oakland Athletics touched 20-game winner Sam McDowell for four runs en route to a 5-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Richie Hebner drove in six runs with a two homers and a single to pace the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 12-0 rout of the Cincinnati Reds.

Hal King and Marty Perez drove in three runs each and the Atlanta Braves survived three Washington homers to beat the Senators 10-6. King had three singles and a sacrifice fly after a pre-game hitting lesson from rival manager Ted Williams while Mike Epstein, Dick Billings and Frank Howard homered for the Senators.

The California Angels pushed across two runs in the last of the 11th inning to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3.

NBA PLAYOFFS

Warriors To Try Another 'Miracle'

MADISON, Wisc. (UPI) — Many people didn't believe the San Francisco Warriors would be returning to Wisconsin for a fifth playoff game with the Milwaukee Bucks.

With four seconds remaining in the fourth game Thursday night, it was almost a certainity that the Warriors' season was over, but Joe Ellis gave the Warriors a new life as they broke a 12-game losing streak to the Bucks, 106-104.

Ellis calmly swished a 43-foot jump shot to give the Warriors a 105-104 lead with one second left to play. Jeff Mullins added a technical foul shot when Milwaukee called a time out they didn't have.

The Bucks had taken the lead, 104-103, with four seconds left on a baseline jumper by Oscar Robertson.

Now the Warriors meet the Bucks in the fifth game of the best-of-seven series Sunday afternoon in the University of Wisconsin fieldhouse at Madison.

In addition to Ellis' unbelievable shot Thursday, the Warriors got a 32-point performance from Jerry Lucas, a career high of 19 rebounds from Mullins and a tough game by Nate Thurmond, who usually plays his best against Lew Alcindor.

The Bucks now have been shocked into the reality that they can be beaten by the Warriors. San Francisco, which lost nine previous games to Milwaukee this season, now knows the impossible can be done.

But if the Warriors expect to return to Oakland for a sixth game Tuesday, they will need another super performance and possibly another life-saving shot like Ellis' 43-footer.

In other NBA playoff action this weekend, the Baltimore Bullets and Philadelphia 76ers squared off today and the Los Angeles Lakers battle the Chicago Bulls in Chicago tomorrow.

Baltimore, holding a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series, was out to clinch a berth in next week's Eastern Conference series with the New York Knicks who eliminated Atlanta, 4-1.

Los Angeles holds a 3-2 lead over Chicago and will be out to gain a berth in the playoffs against the Milwaukee-San Francisco winner. The Los Angeles-Chicago game tomorrow will be televised by channels 7, 11 and 13 starting at 11 a.m., PST. The San Francisco-Milwaukee game will be broadcast by Radio KNEW (910) also at 11 a.m.

In the seventh, Billings moved to second on a single by Curtiss, and stormed home when Tam second baseman Tom Collins couldn't handle a ground ball off the bat of Dave DeMoss. Lex Rzepelia, the winning pitcher, singled to drive in Curtiss with the final tally.

Tam used two bases loaded hits — a single by Lea and a triple by centerfield Clifford Hall, to account for the fifth inning eruption that tied the score at 6-6 and nearly turned the tide.

Hall, an odds-on candidate for all-league honors, led all players with three hits and three runs batted in, while a trio of Drake players — Steve Hale, Jit Singh and Curtiss had two hits each.

The Pirates racked Johnson for 10 hits; they were all singles however, and coach Dick Creighton acknowledged that his team really didn't rough up the Indian righthander that bad.

Rzepelia, the loser in Drake's game against Novato on Tuesday, worked the final inning and a third yesterday and was credited with the win. He struck out four and walked none.

Henderson Bat Hero For Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) —In a way, the San Francisco Giants will have their 1971 home opener today.

The Giants don't officialy open the new season until Tuesday night at San Diego, but they meet the Tokyo Lotte Orions today at Candlestick Park in the first of a two-game weekend series that will wind up spring training for both clubs.

The Japanese Pacific League champions will be making the first appearance by a Japanese major league team in San Francisco.

The Giants walloped the University of Santa Clara Friday, 12-4, behind the sizzling bat of Ken Henderson.

Henderson got four of the Giants' 22 hits, including two doubles and a three-run home run. Outfielder George Foster also collected four hits in six tries and shortstop Chris Speier went three for four.

Righthander Rich Robertson pitched seven innings for the Giants, allowing all four Bronco runs. He was followed by Ron Bryant who blanked Santa Clara for two frames.

A's Ready For Opener

MESA, Ariz. (UPI) — The Oakland Athletics ended their spring training season today against the Cleveland Indians, then head for Washington for the 1971 Opening Day contest against the Senators.

The A's pounded 20-game winner Sam McDowell Friday and got some long-awaited relief pitching improvement to beat the Indians, 5-2.

Three relievers —Paul Lindblad, Bob Locker and Jim Rolland —all pitched one inning, allowing seven hits and giving up no walks.

The A's got to McDowell early when Rick Monday blasted a solo homer in the second inning. Pinch-hitter Gene Tenace led off the third with a double and scored on two groundouts.

In the sixth, Felipe Alou doubled and singles by Reggie Jackson and Don Mincher, an intentional walk to Sal Bando and a sacrifice fly by Monday brought in two more runs.

The Indians scored their first run in the second inning on singles by Ray Fosse and Chuck Hinton and Ted Ford's double. McDowell then homered in the fifth for the second run.

Seals End Sad Season

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The California Seals end their National Hockey League season tonight with a contest against the team just above them in the West Division standings.

For the Seals, who are in last place in their division, it will be the close of a dismal season when they meet the Los Angeles Kings.

California closed out its home season Friday night by losing to Vancouver, 6-2, enabling the Canucks to move up to seventh place in the East Division.

The loss gave the Seals a 17-21-1 home record. Their total home season attendance was 219,364 for an average of 5,625 per game.

BOWLING

Mrs. Asay, DeYoung Top List

Terry DeYoung and Sylvia Asay of San Rafael were the kingpins of Marin County bowling this past week.

DeYoung, 21-year-old left hander who rolled a 300 game two years ago at Nave Lanes in Ignacio, almost duplicated the feat across county at Greenbrae Lanes Wednesday. He rolled a 290 game after stringing out 10 strikes his middle game during California Trophy Traveling League action. The 290 was sandwiched between games of 178 and 238 for a 706 series.

Mrs. Asay, one of the top Marin County woman bowlers with her 180 blue book average, rolled a big 253 game and followed with 216 and 197 for a 666 set in the Nite Owlers League, also at Greenbrae Lanes.

The week's honor roll:

down in order in the bottom of the inning.

The score was tied as early as the sixth, when Brown knocked in Ray Judah with a sacrifice fly. Marin had gotten on the board for the first time in 15 innings of league play, when Don Bianchini scampered home on a ground out by Steve Sherry.

Bianchini was the only real offensive show of the game. He lashed a couple of singles, and could have had two more hits on line drives that were hit right at people. Edralin also had two singles, the only other player in the game with more than one hit.

BASEBALL TOURNAMENTS

Busy Week For Marinites

Next week will be a busy one for Marin County Athletic League high school baseball teams, but Marin itself will be deserted. The league's eight teams are traveling, as far north as Healdsburg and as far south as Soquel, Santa Cruz County, to play in six Easter tournaments.

The College of Marin Tars also will be involved in an Easter event. They play Monday and Tuesday in the Diablo Valley Invitational in Concord.

Three MCAL teams — Novato, Drake of San Anselmo and Terra Linda — will participate in the Santa Rosa Invitational beginning Monday, while the other five teams go their separate ways. In action beginning today, San Marin of Novato is at the Healdsburg Invitational, and San Rafael is at Crockett for the John Swett Invitational.

Two other tournaments begin Monday — Redwood of Larkspur plays in the Fresno Invitational, and Tamalpais of Mill Valley travels to Pacifica for the Terra Nova Invitational.

The lone remaining MCAL team, Marin Catholic of Kentfield, waits until next Thursday before sojourning to Soquel for the Soquel Invitational.

No MCAL games will be played next week, during the Easter vacation. League action will resume April 13.

Report On Aviation Pollution

OAKLAND (UPI)—Air pollution experts yesterday estimated that aviation-generated bad air in the San Francisco Bay Area now totals approximately 121 tons daily and may be up to 270 tons a day by 1985.

Chief Administrative Officer D. J. Callaghan of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District said the figures were based upon a 200-page report presented today to Association of Bay Area Governments (ABAG) representatives.

The study estimated the emission of air contaminants from aircraft and from ground activity related to aircraft for four time periods—present, 1975, 1980 and 1985.

"The estimates show an increase in aviation generated air pollution from a total of 121 tons per day at the present time, to 270 tons per day in 1985. If related ground activity is included, the figures become 138 tons per day now, versus 280 tons per day in 1985."

Callaghan said the study had taken 1,277 man-hours of staff time in preparation of the report.

"In view of the anticipated overall decrease in air pollution over the next 15 years," Callaghan said, "it is clear that aviation generated air pollution will become a far more significant portion of the total problem in years to come."

Callaghan said the technicians making the study had charted pollution potentials of various airports in the nine-county Bay Area.

"You will see there that we believe that Alameda Naval Air Station occupies a site with light air pollution potential, San Francisco International and Travis Air Force Base are between 'light' and 'moderate'; Oakland Airport is in the 'moderate' category; Hamilton Air Force Base is in the transitional zone between 'moderate' and 'heavy'; Fremont-Newark and Santa Rosa are registered 'heavy' and 'severe'; and Livermore is alone in the 'severe' category."

Board Hopefuls Set For Coffees

Coffee gatherings for two candidates for the San Rafael Board of Education have been scheduled for next week.

One for Richard E. West will be given at 2 p.m. Monday at the home of Ruth Ransdall of 217 Ridgewood Drive.

Scheduled by supporters of Philip E. Maley are coffees at 7 p.m. Monday at the home of Theresa Hancock, 11 Treanor Street, and at 5 p.m. Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Thomas of 15 Mountain View Avenue.

Forgery Trial Set

A jury trial has been set for the week of May 3 in Marin Superior Court for Louis Anthony Guise, 42, of Arnold, Calaveras County, who has pleaded innocent to a charge of passing a forged prescription at a Novato pharmacy Feb. 8.

Secretary's Name Omitted In Story

A line dropped in a story yesterday resulted in omission of the name of Anne Smith as the Marin Human Rights Department secretary who has resigned as of April 16.

Mrs. Smith told a fact-finding committee, which is looking into the cause and cure of squabbling that has plagued the department, that she was taking a higher paying job as secretary in Broadway Hospital, Vallejo.

Road Delay Report

A report on the reason for delays in finishing the widening of San Pedro Road will be given by Donald R. Frost, county public works director, to the San Rafael City Council at a meeting at 8 p.m. Monday.

Shakespeare Unit Has Fund Drive

A "Copper Penny" mail campaign is under way to raise money for the Marin Shakespeare Festival, according to Gordon F. Parr, board president.

Parr said that persons who respond to a mailed plea by making donations to the festival will be given old English copper pennies, now out of circulation.

They may either keep the pennies for souvenirs or turn them in at the box office for a 20 per cent discount on next season's shows.

In addition, the two largest donors will receive envelopes autographed by John Gielgud and Ralph Richardson carrying "first day cover" of the Shakespeare birthday stamp issued in 1964.

The word "vote" is from the Latin "votum," meaning a "vow or wish."

Judge Refuses To Allow Wigs For Reservists

NEW YORK (UPI)—A federal district court judge Friday refused to order the Army to allow three long-haired reservists to wear short-hair wigs to their drills.

The American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of the three reservists tried to overturn an Army regulation establishing three inches as the maximum length of a soldier's hair. Army regulations allow wigs only to cover baldness or physical disfiguration.

"You are asking me to make Army regulations, which I won't do," Judge Anthony J. Travia told ACLU attorney Joel Gora.

Gora said the reservists—Jeffrey Hoffman, 26, an art director; Mark Schwartz, 20, a student, and George Besdansky, 25, a social worker—may appeal the ruling.

THE WEEK'S BUSINESS

Signs Appear On Deflating Dollar

NEW YORK (UPI) —Signs appeared this week that the 1970-71 recession at last may be leading the free world towards deflation.

Britain cuts its "bank rate," its most important interest barometer from 7 per cent to 6 per cent and the West German Bundes-Bank also slashed its discount rate a point to 5 per cent. The British Government also announced it intends to cut corporate income and capital gains taxes substantially to spur business recovery.

These moves resulted in a general decline of the dollar in the European foreign exchange markets which caused the U.S. treasury to take the defensive step of seeking to sell $1.5 billion in dollar notes in European markets to soak up surplus Eurodollars.

Here at home, the rate of price inflation continued to ease rather dramatically. The index of wholesale price increases was up only 0.3 per cent in March, only half as much as in February.

The stock market was listless, moving only sideways and Dun & Bradstreet said retail trade was even with a year ago to up 4 per cent across the country on the average.

There were other indications of improvement in business conditions at the grass roots level. For example, the auto industry planned a 15 per cent increase in production for the second quarter.

Spokesmen for Detroit's Big Three seemed quite bullish about the industry's prospects for the year as they gathered for the opening of the international automobile show in New York's Coliseum.

More importantly, the government's index of economic barometers was disclosed to have moved up 0.6 per cent in February from the January level, and machine tools, one of the industries hardest hit by the recession, had a modest order gain in February. Factory orders made their fourth successive monthly gain in February, but the increase was only 0.5 per cent, compared with January's spurt of 1.7 per cent.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

The Editor's Notebook

Business Must Provide Own Complaint Remedy

IT IS CUSTOMARY these days when a problem arises to turn to some government agency for a solution.

For more than a generation, Better Business Bureaus across the country have been bending their efforts toward getting a square deal for consumers. Of late there has been much public outcry from people like Ralph Nader to get the government to do more and more to "protect the consumer."

When a customer gets less than his money's worth, we tend to assume he has been cheated, defrauded or deceived. This assumption leads us to the obvious conclusion that there ought to be more protective laws and tougher enforcement.

Last year the Better Business Bureau of San Francisco — which includes Marin County in its primary service area — studied 1,600 consecutive complaints and analyzed them carefully.

The results of this undertaking indicates that some of the aforementioned natural assumptions are incorrect.

OUTRIGHT MISREPRESENTATIONS accounted for only 13 per cent of the complaints. Non-delivery, guarantee or contract problems, and unsatisfactory service resulted in 59 per cent of complaints.

Adjustment difficulties, defective merchandise and other miscellaneous problems gave rise to the remaining 28 per cent of complaints.

The bureau's analysis and study showed that 70 per cent of complaints were resolved satisfactorily without resort to legal action.

From this survey, the bureau concluded that "most businesses are eager to keep customer dissatisfaction at a minimum" and that "business must continue to work to increase its efficiency and thereby lessen consumer dissatisfaction."

"INCREASE EFFICIENCY?" What does efficiency have to do with it?

Simply this: The company wants its customers to be satisfied but human error and other kinds of foul-ups too often combine to defeat the management's goals.

Inadequately informed employees and irresponsible employees sometimes are involved. A paperwork foulup in billing or shipping causes considerable customer dissatisfaction.

These areas where 60 per cent of dissatisfaction originates, cannot be controlled by law, by government, by rigorous policing from the outside. Business must improve its own delivery services. It must improve the quality and workmanship of its own products. It must find a way to deal with computer billing errors.

The Better Business Bureau does an effective job of getting action on these kinds of complaints. When government intervention is needed, the bureau refers complaints to appropriate authorities.

Incidentally, 13 per cent of all complaints filed with the Better Business Bureau of San Francisco during the period covered by the study originated with Marin residents.

WHO BRINGS COMPLAINTS to the bureau?

One might think it would be mostly people from the upper levels of the socio-economic scale who are better informed and educated.

But the Better Business Bureau study shows that the Tenderloin and the Mission districts — generally considered low-income neighborhoods — produced a high volume of complaints.

The survey did, however, "raise the serious question whether residents of problem areas or minority areas are sufficiently utilizing bureau services."

Obviously, the bureau must intensify its consumer education efforts, especially in these latter areas.

Since the overall job is one of encouraging business to improve its own efficienty — to eliminate its own unintentional foulups — the solution to most consumer complaints would seem to lie with the Better Business Bureau itself rather than with some government agency or the expenditure of more public funds.

Women Voters Score Again

The League of Women Voters, whose volunteer efforts for a better-informed electorate never cease to amaze us, has come out with a couple more useful publications.

This time it is the Central Marin league that scores, with a new edition of "Your County, Marin," and a handy four-page pamphlet, "Why, When and How To Write Your Legislator."

"Your County, Marin" is full of facts about the county and its government. It contains, for instance, a chart of the organizational chain of county government, which shows how all departments except those with elected department heads are grouped under the board of supervisors and county administrator.

Other charts show where the money goes. For instance, there is the distribution of property tax: 60.7 per cent to schools, 22.6 per cent to county government, 8.3 per cent to city government (the total for all 11 cities), 8.4 per cent for special districts.

The information in this booklet is as up-to-date as that in "Why, When and How To Write Your Legislator." Both are obtainable from the League of Women Voters of Central Marin, P.O. Box 2174, San Rafael 94902.

Photodegradable Plastics?

Plastics make up a large component of this country's solid waste disposal problem. The tough, durable qualities which make them fine for packaging and bottling render them a nightmare to dispose of. When household trash is returned to the earth in the normal way as land fill, plastics are forced to the surface. Then the top layer of ground must be bulldozed off and the plastics-filled soil eliminated.

A chemistry professor at the University of Birmingham, England, Gerald Scott, has discovered a group of substances which can be added to various plastics, causing them to disintegrate into a harmless powder that will be consumed by bacteria, after prolonged exposure to ultraviolet light.

The plastic gives warning of its impending breakdown by changing color, and its length of life can be controlled by the amounts of the substances put in it. Since ordinanry window glass filters out most ultraviolet light, one would not need be afraid that his plastics were going to fall apart as long as they are kept indoors.

This is a good example of technology being used to solve a problem that technology created.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BRICKBATS to striking San Francisco teachers, who put their grievances above the needs of children for education.

BOUQUETS to Dr. Patricia Hallinan for her untiring fight in behalf of battered children, and to Mrs. Evelyn Johnson of Novato, who produced 500 fliers and sent them to homes, urging support of Dr. Hallinan's effort and of AB 850 by Assemblyman Leo J. Ryan, D-South San Francisco, which would make such children wards of the juvenile court.

BRICKBATS to Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Marans and Mr. and Mrs. James L. Green of Tiburon for tying up Marin's courts with their seemingly endless neighborhood quarrel.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Role Of Judah In Early Railroad

In reference to a letter in your March 24 issue — and just to keep the record straight — save one of those brick bats!

Theodore Dehone (Crazy) Judah was engineer for constructing the Sacramento Valley Railroad, completed in 1855, but he never operated the line, as stated. The line was 22½ miles in length, not 21 and did not serve as a test but was built to cut a day's wagon-freighting time from Sacramento to the northern mines. Nor was its operation brief but lasted ten years until purchased in 1865 by the Central Pacific, the western portion of the transcontinental line, completed in 1869, not 1868.

Other wise the letter, as published, appears to have been substantially correct.

New First Aid Course Applauded

In reference to the story on page 24, March 26, regarding the Red Cross multimedia first aid course.

My daughter and several of her friends (in high school) participated in the first "civilian" presentation of this course on March 13. The class consisted of students and adults; 20 in this test class.

Although the girls have had first aid training in school and scouts, none had been able, because of school activities and homework, to participate in the regular six-week course.

They were most enthusiastic in the whole course — and each had her Red Cross certificate by 5 p.m. that day. My thanks and "bouquets" to the Red Cross for updating their training program. I hope more people will be able to avail themselves of this opportunity now.

Marin City Parents Reply To Criticism

As a group of 25 Marin City parents, we would like to respond to trustee Robert Thompson's criticism of our conduct at Sausalito School Board meetings.

The board has a duly elected chairman, Nat Johnson, who has functioned as chairman long enough to know when a meeting is out of order.

We resent the attempts by Thompson and other board members to tell Mr. Johnson how to do his job and to "Uncle Tom" the board's only black member . . .

From the beginning members of the recently elected board have made it very clear they are not about to listen to the Marin City community. During the campaign Mr. Thompson stated (in the I-J) that if either of the Marin City candidates were to win, he would not be able to work with them . . .

There are plenty of reasons for our anger and frustration at board meetings. We are parents who went through the Sausalito School District as children and are now watching our children go through the same old system.

We emerged from Sausalito schools with the same educational handicaps we see our children being burdened with.

It's difficult to be calm and nice when for all these years no one has listened. Mr. Thompson has likened the board meetings to a prison riot . . .

We have a right to free and open expression in matters affecting our children. If a prison riot is the only way to stop the dehumanization to which they are subject, then perhaps it is time we had one.

No-Fault Automobile Insurance: End Of The American Dream

WASHINGTON — One of the things we're going to be hearing more about as time goes on is "no-fault insurance." Everyone has his own idea of what no-fault automobile insurance should be, but basically it boils down to the idea that when someone has an accident, his own insurance company would settle the claim instead of seeking damages from the other party or his insurance company.

The advantages of no-fault automobile insurance are that you would eliminate a lot of phony claims from people who say they had suffered grievous injury. Litigants would not have to wait years to be paid off for an accident, the nation's courts would be free to deal with other matters of much higher priority and, hopefully, automobile insurance premiums could be reduced.

The disadvantage is that no-fault insurance could put a lot of lawyers out of work.

IT THERE COMES as no surprise that the trial lawyers are cranking up a fierce lobbying campaign to prevent no-fault insurance from becoming the law of the land.

My friend Briefless, who deals in nothing but automobile accident cases, becomes very emotional when you mention no-fault insurance to him.

"They're trying to take the bread out of our mouths," he said tearfully. "If we can't sue, we'll die."

"Oh, come now, Briefless," I said. "It can't be that serious."

"YOU CAN SAY that. But do you know suing insurance companies is the second largest industry in the United States? If they institute no-fault insurance, you'll have breadlines from Baltimore to San Diego. I'm not just talking about lawyers. I'm talking about all the other people it will affect — private investigators, legal secretaries and paid witnesses, not to mention the yellow legal pad paper companies. There is more at stake here than two cars getting into a lousy accident."

"But Briefless, surely there is other law work that you can find?" I said.

"Nothing that pays as well. Sometimes, if it's a difficult case, we get 50 per cent of the settlement. The very least we'll get is a third. If we lose we get nothing. But it's the only thing we know how to do. You can't say to a man who has been trained in 'whiplash' and 'pain and suffering suits' to go out and learn a new trade. Do you know what has made America the great country it is today?"

"I'm not sure," I admitted.

"THE RIGHT of one person to sue another person for an automobile crash."

"No kidding?"

"And also the right to select counsel to sue the other person, plus the right of the other party to select counsel to defend the suit.if you take these rights away from Americans, what have they left?"

"No-fault automobile insurance?"

"Exactly. The American dream in this country is to be hit by a cola truck or a Greyhound bus that was in the wrong."

"I never thought of it that way."

"ARE YOU GOING to take this American dream away from the people? What fun is it to have your own insurance company settle with you, when in your heart of hearts you know that with a sympathetic jury you'll get $100,000 from the other guy's insurance company?"

"You make a strong case against no-fault insurance," I told Briefless.

"The legislators think no-fault insurance is a great idea," he said, slamming a law book on his desk. "But when they find two million lawyers collecting unemployment insurance, they're going to be sorry they didn't leave vomobile insurance alone."

REMEMBER WHEN?

10 YEARS AGO

April 3, 1961

Foreign Minister Chen Yi of Communist China told newsmen that if Southeast Asia Treaty Organization nations sent troops into Laos, "then China will also send troops."

About 40,000 "ban the bomb" demonstrators held a rally in London to protest nuclear weapons.

20 YEARS AGO

April 3, 1951

The U. S. Census Bureau announced the final figure for Marin population in the 1950 census was 85,619. San Rafael, with 13,830 residents, was the only city in the county exceeding 10,000. San Anselmo came close with 9,177.

MARQUIS CHILDS

San Quentin's Death Row Symbolizes Justice Breakdown

SAN FRANCISCO — As you drive toward San Rafael the turn-off to the right says San Quentin, and there is the great yellow stone prison shining in the brilliant California sun like a crusaders' castle on the distant horizon. As the sleek cars swish by it is hard to realize how much horror, pain, hatred are penned behind those walls.

Death Row now holds 95 condemned men (Correction: 92 - Editor.). Along with everything else, California holds the record. Florida, with 72 prisoners waiting execution, is an outclassed runner-up.

This monstrous accumulation presents the governor, the attorney general, and the adult authority with a riddle that seems to have no answer. Do you send 99 persons to their death one after the other in the gas chamber? And is such a spectacle any real deterrent to the crime and violence rampant here, as almost everywhere throughout the country?

THE ACCUMULATION results from the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has not yet passed on two challenges to the legality of the death penalty. Until the court hands down its decision, the total will grow, and what will happen if the death penalty is upheld is anyone's guess. The most recent execution in California was two years ago, and the last woman was executed at San Quentin in 1962.

Nine states — Alaska, Hawaii, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Oregon, West Virginia, and Wisconsin — have abolished the death penalty. The supreme court must rule on whether a jury has the right to impose death without pre-set standards determining its imposition. This is a ticklish legal question, and an opinion may raise almost as many doubts as it resolves.

The Charles Manson trial, now ended after nine months, threw into sharp relief the sickness of so many of the dispossessed and alienated young drawn as by a magnet to the Pacific slope and the legend of the Golden West. The four young women of the Manson "family," with shaven heads, sitting down outside the Los Angeles courthouse and threatening to immolate themselves unless their master was freed, presented an incredible commentary on the state of the union.

COMMISSIONS GALORE have spelled out the clogging of the courts, the hideous overcrowding of the prisons, all the dire consequences of the law's delay. The Manson trial cost Los Angeles County a million dollars. And as it dragged on week after week and month after month, generating sensational headlines and extensive television coverage, the man from Mars might well wonder whether this was the way to arrive at a fair and impartial verdict.

So much that ought to be done remains undone. The papers here are full of the discovery of the riddled body of a 17-year-old girl who had been hitchhiking. The police are holding two men in whose motel room they found a collection of guns and some drugs.

The elemental reform of a law requiring the registration of guns is blocked by the gun lobby, the most powerful in the nation, funded by the gun industry. The lobby's pat response is that murder can be committed by means other than guns. In the night of the long knives in the Sharon Tate house the gun did not figure. Yet in an estimated 90 per cent of the murders committed in this country a gun was the instrument. Right-wing extremists see in gun registration a sinister plot to turn the country over to the Communists. This is the thin edge of paranoia, reflecting the suspicion and distrust that are part of America's sickness.

THERE IS SLIGHT evidence that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime. It is estimated 40 per cent of the robberies and holdups in San Francisco are committed by heroin addicts desperate for a fix. These addled men would hardly be deterred by thoughts of the gas chamber.

Perhaps the very multiplicity of the condemned will be a block to wholesale execution. Sirhan Sirhan is in San Quentin Death Row for the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy. Will he be executed? And will Dennis McGautha, whose case is one of those before the supreme court, be given the alternative of life imprisonment for killing the proprietor of a small market in Los Angeles? This is one for the wiser Solomon, nowhere in view.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Two Faces Of Russia As It Confronts China

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev told the 24th Communist Party Congress that, due to Soviet initiative, there had been some improvement in Moscow's relations with Red China.

It was coincidence that as Brezhnev delivered his key address to the congress, Britain's prestigious Institute for Strategic Studies was reporting that the Soviet Union had concentrated some 32 divisions along its borders with Red China and moved 1,000 combat planes into neighboring Mongolia.

Despite the fact that one there was in fact no conflict between the two.

The improvement lay in state relations.

PARTY RELATIONS, more significantly, showed no improvement at all as Brezhnev's subsequent words demonstrated. Said Brezhnev:

". . . We cannot, of course, fail to see that the anti-Soviet line in China's propaganda and policy is being continued . . . We resolutely reject the slanderous inventions concerning the policy of our party and our state which are being spread from Peking . . ."

The Brezhnev speech provided a perfect example of the two levels of thought permitted by the Soviet policy of coexistence, whether it be with the United States or Red China.

On the state level, Russian Premiere Alexei Kosygin may meet with Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai, as they did in 1969.

Talks may be undetaken to settle the border dispute between the two nations, as they were a month after the Chou En-Lai-Kosygin meeting, and ambassadors exchanged as they were in 1970 after a hiatus of several years.

ALSO ON THE STATE level may be an increase in trade between the two.

Russian-Red Chinese trade hit a low of $46.5 million in 1970 after hitting a peak of about $2 billion during the 1950s.

Negotiations completed late in 1970 looked toward an increase this year to about $150 million, still a very small part of the Soviet Union's overall trade of more than $24 billion.

U.S.-Russian trade comes to about $180 million annually.

These are all state operations, possible even as party relations deteriorate in the all-out struggle for leadership in the Communist world and influence among developing nations, and as both build up their military strength along their common borders.

THE INSTITUTE for Strategic Studies declared that after a brief improvement in Sino-Soviet relations "the clouds so obvious at the beginning of 1970 had closed in again."

As had been expected, China and its European ally, Albania, boycotted the Soviet congress.

Taking special note of the split, Poland's new party leader Edward Gierek wrote in the Moscow newspaper Pravda on the eve of the congress that Red China's anti-Soviet policies must "doom their policy to still greater isolation among the forces of socialism."

Behind The News

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Lt. William L. Calley Jr. was convicted this week of murder of civilians at the hamlet of My Lai in South Vietnam in 1968.

The court-martial jury that convicted him sentenced him to life imprisonment, a sentence that will be reviewed and possibly reduced. Pending the review, President Nixon ordered Calley be released from the Ft. Benning, Ga., stockade and confined to his quarters on the base.

The jury that found Charles Manson and three female members of his "family" guilty of the Tate-Labianca murders voted they should be put to death in the gas chamber.

The Manson trial was the longest in California history. The defendants themselves were absent during the reading of the penalty finding, having been evicted by Judge Charles H. Older for unruly behavior.

The U.S. Board of Parole this week denied parole to James R. Hoffa, the president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters who is imprisoned in Lewisburg, Pa. His application will not be considered again until June, 1972. Hoffa was convicted of mail fraud and jury tampering.

The United States made plans to evacuate U.S. citizens from East Pakistan where civil strife broke out more than a week ago. Censorship was tight, but late in the week Radio Pakistan said the major cities and countryside of East Pakistan were calm.

Communist forces overran a U.S. Army artillery base near Da Nang in northern South Vietnam. Thirty-three American soldiers were killed —the most in one action in eight months.

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu said the recent incursion into Laos was Saigon's "biggest victory ever." He said the objectives of destroying Communist supply lines and stockpiles had been accomplished.

House Democrats, in a 138-62 caucus vote, called for an end of U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia by the beginning of 1973. Doves had argued that the pullout of troops should be completed by the end of this year.

Two conservative Democrats from Gerogia— John J. Flynt Jr. and Phil M. Landrun — announced their opposition to the war and said they would not vote for extension of the draft. The House did vote, 293-131, to continue the draft until mid-1973. The bill gives servicemen sizable pay increases — a move toward an all-volunteer military.

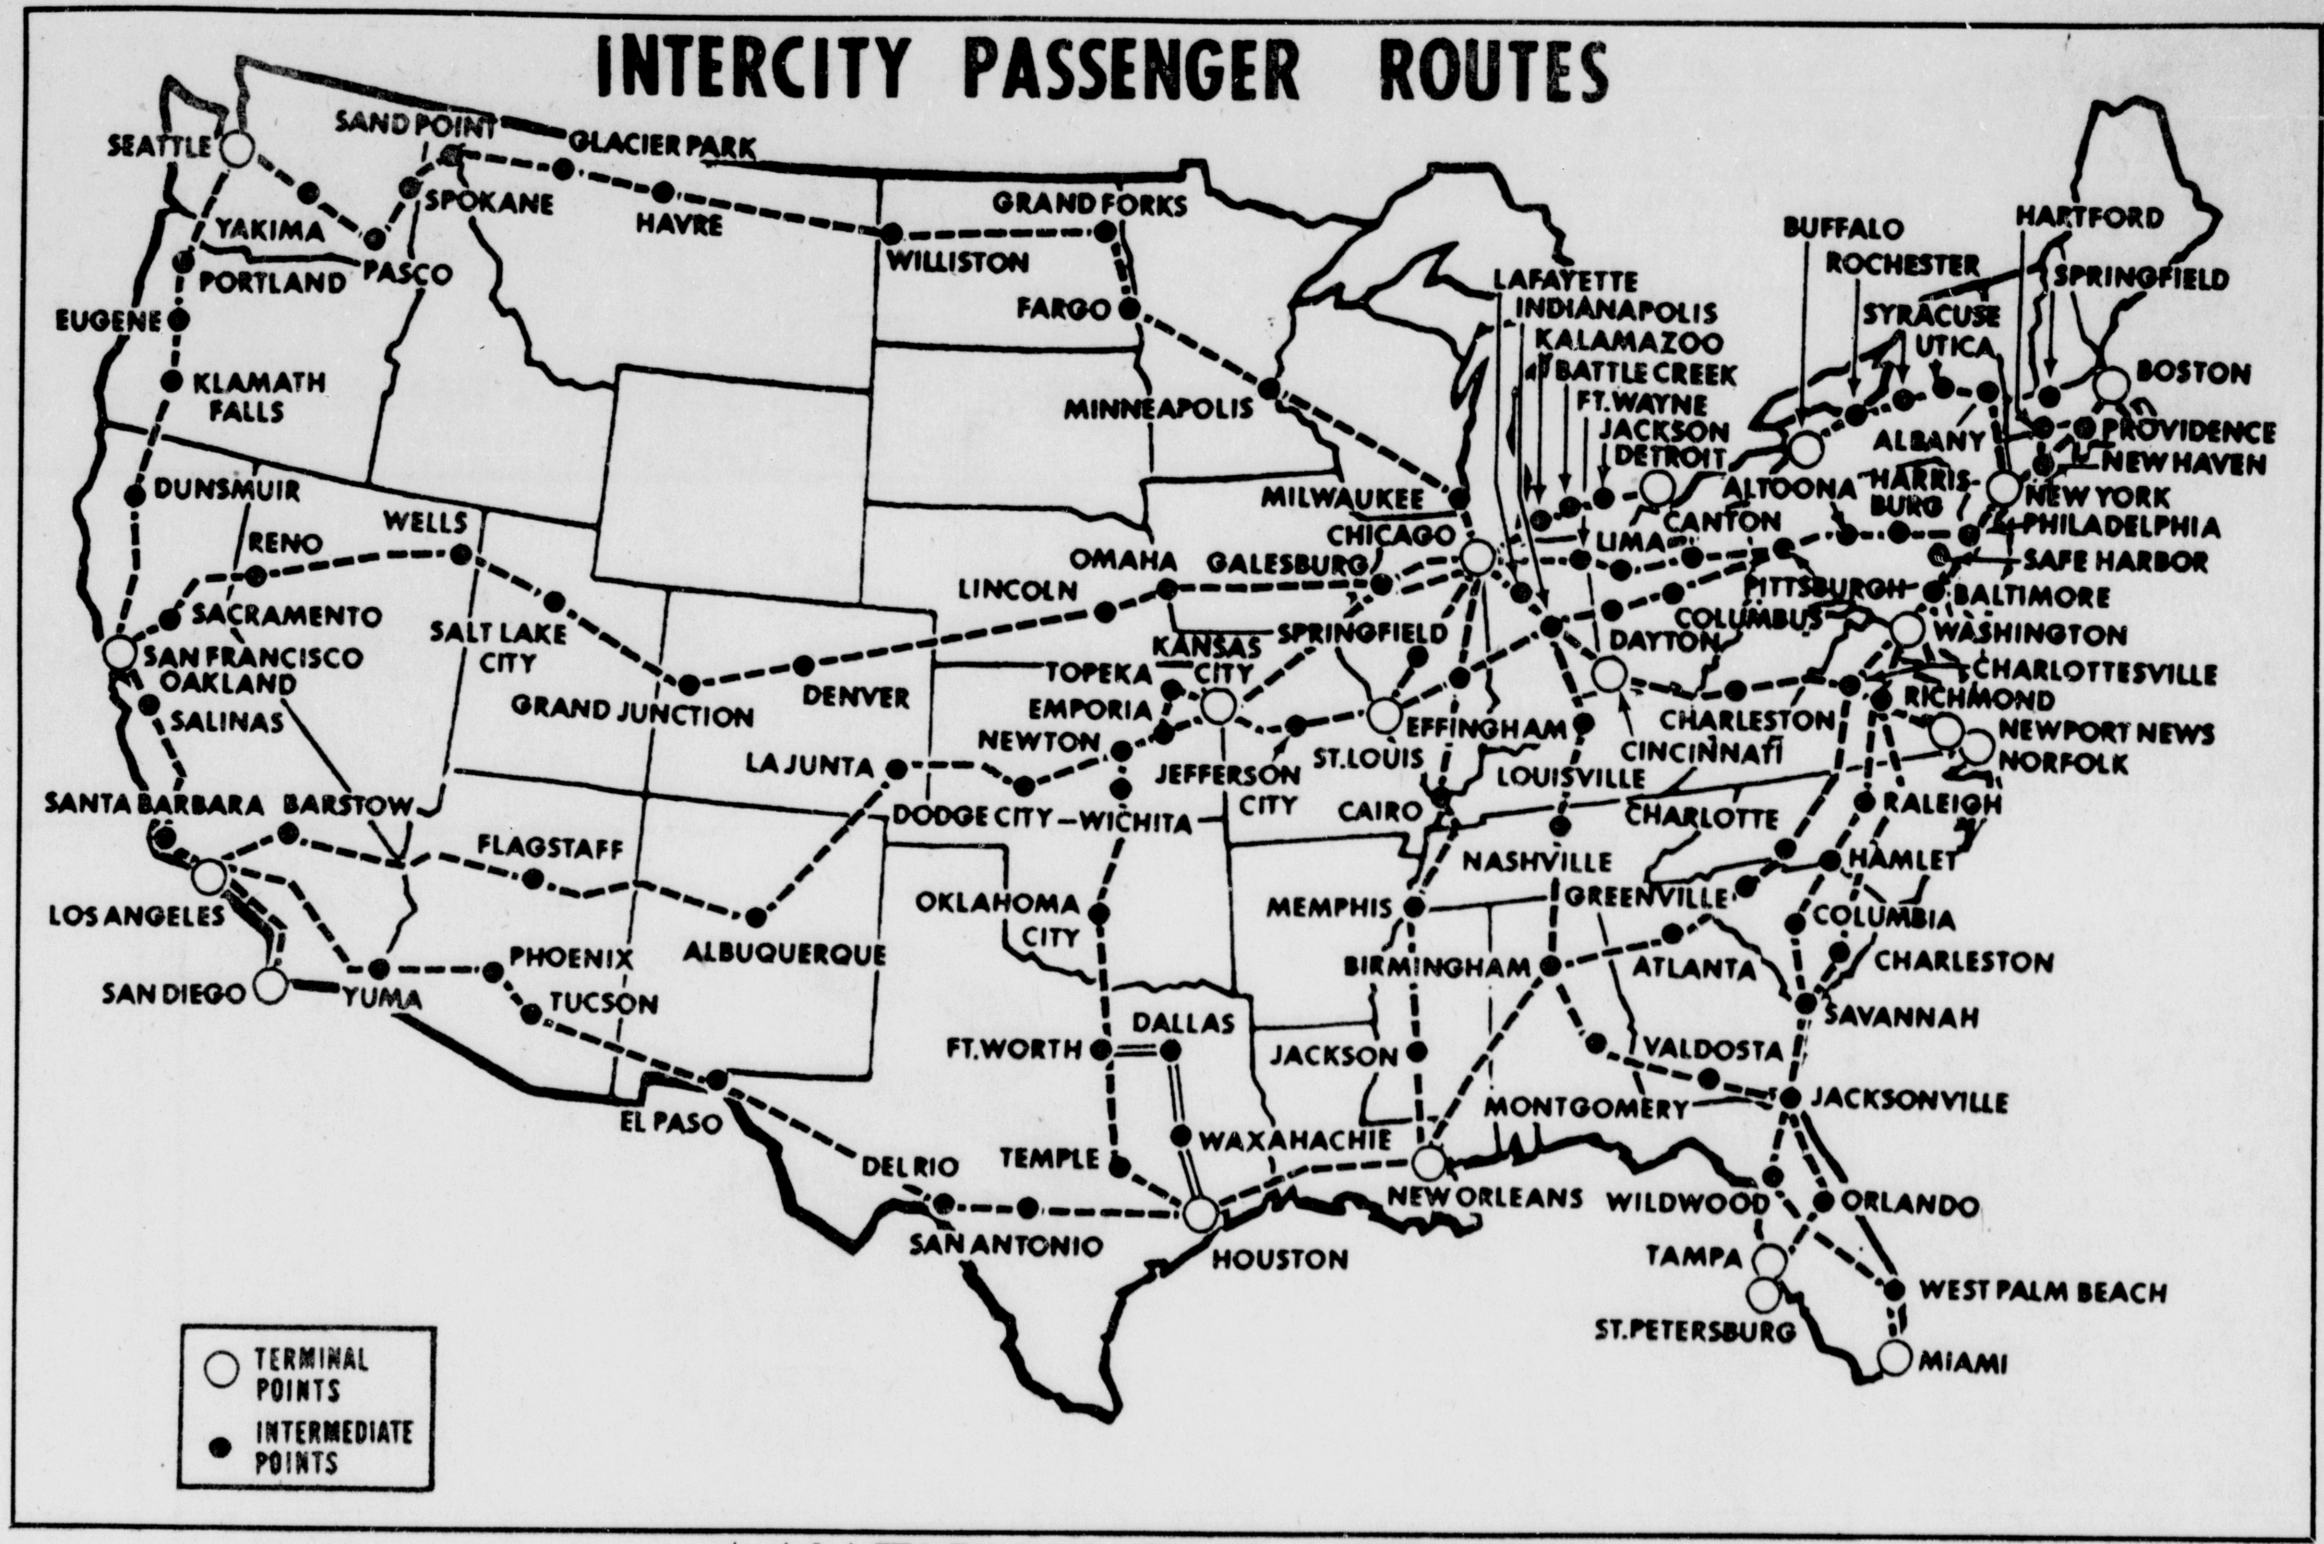
Sen. J. Fulbright, D-Ark., an opponent of the war and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, announced the committee would hold hearings on how to end the war. He said the administration had either been deceitful or used bad judgment in the invasion of Laos.

President Nixon ordered what he called "constraints" in construction wages and prices. Wage increases are to be limited to about six per cent a year.

The FBI reported that crime in America rose 11 per cent in 1970. Suburban police departments reported crime increases of 15 per cent, large cities only six per cent.

The Soviet Union made a concession at the Geneva disarmament conference. It agreed that a disarmament treaty need not cover chemical weapons — only biological.

The Soviet Communist party opened its 24th Congress.



A NATIONAL RAIL NETWORK

Railpax, the private corporation set up by Congress to save the nation's diminishing passenger trains, last week unveiled a rail network that will reach 114 cities and tie together 85 per cent of the nation's metropolitan areas. One of the proposed terminal points will be San Francisco, linking the Pacific Northwest, Southern California for train travel to the East through Sacramento and Reno. (UPI Telephoto map)

JULIE HELPS

Teen Corps Aids Youth

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) —One day last fall, Barbara Walters and Shirley Brauer gloomily looked out of their tiny office window. It was raining and they saw the denuded block where almost overnight their neighbors had been bulldozed aside for a freeway.

Their brainchild, Teen Corps, a volunteer youth employment service, had been on a starvation diet since they started it a year earlier. They had found jobs for 7,000 youths, most of them black and from the ghetto. But they had been unable to get any help from the federal government.

"Barbara was so depressed," Shirley recalls.

Then Barbara glanced at the arrow painted on the wall of the office. The arrow pointed upward and the words "Teen Corps" were emblazoned across it. She got an idea: why not go to the top?

She called Julie Nixon Eisenhower and invited her over.

Things began to happen. Mrs. Eisenhower visited Teen Corps headquarters, located within sight of the U.S. Capitol in one of Washington's worst poverty areas. The three young women got along fine.

Today, Teen Corps is within reach of a $50,000 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity and the equivalent of $54,000 in job training slots from the United Planning Organization, a District of Columbia antipoverty agency.

You can glimpse the dome of the Capitol over your left shoulder as you walk up to the old two-story building that houses the Teen Corps in four small rooms at the top of the stairs.

Pictures of Muhammad Ali (Cassius Clay), Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X are on the walls, along with posters warning about drugs. One reads, "Acid. Will It Turn You on, or Will It Turn on You?"

In a long, narrow room that looks like a miniature lecture hall are 25 folding chairs and a blackboard on a stand. On it are written instructions for job interviews: "Do's and Don'ts. 1. Be on time. 2. Be properly dressed. 3. Look pleasant. 4. Don't chew gum. 5. Go alone. 6. Don't use slang. 7. Tell the truth."

In another room, decorated with swirling designs of red and yellow and black, Irma Ellis, 15, wearing a navy blue pants outfit, sits at a desk. As youth supervisor she is responsible for the entire Teen Corps youth staff. She is a junior high student.

Youths who may have heard about Teen Corps through a counsellor at school or, more likely, a buddy, come in to fill out applications for help in getting a job.

After getting such basic information as age and address, one of Miss Ellis' interviewers asks the youth: Have you dropped out of school? Are you married? A parent? Are you on drugs? Do you have a police record? If so, for what? Can you type? Drive a car? Do you have special skills?

"We try to deal with their hangups," Mrs. Brauer says.

If the youth is a drop-out, he is encouraged to go back to school if he possibly can. About 200 have done so. If the youth is on drugs, he is referred to the right group. If he has a disability, he is sent to vocational rehabilitation.

If he has a police record, the employer is informed because Teen Corps feels it is important to be completely honest and open. But almost never has an employer had problems with a Teen Corps youth hired with a police record.

In a third room, Dennis Dupree, 17, sits at a desk neat and tidy enough to compliment a top-flight executive. He is Teen Corps' job developer.

His staff of youngsters systematically go through the want ads of Washington's daily newspapers and the telephone book's Yellow Pages. And they fan out through Washington's various neighborhood business districts. All are looking for the same thing: employers who will hire youths.

Do they ever get turned down? "Oh, sure," Dennis says matter-of-factly.

Eventually, Teen Corps tries to match the persons who apply with the jobs that are turned up in Dennis' office. In 14 months, Miss Walters says, 15,000 young persons have applied, and 7,000 have been placed.

Barbara Walters, 24, had been a job developer with the United Planning Organization for four years. In the summer of 1969 she went into the southwestern part of Washington and in six weeks she got 300 jobs for 300 teen-agers.

Her friend, Mrs. Shirley Brauer, 34, the mother of three and a correctional officer for the District of Columbia, went to help her. Together they called employers all over the city, got them to come to a job fair and persuaded youths to come for interviews. It worked.

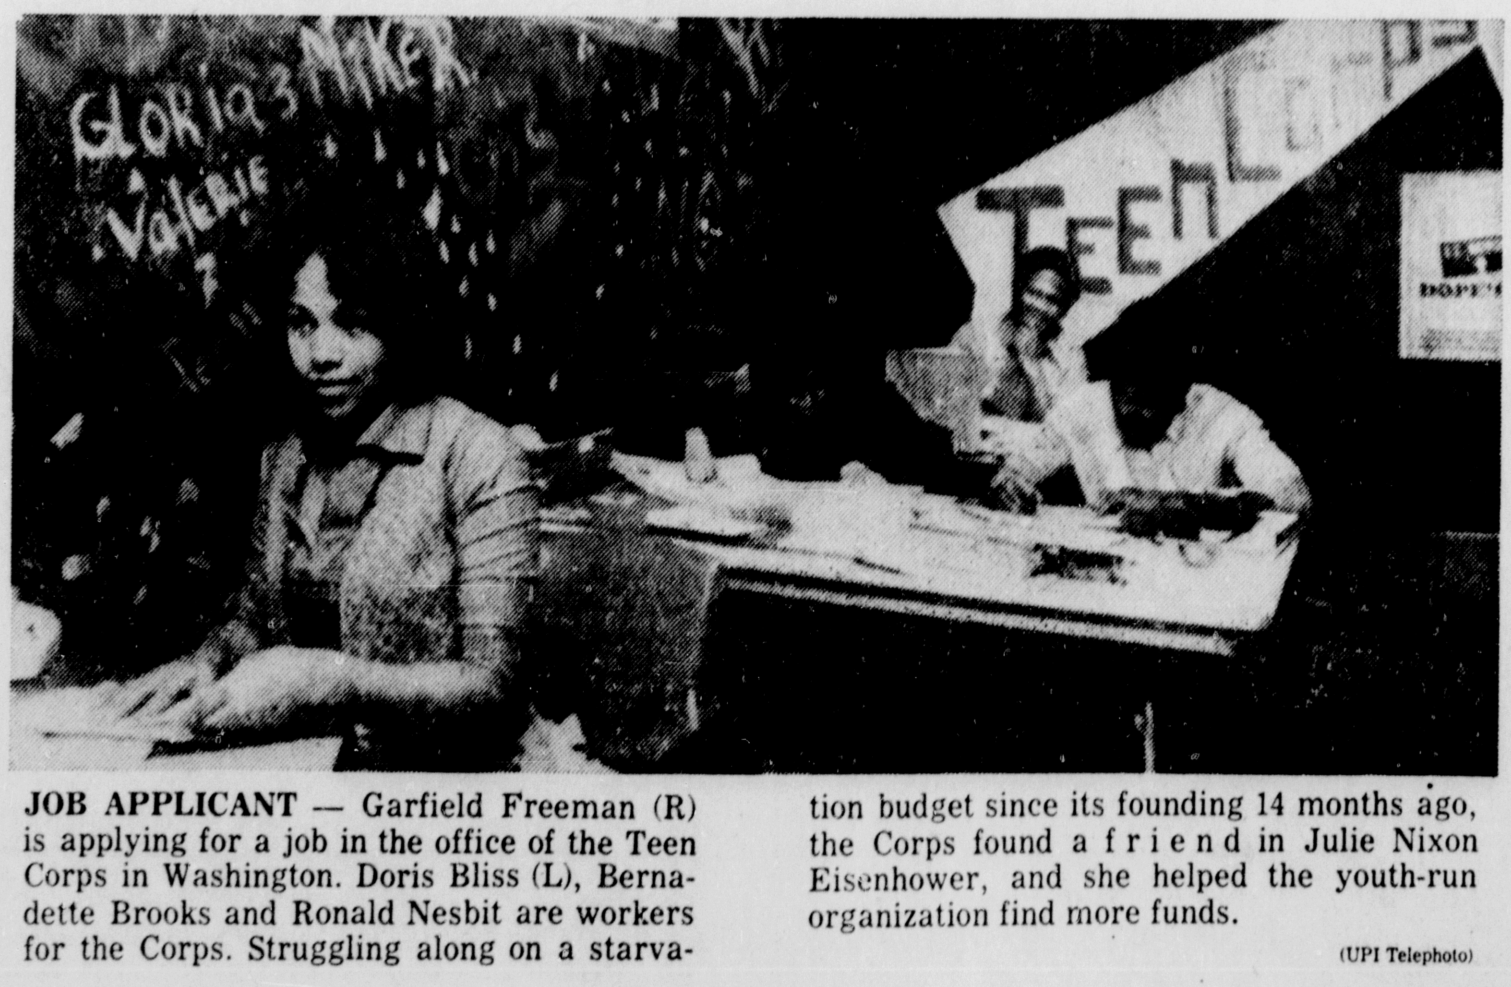
Afterward, Barbara and Shirley, both of whom are black, talked about how they could do this on a large-scale, permanent basis. Teen Corps was born. And they had some ideas about their own staff.

Barbara and Shirley and Ernestine Morris are the oldest persons on the staff. All the others are teen-agers. Barbara is director, Mrs. Brauer associate director and Miss Morris is operations supervisor.

The Teen Corps staff goes through plenty of follow-up. The staff calls both the employer and the employe to see if there are problems.

If the employer says someone has been late two or three days this week, a staff member will call the youth to ask, in a gentle way, why? Does he have an alarm clock? Does he have transportation problems?

Most of the youths are placed in hamburger stands, as janitors, in gasoline stations, restaurants and department stores.



JOB APPLICANT — Garfield Freeman (R) is applying for a job in the office of the Teen Corps in Washington. Doris Bliss (L), Bernadette Brooks and Ronald Nesbit are workers for the Corps. Struggling along on a starvation budget since its founding 14 months ago, the Corps found a friend in Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and she helped the youth-run organization find more funds. America's Image Abroad Worries New Information Service Chief

LONDON (UPI) —A New Yorker who moved to Britain to find "a better political climate" has taken lately to phoning the British Broadcasting Corporation and snarling: "So it's another anti-American night, eh?"

There are Americans who make the same protests from time to time to the networks of other European countries. They are reacting to a wave of criticism of the United States and most of its works sweeping the continent.

The expatriate New Yorker, for one, said it is turning him into — and he used to cringe at the word — a patriot.

Recently Frank Shakespeare, Director of the U.S. Information Service (USIS) left his Washington base for a quick trip to Europe to take a reading on the current state of the American image. He was a thoughtful man when he talked about it in Monaco where he had gone to look over the Monte Carlo Television Festival.

Shakespeare was only gathering information on this trip and not ready to announce any conclusions, but USIS is responsible for presenting the real America to the world and there was little joy in the reports he got from expert non-governmental observers who live respectively in Paris, Rome and London.

One of the few bright glimmers came from the London man who said those Britons taking advantage of the new low-rate tours to the United States were mostly returning enthusiastic about what they had seen. Often they returned home wondering why they had gotten so misleading an impression from their own media.

This advertising of the America most foreigners never see on their own TV or in the news columns of their newspapers is a U.S. Travel Service project that Shakespeare heartily endorses. That night in Monaco, at a dinner given by Prince Rainier and Princess Grace (who never forgets she was a Kelly of Philadelphia) he heard much criticism by America's admirers of the way the United States was being depicted abroad.

The general theme was that, because so much of the candid American soul-searching in films or on television is misunderstood when it is shown in other countries, it is a pity some of this cannot be kept at home. Shakespeare said there was absolutely no way of preventing the export of such material and no American administration would have it otherwise.

"That would be censorship," he said, "and I wouldn't be part of any government that wanted such censorship."

What Washington would like to see, if it were possible, would be "a good mix of opinions" in place of the heavily one-sided treatment of American affairs in some places.

Shakespeare has a number of ideas jelling. For one thing he thinks there should be more intensive American TV network participation in cultural events such as the Monte Carlo TV Festival and this will be encouraged for 1972. For another he is taking soundings on the idea of live television programs from the White House.

At the present stage he is thinking along the lines of something called "An Evening (or an Afternoon) at the White House" in which President Nixon would play host to American artists and to ambassadors. The broadcasts would go out live and would be transmitted overseas by satellite.

"There's a certain pizzaz to doing it live," said Shakespeare, who was a vice president of CBS-TV. He said Nixon had worried at one time about having television cameras in the White House. The success abroad of the "Duke Ellington at the White House" show may have inspired the new idea which is still in the discussion phase.

Another current USIS project that Shakespeare hopes will help set a good will pattern for the future is distribution of the Bell System Family Theatre TV program, "It Couldn't Be Done."

"Bell gave USIS the rights to place it around the world after it ran twice on NBC-TV," he said. "There's been very good reaction wherever it's been shown. It explains how obstacles of nature were overcome—the Hoover Dam, the Panama Canal, the tube under the Hudson River. You've got to be careful about what you show and where you show it. Sometimes what is meant to encourage a developing nation will discourage it by showing how far it has to go.

"But the achievements in this program were accomplished within a single lifetime and so they know anything is possible."

He said USIS would be happy to be given the international distribution rights to other films of this type.

"But it has to be completely voluntary on their part (the makers)", he said, "otherwise it looks like the long arm of government."

USIS will itself produce 20 major documentaries this year. Its productions run from one minute clips to 90-minute programs such as Gregory Peck's "The Infinite Journey" on the Apollo venture. Award-winning director John Ford is still working on a one-hour program on Vietnam—and has been for two years.

STUDENT ECOLOGISTS

Environment To Be Probed

By CHRIS MEAD

LANSING, Mich. (UPI)—A pilot plan to translate the ecological zeal of college students from words into action is being drawn up in Michigan.

It's called the "Clean Earth Corps."

Its aim: to harness the energy of young environmentalists by sending them out in teams on conservation missions throughout the state during the summer.

Projects already planned for this summer include environmental studies in a northern inland lake, a shoreline study along a Great Lakes shoreline, and an urban environmental study of an inner-city Detroit neighborhood.

The state-backed project was born last summer at an "Earth Day" seminar at the University of Michigan. Gov. William G. Milliken was there, took mental note of students feeling, and set his ecology staff into motion.

The original plan, according to Jim Kellogg, Milliken's top environmental advisor, was to launch a full-scale summer youth program reminiscent of the civilian conservation corps of the depression years.

That approach Kellogg said, proved a disappointment because students did not respond as enthusiastically as expected. A more cautious approach evolved.

"At first we got mixed response from students —No general enthusiasm as we had hoped," Kellogg said. "So we sat down and decided to start out real slow with a pilot project."

The pilot project planned for this summer will set five teams of students, with about 10 students on each team, on five different environmental studies around Michigan.

If this approach works out — and the governor's environmental people are keeping their fingers crossed —the Clean Earth Corps could be expanded the following summer and eventually turn into the full-scale program.

The pilot project will require no outright state funding. Instead, local governments or private groups in the area to be studied will provide the student teams with compensation.

The state's role, Kellogg said, will be to offer research facilities, technical advice and general moral support.

"If the people involved are financing the projects, they will take a much greater interest," Kellogg reasoned. "We are following the philosophy that the most successful environmental programs are those where financing is done at the local level."

The pilot program is shifting into gear with the governor's office sending out notices to college students explaining the project and inviting applications. Some students already have sent in unsolicited requests to join up.

Students will be selected in terms of their interest in the environment, their general capability and their academic specialty.

"The important thing is that we proceed with well-prepared, well-organized projects," Kellogg said. "We must proceed very slowly and make sure we have interested students with a sincere commitment."

Bill Marks, head of the Water Resources Section of the Michigan Natural Resources Department, was guardedly optimistic about the Clean Earth Corps.

He is one of several state officials who will work with the student teams by providing technical advice and research facilities for a project at a northern inland lake.

"Assuming the governor's office maintains its interest, I'm enthusiastic," Marks said.

New Bus Route Is Now Going

The Central Marin bus service started its new Saturday run today between Novato and Kentfield.

James B. Robertson, acting general manager of the Marin County Transit District, said the Saturday operation is from about 9 a.m. to about 6 p.m. between Novato and Kentfield.

He said more runs were also added to the weekday service. From Monday through Friday, the buses run every hour, beginning at 6:39 a.m. from San Marin Drive in Novato. The buses take about an hour and 15 minutes to get to College of Marin.

Northbound buses leave College of Marin every hour, beginning at 7:15 a.m. and continuing through 4:30 p.m.

The service is provided by Marin Transit Systems Inc., a private firm in Marin City, under contract with the Golden Gate Bridge District. Operating losses are subsidized by funds from the Marin County Transit District.

Assembly Backs Lower Vote Age

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Assembly has approved a proposed constitutional amendment lowering California's voting age to 18.

However, the lower chamber Thursday rejected an attempt to give the 18-21 age group such adult privileges as drinking alcoholic beverages.

The vote proposal by Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, went to the Senate which previously adopted a similar measure. The vote was 60 to 9 with the rejection votes coming from Republicans.

There are several measures before the Legislature to lower the voting age.

The adult privileges amendment to Brown's bill was proposed by Assemblyman John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton. It failed by a 29-37 vote.

Domestic Talk For First Lady

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—First lady Pat Nixon, wives of cabinet and government officers, and top women in government will be briefed next Wednesday on domestic affairs.

The unprecedented meeting will be conducted in the cabinet room of the White House by John D. Ehrlichman, the President's assistant for domestic affairs.

Early in his administration, Nixon said he wanted the wives to be involved and to attend cabinet meetings at times. Two cabinet wives, Martha Mitchell and Mrs. George Romney, keep up on national affairs and speak out on them.

VD 'Epidemic' Alarms Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —Gov. Ronald Reagan blames permissiveness for the spread of venereal disease in California.

Reagan agreed Thursday with recent reports that the problem has reached "epidemic" proportions.

The governor told a news conference the problem is caused by "permissiveness, the spreading of the belief that old standards of morality don't apply, the recommending that abortion is an easy answer to those who want to give in to their own desires ... the toleration of the commune type of living, the Haight-Ashbury syndrome ..."

Ex-Felon Can Sue On Magazine Expose

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The California Supreme Court ruled yesterday a convict who has paid his debt to society can sue a magazine that exposes his criminal record long after the event.

In a unanimous opinion, the court reinstated a damage suit filed by an ex-convict against Readers Digest for a story which recounted an 11-year-old crime.

An ex-felon has a right to privacy after he has been rehabilitated and rejoined "the anonymous bulk of the community" if he does nothing otherwise to attract public attention, the court ruled.

The magazine's article on the defendant, Marvin Briscoe, said truthfully that he had hijacked a truck and engaged in a police shoot-out 11 years earlier. Briscoe sued for $1 million, arguing that he was completely rehabilitated and the article subjected him to scorn.

"Identification of the actor in reports of long-past crimes usually serves little independent public purpose," the opinion said.

In unique cases, "an individual whose name is fixed in the public memory such as that of the political assassin, never becomes an anonymous member of the community again," the opinion said, but not all convicts were in this class.

The court said it did not hold that Briscoe should win his suit but merely that he had a right to press it.

The Perilous Game Of Narcotics Agent

Col. George White, Undercover Agent

The Colorful Career Of An Arch-Foe Of Narcotics

By PAT ANGLE

Col. George White may look like just another mild-mannered volunteer fire chief as he zooms around Stinson Beach in his sprightly red fire jeep.

But behind that ordinary exterior is a man who has carved a fantastic career of adventure throughout the world, a life charged with more drama, intrigue and hair-raising escapes from death than most television script writers could devise in their wildest fantasies.

For nearly two decades White played one of the most dangerous games imaginable as a top undercover agent for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics. When his face became too well known to narcotics kingpins from India to Turkey, he was made a district supervisor for the bureau. He headed operations in the Medwest, New England and the West Coast until his retirement — for reasons of health — in 1966.

THE BURLY, balding White looks like a cross between Ian Fleming's "Goldfinger" and Mr. Clean. With the right clothes he could probably pass for a Midwestern business man or, just as easily, for a Mafia chieftain.

COVER PHOTO

A DISPLAY CASE that hangs in the Stinson beach home of Col. and Mrs. George White holds just some of the badges White wore during his service as a federal narcotics and special agent. But there were times, on undercover assignments, when he could wear no badge at all. To do so would have signed his death certificate.

(Independent-Journal photos by Alfred M. Arn)

But his sharp blue eyes don't seem to miss much and his quick, wry wit and incisive intelligence make his incredible exploits believable.

As a young agent in the 1930s, he became the only non-Chinese ever to gain membership in the formidable Hip Sing tong, a large and powerful "family association" which flourished and ruled in the United States during the first three decades of this century.

WHITE'S WORK with the Hip Sings resulted in the virtual eradication of a massive opium and narcotics syndicate with bases from New York to Hong Kong. His undercover infiltration also brought about the arrest of several of the tong's top leaders.

He was the first federal narcotics agent ever to be sent abroad to investigate the sources of drug traffic into this country. Posing as an American gangster and narcotics buyer he smashed large dope rings in the Middle East, Marseilles, India, Mexico and South America.

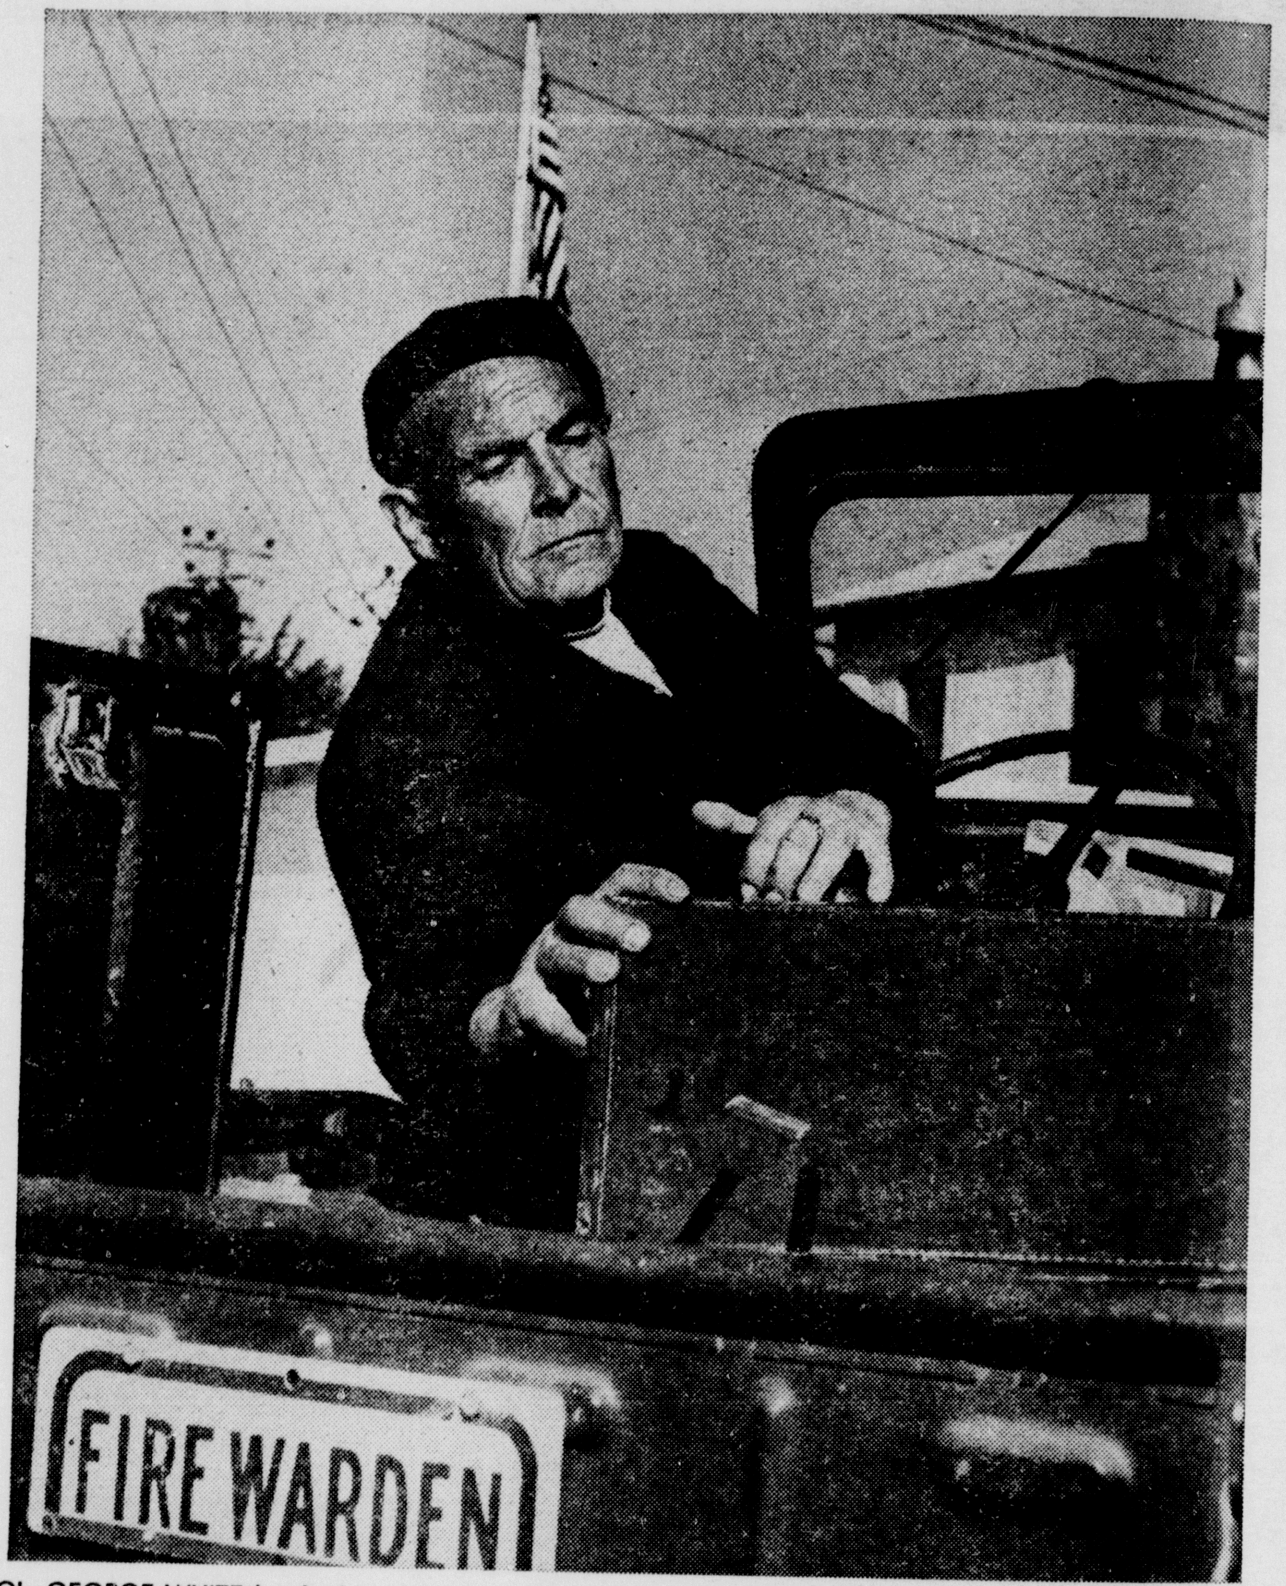
During his travels, White has: shot his way out of a Marseilles dive when pushers pegged him as an agent, killed a Japanese spy in a gun battle in India and toppled the Houston, Tex., city government during an investigation of the involvement of that city in narcotics.

DURING WORLD War II, he took time out from his "routine" job to work in counter intelligence and set up a school to train counter espionage agents.

As a "lesson" for his students, he smuggled himself into North Africa before the Allied landings and organized Arab resistance groups to begin sabotage activities against the Germans.

"Another childish dream come true," White joked.

He obtained evidence which helped to deport narcotics chieftain Charles (Lucky) Luciano. And, when the Kefauver Committee began investigating organized crime and the rackets, they called on George White to assist them.



COL. GEORGE WHITE has had no difficulty making the transformation from a two-decade career as an adventurous undercover agent and supervisor for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics to the quieter, semi-retired existence of rural resident and volunteer fire chief at Stinson Beach. He still keeps his hand in law enforcement as a consultant to police agencies and as a special deputy for the Marin County sheriff's department.

DURING THE Truman administration he was an assistant to Newbold Morse, a prominent socialite Republican appointed by President Harry S. Truman to ferret out corruption in government. A questionnaire he helped devise, asking government employees to list their wealth, assets and sources of income, caused the downfall of Atty. Gen. Howard McGrath, fired by Truman when he refused to answer the questions.

The 63-year-old White received the Treasury department's Medal for Exceptional Service in 1949, the greatest honor the department can bestow on one of its agents.

ALL IN ALL, it has been a pretty heady career for a former newspaperman who decided "to go honest" and get into law enforcement "because I thought doing what a cop does would be more interesting than writing about it."

White decided on narcotics work because "the narcotics police got a little more action and had greater freedom than regular police. I felt it would be more challenging."

The work was dangerous but, most importantly, it was "fun — kid stuff," according to the former agent.

"WHEN I WAS a small boy, all the kids on my block wanted to be railroad engineers, policemen, firemen, lifeguards, soldiers, cowboys or spies," he recalled. "Well, I've never been a railroad engineer or cowboy. . .but I've managed all the rest."

"What Ate Holes In My Son's Sweater?"

It appears that your son wore his sweater while working around the car or in a laboratory where it came in contact with sulfuric acid. The concentration was sufficient to weaken the wool fibers, resulting in the holes you found. Similar damage may occur from hydrochloric acid also found in laboratories and used, too, in cleaning bricks and metals. Neither of these acids is used in any part of a drycleaning plant.

These holes are common in garments of "do-it-yourself-ers." It's well to have such a person around the house, however, he should be careful to wear old clothing when handling storage or automobile batteries or laboratory chemicals.

WHEN A SAN FRANCISCO narcotics dealer by the name of Haig Terzian was nabbed in 1957 by Col. George White and his West Coast agents of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, they uncovered something more than illicit drugs. In the Terzian home they found 13 guns, ammunition, a gas gun, hand grenades and dynamite. "I'm a gun collector," explained Terzian. Colonel White was pictured pondering the munitions hoard.

From Ace Undercover Agent To Volunteer Fire Chief

Col. George White Has Made Adjustment To The Quieter Life Of The Country

White is a man of surprises which tend to demolish any stereotypes of a "super nark" which the younger generation may cherish.

George White has sent thousands of men to prison, but he hasn't made moral judgments of them.

"I don't dislike criminals; I have a lot of friends who are murderers," he said. "When I used to hang around with gangster types, I had very good times in their company."

HE HAS IDEAS about why people use narcotics and turn to crime, but prefers to keep his thoughts on the sociology of crime to himself. He wishes the sociologists would return the favor — when it comes to the subject of police work.

"As an agent, I didn't care why the chickens were stolen. It was my job to find the chicken thieves," he explained.

His ideas about drugs are predictable (he's against them, including marijuana), but his politics are not. He refuses to give his opinion of Federal Bureau of Investigation Director J. Edgar Hoover (at least publicly), except to say he doesn't think much of Hoover.

THE POLITICIAN who impressed him most — and not many politicians have impressed White — was Robert F. Kennedy, whom he termed "a great guy, a great attorney general, a man with a great sense of humor."

"I knew Robert Kennedy personally, but I can't claim him as a friend," he said. "But I know he really wanted to know about crime and corruption and the other problems in this country. He really wanted to do something to correct the problems.

"And Kennedy would remember what you told him. Once he came out to California for a briefing on crime and, during hours of discussion, I happened to mention a Salinas police chief we were trying to get the goods on for narcotics violations and burglary. When Kennedy came back six months later we were talking to him again and he said: 'Say, whatever became of that guy in Salinas, that police chief? I've been thinking about him. Whatever happened in that case?'"

"HE COULD have been a wonderful President," White said, a bit wistfully.

On the other hand, the former agent dismissed Richard Nixon as "a shrewd opportunist, a nothing," an opinion dispelling the myth that all policemen are right-wing Republicans and supporters of the status quo.

What does a man like George White do for an encore? After all the excitement of his past life, can he really slip into a life of retirement in Stinson Beach without shriveling up from boredom?

HE ACTUALLY can and in fact enjoys the rural life. His third wife, Albertine, a buyer for Macy's, travels all over the world and is away from home much of the time, leaving Colonel White to his own devices.

But he manages to keep busy. "I don't drink. I go to bed early. When the fire bell rings, I see to the fire-fighting. I run around in my jeep and pull people out of the sand."

He also keeps "the volunteer firemen reasonably happy," keeps "them from fighting," delivers an occasional baby, "chases the bad hippies" (he laughs), and serves as a consultant to policemen and federal agents and as a special deputy for the Marin County sheriff's department.

IN HIS SPARE time, White carries on a voluminous correspondence with persons all over the world, many of them in law

While in Europe, pick up an ugly European.

We can arrange your rendezvous with a bug (or any other Volkswagen) in 40 cities in 15 countries.

And that includes the handling of those nasty details like insurance, registration and licensing.

So all that's left for you to do is enjoy the benefits of driving your own VW in Europe. The low operating costs, for example. Or being able to go where tour buses fear to tread. (And still be only a stone's throw away from one of Europe's 5,000 VW Dealers.)

Then, after the tour's over, we'll arrange to have your car sent back through something we call TASP (Tourist Automobile Shipping Program).

Col. George White Has Led A Life Of Intrigue, Adventure

He Played The Dangerous Role Of Undercover Narcotics Agent

enforcement or fields related to drugs.

He is currently enjoying a humorous, wittily-nasty correspondence with John Kaplan, the Stanford law professor who rose to fame and fortune with his book "Marijuana: the New Prohibition" that advocates legalization of the drug.

Some day White would like to incorporate some of his ideas and observations on law enforcement and the courts into an autobiography.

WHITE BELIEVES that law enforcement today is in "good, even excellent shape" and that the caliber of policemen and police services "has improved immeasurably in the last 20 years."

But he readily admits many problems still exist and must be dealt with before the system can work as it should.

White's harshest criticisms, are directed against lawyers, judges and the courts. He believes judges, once elected or appointed, are placed in "cushy," life-time jobs, and almost assured they will remain on the bench forever. Consequently, he feels judges have become insensitive to the wishes of the public they represent and have given the public "poor protection against criminals by being permissive to people already spoiled by a permissive society."

THE FORMER agent made a study of drug arrests in Marin last year and discovered "thousands of people" had been arrested. Of the "hundreds" finally convicted, he said one or two were sent to prison and some spent weekends or short terms in the county jail.

But he discovered the "vast majority" received probation, even though the already overburdened county probation staff is "not adequate" to supervise such large numbers of cases.

"People inclined to use drugs in Marin need fear no retribution from the law, so the law acts as no deterrent," he complained. "And nobody goes to jail for drunk driving, even though it's only luck that most drunk drivers haven't killed a couple of people."

WHITE FEELS the media should keep box scores on what various judges are doing, particularly in the area of sentencing. This would not be designed to intimidate judges, but "because they are supposed to represent the people, just as congressmen are."

He feels judges should stand for election like other public officials, but admits "very few lawyers are willing to risk the ire of a sitting judge by running against him" hence few contests in judicial elections.

But, if the electorate was informed what each judge was doing and had some way of evaluating his performance, he feels more groups would get together and encourage lawyers to run against judges they did not approve of.

WHITE CHASTISED lawyers for "stirring up frivolous litigation" and clogging the courts, making impossible the "swift, sure, severe punishment" he feels is the only effective crime deterrent. He suggested all suits be reviewed by a referee, possibly a bright law student who could dismiss frivolous suits before they ever came to court.

In addition, White suggested judges work longer hours and insist lawyers appear, ready to proceed, on trial dates "instead of granting everlasting" continuances.

"These continuances are not only time-consuming, but they are the bane of a policeman's life, because he must get witnesses and evidence together each time a trial date is set." He said the court should decide on the date of a trial or hearing — not the lawyer — who should be forced to arrange his schedule to the court's convenience.

IF THE COURT system is really going to dispense justice, the compulsion to gain victory — on the part of both defense lawyers and prosecutors — must be removed, he thinks, possibly by enforcement of a strict canon of ethics for both.

"The successful criminal lawyer doesn't give a damn about justice," according to White. "He is only concerned with having his client found innocent and will use any means, whether ethical or not, to accomplish this goal."

And he said district attorneys are just as determined to "obtain a string of convictions without blemish of a single acquittal."

The former agent thinks the courts have been derelict in protecting the public against "criminal predators" by allowing offenders to escape prosecution on "legal technicalities" such as illegal search.

WHITE ADMITS the courts moved to protect people who were being harassed by police because of race, life style or political beliefs, and that police problems of losing cases on technicalities result largely from past police misconduct. (White during his long career produced evidence for thousands of court cases and says he lost but three).

Legal loopholes were first used during prohibition because judges and prosecutors hated to punish persons for breaking such an unpopular law, and were later called up to protect minorities, for example, black people.

"But unfortunately," White continued, "these civil liberties laws apply not only to drinkers and Negroes, but to murderers, rapists and heroin peddlers."

THE COLONEL urged that existing laws forbidding police misconduct be enforced and that officers be prosecuted for their illegal searches or the like without suppressing the evidence obtained from such a search.

"The courts have said, in effect, that they are going to punish the police by spoiling their case so they won't do it again,"

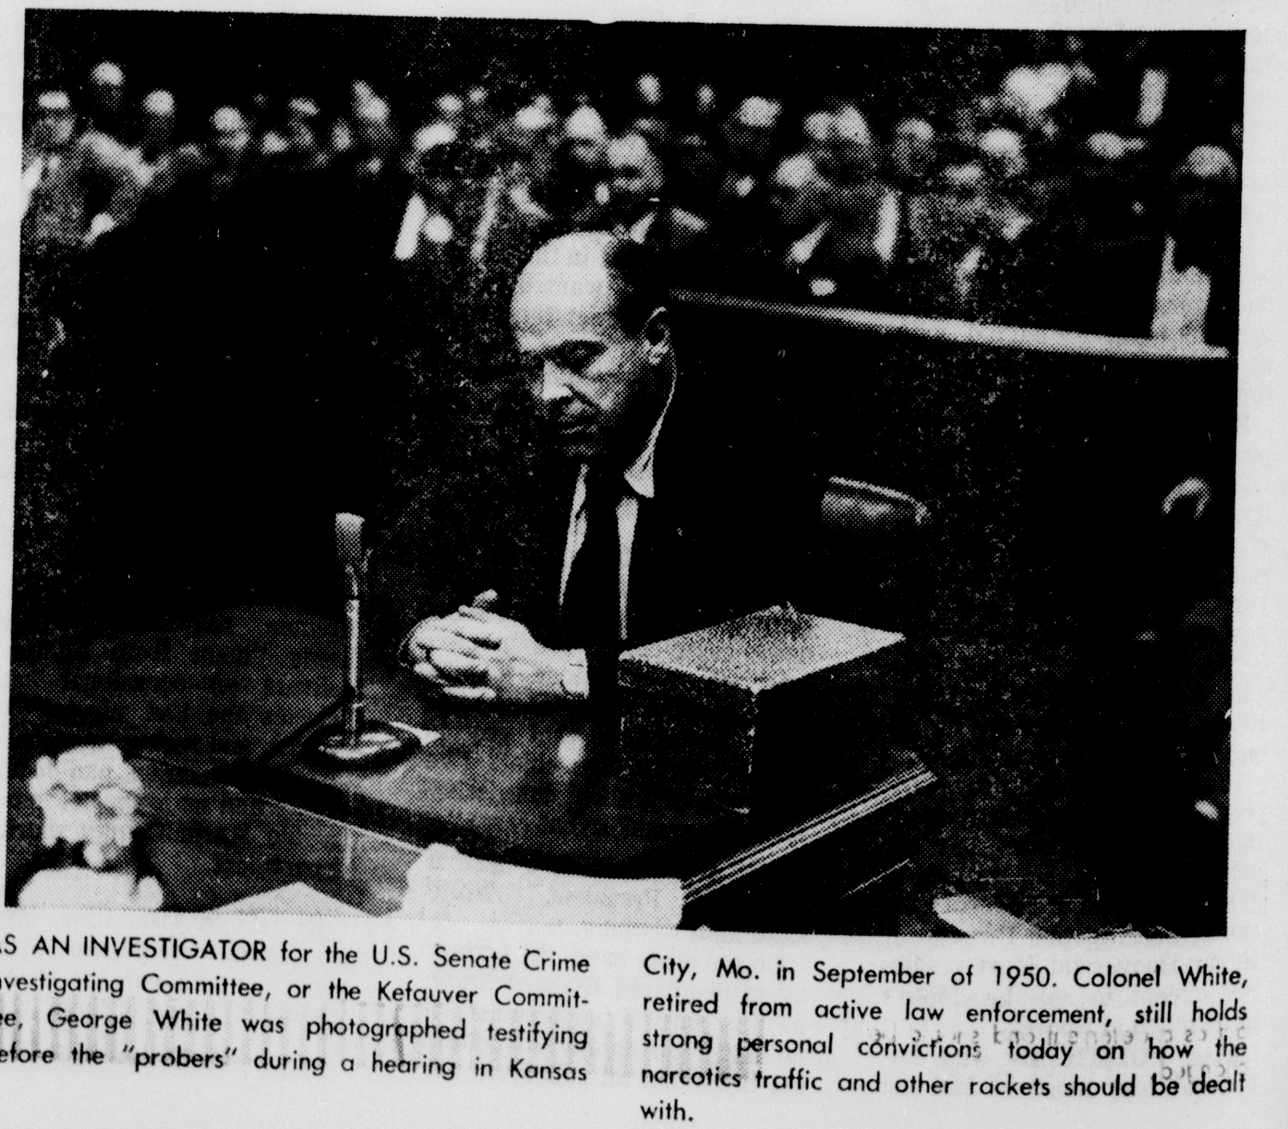
A CRACKED news service photograph shows George White, at left, seated beside the late Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee at a hearing during the time when White was assisting that determined foe of organized crime in his investigations of the rackets. White's reputation as an agent for the Federal Bureau of Narcotics was already well established.



AS AN INVESTIGATOR for the U.S. Senate Crime Investigating Committee, or the Kefauver Committee, George White was photographed testifying before the "probers" during a hearing in Kansas City, Mo. in September of 1950. Colonel White, retired from active law enforcement, still holds strong personal convictions today on how the narcotics traffic and other rackets should be dealt with.

Meet George White, A Real 'Super-Narc'

But Long-Time Agent Doesn't Fit The Present-Day Stereotype

he noted. "But, actually, they are punishing the public by allowing criminals to go free."

White believes police should improve their image and get away from the "para-military" look which "handicaps a policeman right off the bat.'' To make his point, he whipped a small gun out of his back pocket, startling this reporter who had not noticed it during the interview.

"POLICE NEED guns, but they don't have to be hanging out, frontier fashion," he said. "I'm just as effective with this gun."

"True, the uniform may act as a scarecrow of some value, but when the policemen get out of their black and white cars with guns clanking and boots stamping, the citizen is not getting a friend, but an impersonal symbol of authority."

He said a few unkind words for the media's handling of drug abuse news and believes, "from long and bitter experience" that newsmen have contributed to the drug problem.

THE FORMER newspaperman (before he switched to law enforcement) charged newspapers and television with making drug abuse socially acceptable by implying "everybody's doing it" and giving "wide circulation" to the statements of "medical quacks" who claim pot is better than booze.

"You won't puke on the bedspread," he said with a wry laugh.

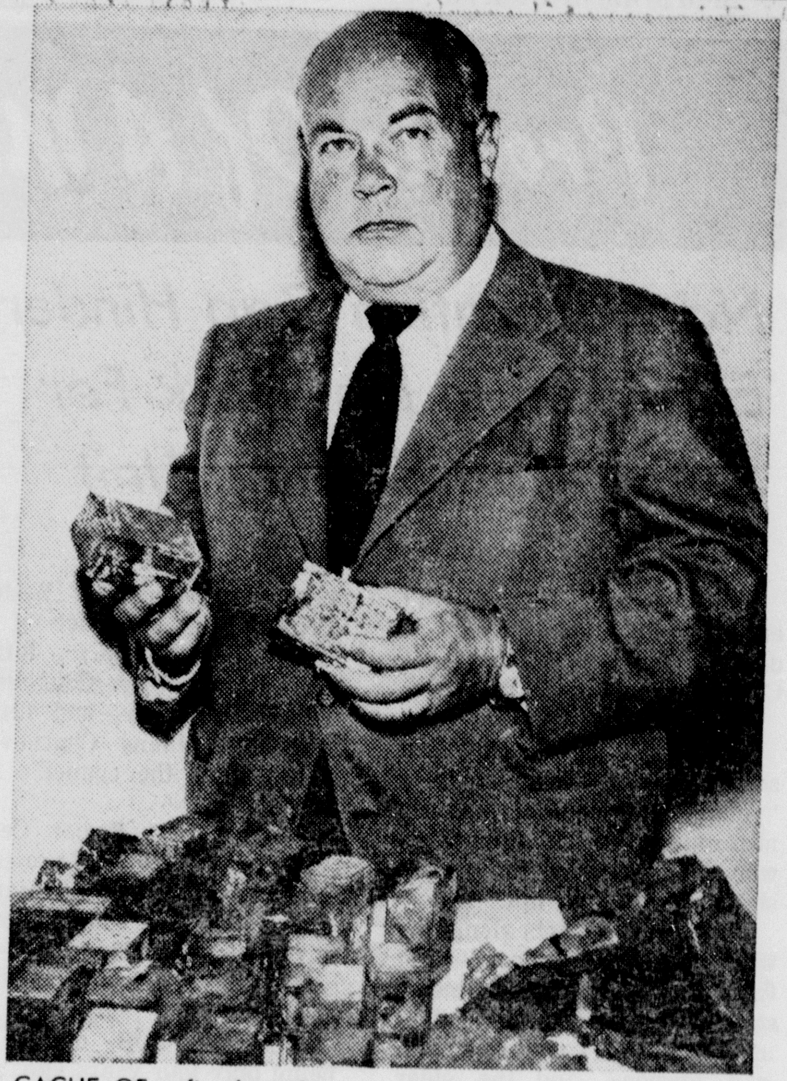
According to White, the media also "attractively links drugs with the new liberalism and implies non-users are reactionary, gestapo types" and "grossly exaggerates the economic returns of drug peddling ($1 Million Dope Seizure) — a typical headline)."

"ONE GUY doesn't get anywhere near that much, because the stuff passes through many, many hands," he explained, "but the headlines give young kids the idea selling dope is the way to get rich quick. All the kid gets out of it is caught."

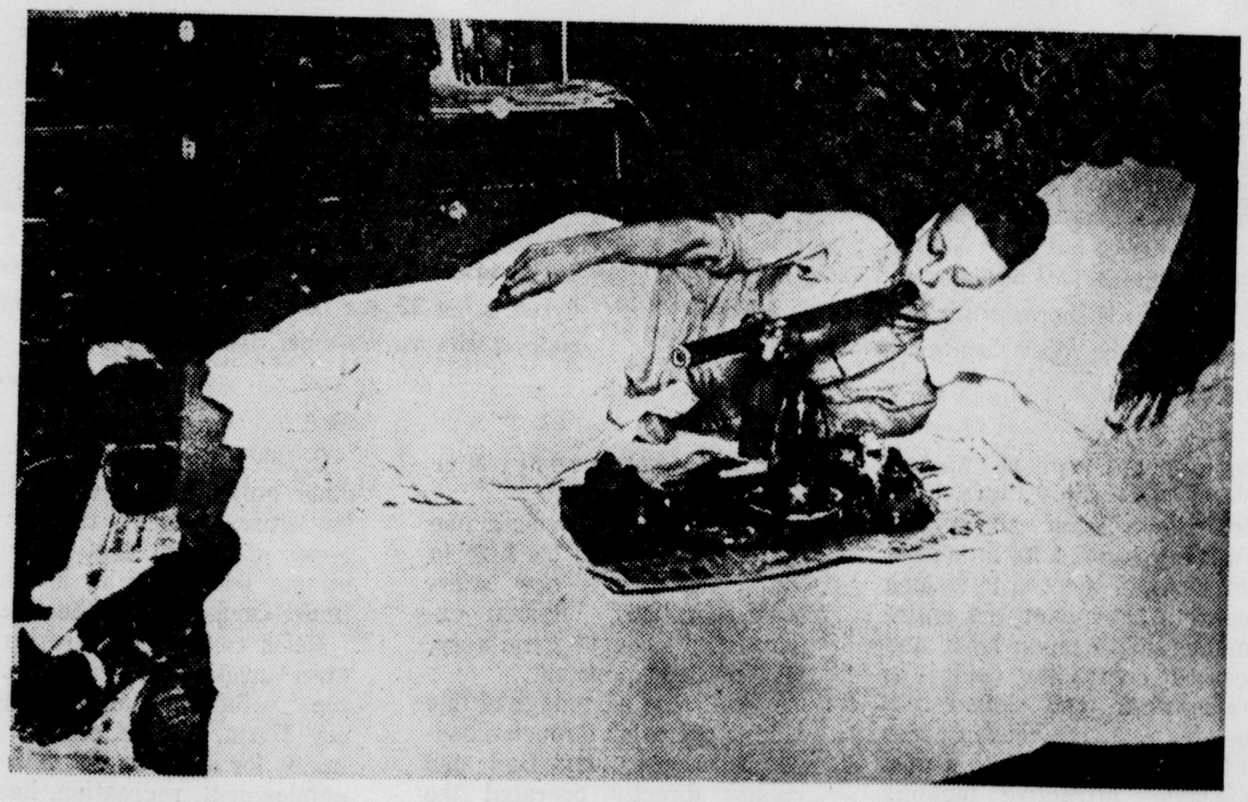
White's prescription for marijuana users is bound to make him unpopular with his young, hip neighbors in Stinson Beach, but the logic is clear. He thinks every person convicted of marijuana use should spend some time in jail if officialdom genuinely wants to curb use of the drug.

"You'd have some pretty full jails for perhaps a year, but when people learned it was dangerous to smoke grass, I think use would taper off and the problem would diminish greatly," White said.

"Or else," he shrugged, "change the law. But, if you keep it, enforce it."



A CACHE OF refined smoking opium in tins was examined by Col. George White after being seized by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics in a raid along the U.S.-Mexican border. The year was 1956. And by then White, his face too well known for him to continue his work as an undercover agent, had been promoted to administrative duties. At his retirement in 1966 for reasons of health, he headed bureau operations on the West Coast.



HIS PERSONAL contacts with such human misery and degradation as personified by the opium smoker pictured above during his years as an undercover agent and administrator with the Federal Bureau of Narcotics left Col. George White with no tolerance for the drug traffic. But today, major controversy in the field swirls around the marijuana plant, pictured at right, and its use. And Colonel White is firmly opposed to its legalization and staunchly in favor of the enforcement of the laws against it, with jail sentences for offenders, if officialdom genuinely wants to curb its use. Otherwise, he says, the laws fail to act as a deterrent and should be changed.

No Generation Gap Hinders Ed Ryken In His Work For Senior Coordinating Unit

by JEFF GREER

THE MOVEMENT of the arms and hands in gestures as he speaks is characteristic of Ed Ryken, executive director for the Marin Senior Coordinating Council, as he appears before a group of senior citizens. Ryken is but 32, but has no difficulty establishing a rapport with Marin's older citizens.

(Independent-Journal photo)

The generation gap doesn't exist for Ed Ryken, executive director for the Marin Senior Coordinating Council.

Ryken is 32.

He deals daily with Marin senior citizens ranging from a "young" 50 to centenarians. He also must work with teen-agers who could consider his over-30 status as "over the hill."

But he says he gets along fine with both age groups — and finds that he has been able to steer the teen-agers and seniors into "what the young folks call 'rap sessions' and the older ones call just plain talking."

"They are all people and I like people," declares the blue-eyed, wavy-haired Ryken. Even as he relaxes briefly at his desk, his arms and hands are constantly in motion, to demonstrate points as he talks.

RYKEN IS JUST as people-oriented during off-duty hours.

He and his wife Diane are vice presidents of the parent-faculty club of the San Ramon School near their home in the San Marin section of Novato.

Both are active in conservation, particularly with the recently organized North Marin branch of the Conservation League of Marin. He is an officer of a national camping organization, a member of the county's comprehensive health planning board and was active as finance director in last year's successful supervisorial campaign for Novato's Arnold Baptiste.

ALL OF THE people-oriented activities "that do not affect my job are family activities," Ryken explained. "We look on them as recreation.

"Others may be in bowling leagues or things like that. We feel people, the issues and the excitement, to be stimulating."

Ryken also finds his job serving senior citizens "very exciting."

MANY OF ITS facets are "unique in the whole country," he explained.

Ryken actually is a county employee, but he is also the top executive of a non-profit corporation, the Marin Senior Coordinating Council.

The council was born 17 years ago when articles of incorporation were signed by Wishard Brown, now publisher of the Independent-Journal; former San Rafael City Councilman Dr. Charles Aby, and retired merchant Manny Charnow of San Rafael, the council's first officers.

Marin's first Senior Center was opened as a pilot project in a leased house in San Rafael 13 years ago. The council now is involved with 52 senior programs throughout the county.

RYKEN'S JOB came into being only four years ago, as a result of a survey under an "Older Americans" grant, which was the first such in California. The survey by Richard Phoenix urged local government and the Senior Coordinating Council to engage in a wide variety of projects to meet the needs of Marin's increasingly high percentage of older residents.

The county supervisors entrusted the council with finding a director; after its first interviews with candidates the council was still dissatisfied and called on experts in recreation fields to recommend likely prospects.

Ryken was working with the Neighborhood Youth Corps in San Mateo County and continuing his education at San Jose State College, when Mary Wylie of San Jose State School of recreation education suggested the Marin council interview him.

"I CAME UP here prepared to be interviewed for a few minutes. It went on for hours, and then the council asked me to step outside a few minutes," Ryken recalled. "Then they asked me to take the job." Though only 28 then, Alameda-born Ryken was already a veteran of public recreation work.

"I took a pretty good salary cut, but it was an exciting chance to work with a new concept," Ryken explained. "It was a chance to create a whole senior program with a sort of autonomy — to let the ideas flow."

He credited much of the program's growth to the council's broad experience in civic and community life, and its willingness to say: "It sounds awfully good; try it and see if it works."

RYKEN LEANED back in his chair and swept his arms to encompass the new office the council had just occupied.

"I've had great successes and even greater failures."

Probably the most challenging effort so far is the council's new quarters in the former Northwestern Pacific depot in downtown San Rafael.

If the complexities of city planning, building and parking requirements can be worked out, and if the state Public Utilities Commission allows the NWP to close out its little-used ticket office, the senior council hopes to take over the entire building. With union labor and licensed contractor doing the major work, and skilled retirees the rest, the council hopes to turn the building into a mission-style, attractive building with many functions besides being a gathering place for senior citizens and housing the council offices.

ITS ROOMS MAY be turned into a series of rented boutique shops; other rooms may be used to store club materials or give the groups meeting space. Ryken said the council and senior citizens have a nearly endless list of ideas for using the building.

Based on the Senior council's previous experience, becoming a landlord for other non-profit organizations in Marin County should prove successful.

The San Anselmo bus depot is one of Ryken's proudest examples. It is manned only by senior citizens, through a council contract with Western Greyhound. Its workers, previously bored with retirement, are building a sterling record for dependability on the job, Ryken reported.

THE BUS DEPOT wound up 1970 with a $200 profit after paying its employees.

"That doesn't sound like much, but it was a big help to the senior citizens' new catering operation," Ryken explained. "It bought some very, very needed equipment.

"That's one advantage of this kind of operation through a non-profit corporation. Had the county directly operated the bus depot program, any surplus would have been swallowed into the general fund. Here, we're more flexible."

The council also has contracts to supply paid recreation directors to several of Marin's many convalescent and retirement homes. The workers all are senior citizens. The various senior citizens' housing projects also employ retirees as staff, Ryken noted.

WHEN THE railroad depot face-lifting gets a clear track, the seniors hope to establish a new venture, a commercial maintenance and janitorial service. The center itself will be their first customer, Ryken said.

The feeling of having a chance to succeed in their own ventures, supplement their pensions with a new income, and become an integral part of Marin's business life has meant much to the senior citizens, Ryken explained.

Ryken now is working on another project — gathering senior citizens' ideas through a series of forums that will culminate next year in a White House Conference on the Aging.

He is conducting a series of town meetings in senior citizens' gathering places throughout Marin. At the session, he mines for ideas in the fields of employment, recreation, health care, the generation gap and other concerns of Marin's older residents.

RYKEN REPORTED discovering certain parallels in the views of today's youth and the senior citizens. He has compared their answers to a questionnaire distributed to representatives of both groups.

Teen-agers who work with Ryken as volunteers in transportation for senior citizens, visitors to shut-ins and other tasks, wrote that they felt the older persons' greatest need was "love," followed by considerations of material security and health. While many of the senior citizens stressed their needs for financial and physical security, many a questionnaire "had written somewhere on it, often in tiny handwriting, that the person wanted to be loved by someone," Ryken noted.

Where the understanding is, there's no generation gap, according to Ryken.

THE PRISON DOC —

San Quentin's Norfolk Pines

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles about early-day San Quentin Prison written for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine by Dr. Leo L. Stanley, its long-time surgeon and the author of books about San Quentin and Marin history.)

By DR. LEO L. STANLEY

It is not often that I visit San Quentin Prison any more. But when I do, I never fail to include a look at the two stately Norfolk Pines that grow upon the grounds.

I haVe known these trees since 1913 and have watched their growth.

And the sight of them never fails to bring back memories. Memories, for example, such as those I have of George D. Collins, a lawyer who ran into difficulties with the law.

Collins was something of an earlier version of the Ding Dong Daddy of newspaper fame who some years back was revealed to be married to some 15 women. Collins, too, had had a number of wives, and while those marriages sometimes involved him in litigation, they were legally dissolved.

SO IT WAS not for his marital adventures that Collins ran afoul of the law. Instead, it was a perjury charge that proved his undoing.

On April 18, 1906, Collins stood convicted, but still unsentenced. He was lodged in the City and County of San Francisco Jail in the Ingleside district, awaiting sentence.

Then came the great shake and the fire that followed. The trembling left the jail walls cracked and in a hazardous condition, a fate shared by many of the city's buildings that were not totally demolished.

THE CONCERNED sheriff was faced with the problem of where he could safely incarcerate his prisoners.

San Quentin Prison had also been shaken, he learned, but its strong walls had withstood nature's fury.

Would the warden be good enough to allow San Francisco's jail prisoners to be domiciled at San Quentin until the emergency was over and their regular quarters made safe again?

"Certainly," came the reply. "Send them over."

A TUGBOAT was chartered, the prisoners loaded aboard and transported to the San Quentin wharf.

But the authorities had failed to take into consideration that among their involuntary passengers was one of California's most brilliant lawyers — Collins.

And George Collins did not take easily to the transfer. Instead he protested:

"YOU CAN'T put me in the penitentiary. I'm a county jail inmate. I'll sue you, and I'll sue the state. I'm a lawyer, and I know what I am talking about. You will have to take us all back to San Francisco."

The sheriff and prison officials conferred, and agreed he had a point. So the prisoners were put back on the tug and returned to San Francisco, even while that city was still burning. Whether the other prisoners thanked Collins is not recorded.

George D. Collins did eventually land in San Quentin, but only after being formally sentenced to the prison for the perjury conviction. His forceful presentations in court may just have spurred his accusers into having him put away for a time.

AT THE PRISON he was assigned to the identification department and proved a well behaved inmate, doing his job well and providing no difficulties for authorities.

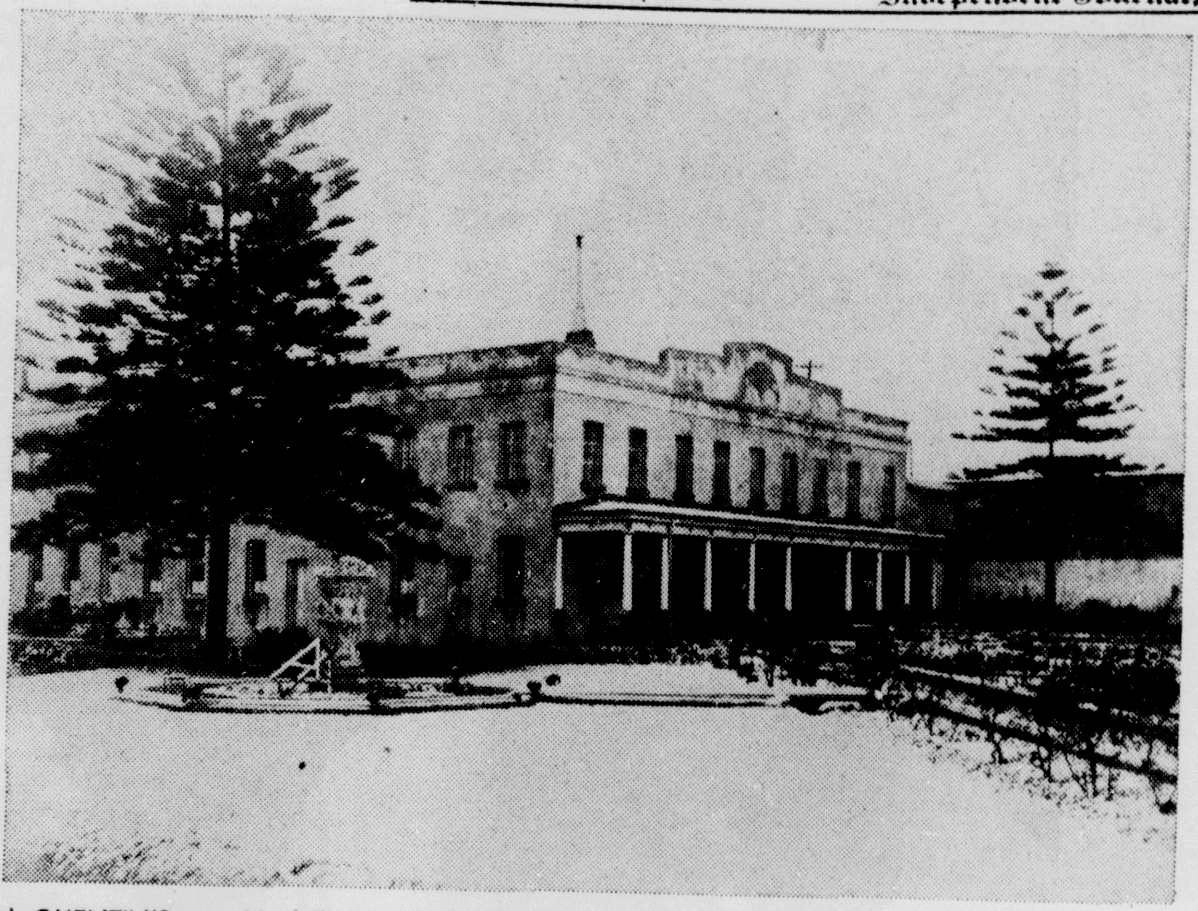
A good-natured old sould, witty, and full of anecdotes, he seemed to take a special liking to me, then a young doctor who had just joined the prison staff. He always greeted me with a smile and a quip. And whenever I had an opportunity I would look into his window and exchange a few words with him.

In the afternoon, after his work was finished, Collins would take his stool and set it under one of the two Norfolk Pines at the edge of Garden Beautiful as we called the plaza around which prison buildings were situated in the Spanish style.

AND SEATED on his stool under the pine, George Collins would give out legal advice plus cheer, comfort and encouragement to any prisoner or official who sought his counsel.

That is how I remember George Collins, and why the Norfolk Pines unfailingly bring back memories of this lawyer whose good spirits withstood the test of extreme adversity.

Eventually Collins was released from San Quentin and I would then see him occasionally hobbling down San Francisco's Market Street to the office where he continued to practice law, or to the Palace Hotel where he would get together with some of his pre-earthquake cronies.



SAN QUENTIN'S two Norfolk Pines were photographed in 1913 after a freak snow storm that had left a blanket of white on the plaza called the Garden Beautiful. It was beneath the tree on the left that prisoner George D. Collins set up his open air "law office" for inmates. The two stately trees still stand today.

COLLINS HAD been afflicted with a crippled foot since childhood, but the handicap had not affected his sunny smile.

The sheltering of George Collins, lawyer behind prison walls, was only one prison life chapter of many — comedy, tragedy, joy, despair and all the human emotions — that the Norfolk Pines have looked down upon during their long tenure.

They must have been planted soon after the prison was established. Their origins I never determined. But they were in what corresponded to the "teen" years when I first knew them, and I watched with interest as they grew to their present stature and dignity.

THEY ARE known to botanists as Arawcaria excelsa, and to laymen as the Star Pine as well as the Norfolk Pine.

The tree's most common name comes from its place of origin, Norfolk Island, 1,000 miles northeast of Sydney, Australia, in the lonely Tasman Sea just south of New Caledonia. That four-by-six-mile isle is the only place on earth that can claim this particular pine as indigenous.

During World War II, I spent several weeks at Noumea, New Caledonia, awaiting the heavy cruiser Minneapolis to which I had been assigned. Japanese submarines were reported operating off Norfolk Island, and the destroyer on which I was doing temporary duty was ordered to search there for them.

IT WOULD be my opportunity, I thought, to see firsthand the ancestral home of the San Quentin pines I had so long admired.

But word came in the submarines had been spotted elsewhere, and so that order was cancelled.

And I never again had an opportunity to see the home of the Norfolk Pines.

But I think any visitor to San Quentin who sees the two specimens growing there will agree that they are among the most impressive of all trees.

Certainly George Collins used to think so when he sat in their refreshing shade and dispensed words of legal wisdom and spiritual comfort to troubled men who sought him out there.

HAVING SOME FUN at the radio KSFO microphones are the station's program director, Pete Scott, left, and disc jockey Terry McGovern, the latter wearing the cowboy hat he frequently sports as headgear. McGovern recently lost the choice morning time slot on the KSFO schedule to Jim Lange, but accepted the station management's decision philosophically, and now presides over the late afternoon-early evening programming with undiminished enthusiasm.

The Many Facets Of Terry McGovern

By DON KEOWN

The major league baseball manager and the radio station disc jockey have something very much in common — the uncertainty of their employment.

One day they are riding high, the toast of the fans or listeners.

And the next, with a dip in the team standings or their program's rating, or simply a shift in the whims of the front office, they are looking for other employment.

Not even a contract always affords them full security.

THUS IT WAS that young Terry McGovern began 1971 at the head of the pack in San Francisco's highly competitive radio ranks, in the coveted 6 to 9 a.m. slot spinning records and airing his enthusiasms with seemingly boundless energy over KSFO.

It was the show over which Don Sherwood, biggest name in San Francisco radio, had once presided. And long regarded as the top spot at the influential and prestigious station that has specialized in a corps of disc jockeys, commentators, sportscasters and announcers who have achieved celebrity status on at least a local, regional level.

McGovern's ratings seemed sound and all appeared very, very right with his world.

AND THEN THE public got

ALMOST AS MUCH a part of the radio disc jockey's job as spinning the records and providing patter between platters is presiding over civic functions. Here TerryMcGovern was handling those duties for San Francisco's 1970 Irish Week celebration, flanked by such celebrities as San Francisco State College President Dr. S. I. Hayakawa, Mayor Joseph Alioto and former Police Chief Thomas Cahill.

its first indication that this was not necessarily so from Herb Caen's column.

McGovern, the columnist reported, was about to be ousted' from KSFO's top record-playing spot. Jim Lange, a former KSFO headliner and since then a television personality, would return to take over the choice morning hours.

Shortly thereafter, the station announced that McGovern had been shifted to the 4 to 8 p.m. time period.

McGovern, a San Rafael resident, took it philosophically.

"THEY SAID IT just wasn't working out," he says.

McGovern had held the morning assignment for a year and four months.

"Now I feel like much of the pressure is off," he says. "And the pressures in radio really are horrendous. It is a highly competitive business."

But his new, later hours, McGovern admits, have forced him to make some adjustments to his approach and manner at the microphone.

"In the afternoon and early evening," he explains, "people just won't put up with as much as they will in the morning.

"AT THE START of the day they are resilient and tolerant, ready to put up with and even smile at a lot of foolishness. But by late afternoon, the worst has happened. They've had it. And they are no longer in the mood for nonsense."

Thus, says McGovern, "I am trying to mellow a bit — to choose softer music, and to be less loquacious."

Of disc jockeys generally, McGovern admits: "We all tend to talk too much. I think the best objective for any of us is to try to talk less . . . and to say more."

He cites Don Sherwood as an example of a disc jockey who never wasted words. "That was a large measure of the key to his tremendous success with listeners," McGovern says.

OF HIS OWN development, McGovern says: "I like to think I've become a warmer, more understanding person — less flippant. A lot of my mail has made mention of my sincerity, and I have felt good because of that."

Of the music on his show, McGovern admits: "I don't like all of it." But, he adds, the music for his programs must be chosen to please the audience, not himself.

"I guess if I had my own way I'd play more of the newer music," he adds.

THE QUALITY OF "pop" music generally is at an all-time high, McGovern believes. "There is so much of it that is good today."

But McGovern's personal enthusiasms are by no means limited to "pop" music and radio.. His interests have ranged from a serious study of how to be a circus clown and an actual performance under the big top with the gigantic Ringling Brothers show, to organizing a clean-up-the-debris campaign for the Berkeley hills as part of the current ecology and anti-pollution movement.

Described as "looking something like a cross between actor Dustin Hoffman and a leprechaun," McGovern seemingly is a fountain of endless ideas.

IT WAS HIS idea that he live and broadcast his program for three days from the Farallone Islands as a stunt to call attention to the United Crusade campaign.

When a San Jose school teacher informed him youngs-

IN HIS SAUSALITO apartment home, Terry McGovern, radio station KSFO disc jockey and personality, relaxes after working hours with a drink. The pressures of radio work, he says, "can be horrendous." Yet McGovern approaches his chores with the enthusiasm and the imagination of youth.

TERRY McGOVERN and wife Molly made an early decision that Sausalito would have to be their home when they came West in June of 1969 where he had already established himself as a radio and television favorite. Their pet, Jos, is pleased with Sausalito, too, they report. Here Jos enjoys the warmth of the fireside with master and mistress.

The Ups And Downs Of A Disc Jockey

KSFO's Terry McGovern Of Sausalito Takes It All Philosophically

THE THEATER has been a special interest of radio disc jockey Terry McGovern. So when he had an opportunity to rehearse and appear with the "Hair" cast in San Francisco, he seized upon it, and was on stage both opening and closing nights.

ters in her small school had never seen snow, he arranged for a flight of a helicopter from the Sierra to the school yard, carrying a cargo of clean, white snow.

"Which," he says, "the children promptly ate."

"WITH TODAY'S world, you simply have to stay interested," he says. "People are more selective, more mature, more educated. It is easier for a person, especially if he's talking his head off, day after day, on the air, to disclose his stupidity."

Thus McGovern was aware of the ecology crisis long before concern became fashionable. It was his concern that caused him to call attention one day on the air to the debris littering the Berkeley hills. The following Sunday, 200 persons, from college students to housewives, turned out to clean up the woods.

WHEN HE HEARD a poem written by a Pennsylvania high school students entitled "Genesis — Last Chapter" and paraphrasing the Bible's story of the Creation into a countdown of Man's destruction of his God-given environment through pollution, his ecological sense was so impressed that he contacted the young poet and obtained his permission to record the poem to a musical background.

The record became something of a Bay Area regional hit.

But more importantly, the funds realized through its sale were turned over to the "Save the Redwoods' movement.

FOR A STILL very young man, Terry McGovern has a considerable background in radio.

In his native Pittsburgh he became one of that area's best known radio and television personalities. His career choice was a natural one, for his father, Roger McGovern, was a well-known disc jockey and newsman in Pittsburgh and Oklahoma.

Terry was active in Pittsburgh little theater, and while a student at Duquesne University created his own satirical nightclub act. While with the Army Reserve, he put together a documentary film entitled "Oh, You Knucklehead" that won a National Golden Quill award.

At KSFO, Al Newman, vice president in charge of radio programming for Golden West Broadcasters, and Peter Scott, program director, heard of McGovern, and requested audition tapes. As a result, Terry arrived in the Bay Area in June of 1969, "the first time I had ever left Pittsburgh," and began work at KSFO.

"IT WAS LIKE a dream, coming to California, and when we saw Sausalito, we knew it had to be our home," says McGovern.

"We" consists of McGovern, wife Molly, and the family pet dog Jos. Their home is a comfortable Sausalito apartment.

Despite their liking for Sausalito, the McGoverns have not been "rootbound." They spent a great deal of their first year in Northern California "exploring" — camping on Mount Tamalpais, strolling the beaches near Dillon Bay, etc.

With him McGovern brought west his interest in the theater. He met the cast members for the musical, "Hair," and became the first "outsider" to be invited into the company-formed "Ohione Tribe," appearing opening and closing nights on the stage.

MORE SERIOUSLY, McGovern has been among the hardest workers for the welfare of the Indians on Alcatraz Island. Other community activities have ranged from hosting the annual Irish Week celebration to collecting toys at Christmas time to be repaired by Bay Area firemen for needy children.

As the result of a "Seedy Street" satirical segment having fun with the hit children's television show "Sesame Street," Terry has been doing some of the voices for the actual "Sesame Street" programs.

He states his life style philosophy thusly: "Never let things defeat you."

It is a philosophy that sustained him when he lost that choice morning time slot at KSFO. There will be other happier happenings that will more than offset such setbacks, of this he is confident.

ANOTHER BIT of McGovern philosophy: "Have a good time, both physically and spiritually, as long as you don't have it at some one else's expense."

Whether facing the KSFO mike, relaxing in his home with his wife, presiding over some civic function, or working on behalf of a worthy cause, Terry McGovern seems always to be having a good time. And at no one else's expense.

A HIGHLIGHT OF his extracurricular activities at KSFO for Terry McGovern came when he and the station joined forces with Bay Area firemen to collect and repair toys for less fortunate youngsters at Christmas time.

JUST ABOUT everyone wants to be a circus clown. So when the famed Ringling Brothers visited the Bay Area, Terry McGovern arranged to train for and then appear beneath the big top as a member of the clown troupe.

DANGER
KEEP OFF

THE CLOWN SKIT is under way, and you can bet that the inevitable explosion is about to occur. That is TerryMcGovern, second from the left, and taking part in the antics right along with the veteran Ringling Brothers clowns. For McGovern, the performance was the fulfillment of a long-held ambition to perform beneath the big top in greasepaint and baggy pants. McGovern's imaginative mind frequently comes up with such stunts.

When California's Desert Blooms

Wildflowers Are Now Staging Their Annual Show Of Color

It is that time of the year again when wildflowers of the Southern California desert turn barren wastes into a riot of color.

Trees, shrubs, cacti, succulents and other plants all bloom in shadings that range from the brightest colors to the quietest pastels, but with the yellows and purples predominating.

TO SURVIVE summer heat, drought, chill nights and strong winds, desert plants must be a hardy lot, points out Patricia Moorten, who with her husband, "Cactus Slim" Moorten, founded and operates the Palm Springs Desert Botanical Gardens.

But from mid-March into late April, these tough plants need apologize to no garden plant for the beauty of their blooms.

Encilia with its small yellow blossoms rules the hills, but Creosote, also with a yellow flower, and Desert Mallow, a perennial with pink, apricot and orchid-colored blooms, are also well represented.

Joining in the color show are the Chuperosa or hummingbird bush, with a red trumpet flower; the Indigo bush; the Fountain Grass, a variety of buckwheat with a light purple stalk, and the Desert Lavender.

Among the trees contributing to the landscape is the Palo Verde with graceful limbs or solid green embellished by thousands of five-petal, sweet-pea-like flowers.

AND THE Honey Mesquite contributes creamy yellow tassel-type blooms.

The wildflowers include the purple-flowered Sand Verbena, the yellow-flowered Desert Gourd, the pure-white Dunes Evening Primrose, wild Daisies and Buttercups and a bevy of succulents such as the Ocotillo, the Joshua Tree and the Spanish Bayonet, or cacti such as the Century Plant, the purple Beavertail, the Jumping Cholla, the Pincushion and the Red Barrel Cactus.

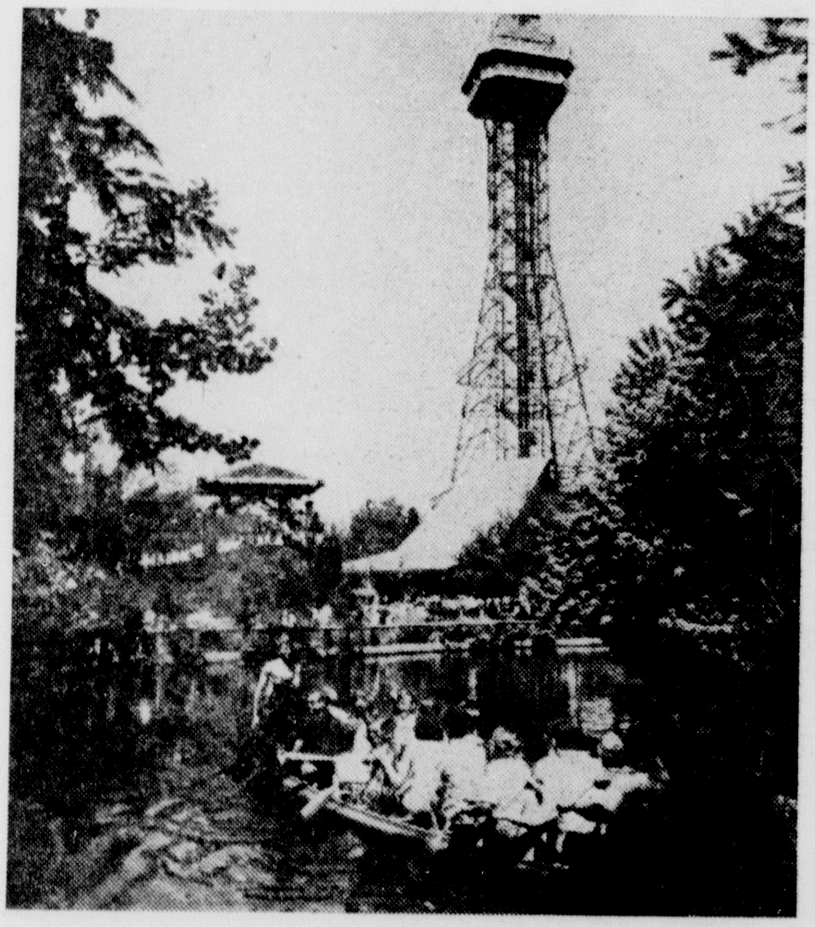
Visitors to the botanical gardens in Palm Springs, open daily 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., can preview these desert plants and be prepared to recognize them when they come upon them in their wild state.

ALL THE PLANTS in the two-acre, park-like outdoor museum (some 2,000 varieties are included) have been identified with markers.

Moorten's Botanical Gardens also include displays of rock crystals, unusual wood forms, desert curios and Indian lore, and, although only a mile from downtown Palm Springs, serves as a sanctuary for bird and other wildlife.

Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau, Box M, Municipal Airport Terminal, Palm Springs, 92262, will also answer questions and supply information on desert plant life.

THE YELLOW BLOOMS of the Encilia bush growing wild in the foothills and canyons around Palm Springs is only one of many wildflowers that turn the Southern California desert into a color spectacle with the arrival of the spring season.



SIX FLAGS OVER TEXAS may not be a rival to Disneyland, but the big amusement park near Arlington midway between Dallas and Fort Worth is Texas' biggest tourist attraction. Above, the world's largest land-based oil derrick towers in the background as a Caddo Indian war canoe "crewed" by tourists glides over a shimmering lake. At left is the Spindletop, one of the many rides, where the riders are held to the wall by centrifugal force as it spins at high speed. Six Flags Over Texas opened Aug. 5, 1961, and is celebrating its 10th anniversary this year, after attracting more than 16 million people.

A Travel Guide That Stresses Economy Without Overdoing It

In contrast to the usual guidebook for the European-bound tourist that points them, country-by-country or city-by-city, to the leading sights and the best accommodations, Abby Rand's "How to Get to Europe and Have a Wonderful Time" deals more generally with the techniques of travel.

Published by Charles Scribner's Sons and priced at $7.95 hardcover, $2.45 paperback, the book aims at helping the potential traveler to plan and conduct his trip so that it will be enjoyable without being wasteful.

WHILE THERE is considerable attention given economy, this is not overdone — a fault of some other travel books that can lure you into a mode of travel that is inexpensive but also unbearable.

Miss Rand, in the past a specialist on North American and European ski guides, begins with preparations and planning — the various flights available, the obtaining of the passport, the use of a travel agent, the making of reservations, the choice of clothing, the mobilization of finances, packing, etc.

Then after she has you overseas, she offers sound advice on the use of your hotel room, eating, drinking, sightseeing, shopping, transportation, tipping, "housekeeping" chores, emergencies, money, etc.

And finally a chapter upon the flight home, followed by some suggested itineraries, a listing of guidebooks, instruction on the converting of the metric measurements and a table on rainfall averages for leading European tourist centers.

MISS RAND'S advice is on a most practical level. Such as: "Visit the bathroom before leaving your hotel in the morning; never pass up a good john."

All in all, Miss Rand has compiled a wealth of truly helpful instructions and suggestions that are more than worth the price of the paperback edition (no need to spend the extra $5.50 for the hardcover version) and the time required to read it.

DON'T MISS THE SWISS

Opportunities to actually meet Swiss families at their homes is offered under the "Don't Miss The Swiss" program, which is being coordinated by the Zurich Tourist Office.

Every effort is made to arrange visits with people who share similar interests and background in this city. The "Don't Miss The Swiss" organization has in its files the names of cordial Swiss who are willing to serve as hosts to foreign guests.

There is no charge for the service.

DEATH VALLEY LURES MANY

A record 580,493 persons visited Death Valley National Monument in 1970, an increase of 26 per cent over 1969.

The main travel season at the 3,000-square-mile area runs from October through May when all National Park Service and private facilities within the monument are in full operation.

Scott Land Beckons To The Tourist

This year the laird of Abbotsford is issuing an invitation to the world to celebrate Sir Walter Scott's 200th birthday.

The laird is Patricia Maxwell-Scott, Scott's great-great-great-granddaughter and hostess of Abbotsford, his beloved home. She is inviting Americans over for a summer of celebration and rededication to the memory of the man who practically invented Scotland.

SCOTT MADE and lost a fortune out of writing. He made the romantic Gothic style popular in 19th Century architecture and single-handedly put Scotland on the map. He was translated into 35 languages.

He will be the subject of numerous observances and exhibitions this year in Scotland.

He revived the kilt, the tartan, the Scottish crown jewels, clan lore, and was the first president of the Edinburgh Gas Board among many other accomplishments. He was responsible more than any one man for the blend of graciousness, history and hospitality which is modern Scotland.

HIS HOME HAS been open as a museum since the year after his death in 1836. It had been presented to him as a gift by the nation shortly before he died.

Mrs. Maxwell-Scott is owner and personally guides visitors around.

She says "the American idea of Scotland seems to be overwhelmingly that of Sir Walter's Scotland. What they expect to see is what my great-great-great-grandfather portrayed."

Mrs. Maxwell-Scott personally shows visitors around her home seven days a week.

Most visitors are astounded by his collections of curiosities, thousands of them, souvenirs of Scottish history, Napoleonic history, mementoes of characters in his dozens of novels.

For information about "Scotland in Scott Year," write British Tourist Authority, 680 Fifth Avenue, New York City, 10019.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA will gain a new attraction the middle of this year when Africa USA opens its gates to the public. Proprietors of the 1,200-acre wild animal preserve near Fillmore in Ventura County are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Helfer and 7-year-old daughter Tana, seen above with some of the more ponderous residents of the refuge. In all, more than 1,000 animals subjected to what Helfer calls "affection training" will be "at home" in the man-created jungles and veldt. Included will be a number of animal stars of motion pictures and television shows.

Reviews Of New Reading

CLEOPATRA by Jack Lindsay; Coward, McCann and Geogheagan, 568 pages, $8.75. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

Peter Drucker, the management analyst-teacher, speaking in San Francisco recently, ed out how important it is for business men to distinguish between what is important and what is merely interesting. Reading "Cleopatra" by Jack Lindsay, I am struck by the fact that this is an equally significant distinction for authors and historians.

Lindsay has camouflaged a social and political history of Rome from the end of Julius Caesar's reign until the final defeat of Mark Antony in the more salable gown of "Cleopatra." He has collected many interesting facts about Rome and about the Hellenistic world in which Cleopatra operated.

We learn that women were often barren because they and the men with whom they mated suffered lead poisoning from the use of lead cooking utensils and the carrying of water through lead pipes. We are presented with a good deal of speculation about the attempt of Cleopatra, Antony and others to draw about themselves the theological mystique which would relate them directly to some of the Eastern gods worshipped by many of their subjects.

In addition, there is an entire chapter analyzing Virgil's fourth Eclogue, and a good deal of discussion abut whether or not Cleopatra's son Caesarion was actually fathered by Caesar.

All of this, and a great deal more, provides a provocative platter of intellectual hors d'oeuvres. It is not, however, the satisfying repast that a tightly-knit, well-informed biography provides.

Lindsay has transgressed against Drucker's distinction; he has given us a great many interesting historical tidbits, and he has not given us an important, cohesive picture of Cleopatra, the person, or Cleopatra, the historical force.

Part of the difficulty with "Cleopatra" would seem to be that Lindsay did not have any specific audience clearly in mind while he was writing the book. If the book is for scholars, it needs a different title and a different organization. If it is for the general audience to which it is being distributed, it needs to bring the non-scholarly reader under the spell of either Cleopatra or the period and convince the reader at least momentarily, of the importance of the author's synthesis.

Cleopatra may have captivated Julius Caesar and Mark Antony, but through Lindsay's eyes, her seductiveness was short-circuited because it never reached this reviewer.

A RELIEF of the Egyptian empress Cleopatra is included among the illustrations in Jack Lindsay's book, "Cleopatra." The photo is from the Bettman Archive.

Suspense Where We Live

THE STALKER by Bill Pronzini; Random House, 237 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Much of the enjoyment derived by Marinites and Southern Sonomans in reading this new novel comes from the fact that a great deal of the action takes place in this locality, and familiar landmarks abound.

But quite aside from that, Petaluma-born Bill Pronzini has written a taut, gripping suspense novel, with excellent potential for a movie thriller.

Six young men just out of service pull off an armored car robbery in Illinois with a $750,000 haul, and despite their amateur status, get away with it.

Eleven years later, the one-time bandits have scattered across the country, the statute of limitations having applied to their crime. From its proceeds, some have prospered and some have not.

Then, one by one, they begin to meet violent deaths. The first to go are the three who have remained in the East and Midwest. The three survivors, all living in Northern California, suddenly realize that they have become the targets of a vengeful assassin.

But despite their alertness, "the Limping Man" continues to strike and to kill.

The fear and the guilt he causes affects not only the men he is stalking, but their women as well. And the whole thing comes to a violent conclusion in a hunting shack on a slough off the Petaluma River.

Pronzini is unable to provide an answer to one key question — How did the Limping Man determine the identities of the six robbers when the police had failed?

But aside from that annoying gap, Pronzini has fashioned a well-plotted, tightly-woven and competently written novel.

It is all the more impressive in that it is his first novel, although he has been a prolific writer of published short stores. We are told on the dustjacket that Pronzini, while ordinarily now a San Francisco resident, is currently living on Majorca where he is at work on a second novel.

John Braine: No Longer Angry Man

THE VIEW FROM TOWER HILL by John Braine; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 253 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Rogers.

John Braine is probably best known in this county as one of England's "angry young men" of a decade ago. He is also the author of "Room at the Top," which was to a great extent an expression of that anger.

His newest novel indicates that he's no longer quite so angry, nor does he have anything very important to say. He has, in fact, updated himself and presented an apologia for the upper middle-class establishment.

His characters are perfectly nice people who haven't a thing in the world to worry about except the approach of old age and a growing anxiety that they may have missed some fun along the way.

This sport is introduced in the form of an old boy friend and a new girl friend, who liven things up considerably for our husband and wife principals.

The whole thing is very neatly and professionally done. Everything meshes — personalities, conflicts, events. The level of depth (or superficiality) is constant. The sexual machinations of the middle-agers is, on the whole, tastefully handled.

What bothers you is that you really don't care what happens to these people, how they get their jollies, or whether they drop dead of boredom. They never quite come off as real people, nor does the author convince you that the new morality is a satisfying answer to the problems of modern life.

Along with most modern novelists, Braine doesn't seem to realize that although sex may sell a novel, it doesn't necessarily make one. More likely he does know and puts the onus on the reader who buys the book.

Chase That Fails To Generate Excitement

HOT PURSUIT by Leo Katcher; Atheneum, 212 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Writing in the Los Angeles Times of Leo Katcher's earlier suspense novel, "The Blind Cave," Dorothy Hughes enthused:

"If once I said that only the English can write quality espionage tales, I now amend: the English and Leo Katcher. The Amblerian tradition in suspense will never lose importance while sustained by a writer with the discernment and intelligence of Leo Katcher."

Unfortunately, "Hot Pursuit" does little or nothing to sustain such fulsome praise.

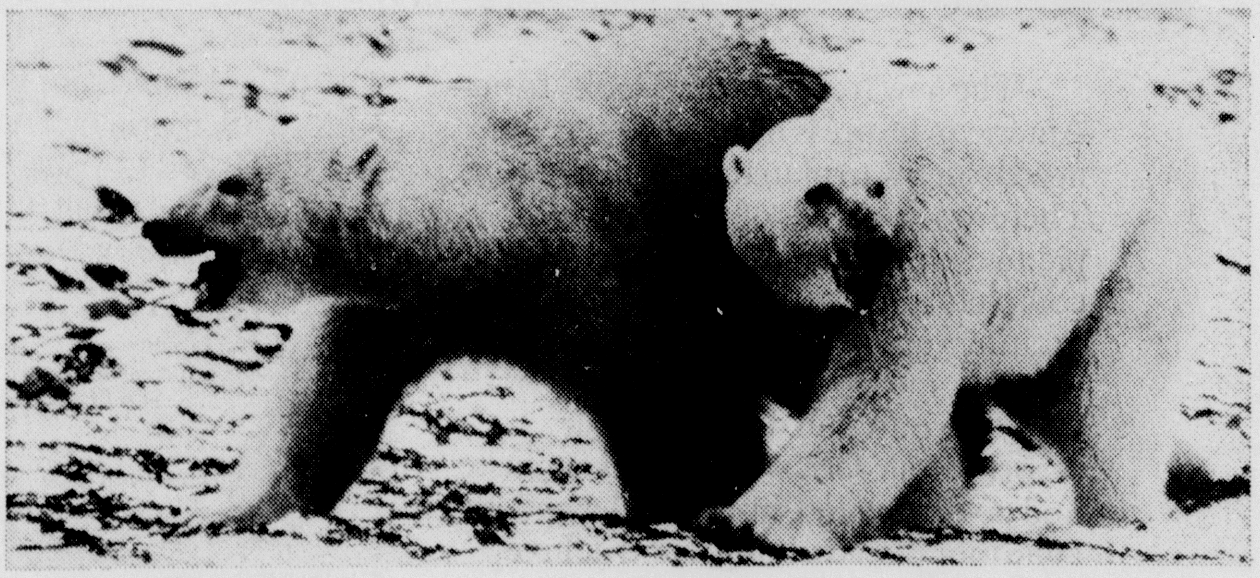
Set in the civil war-stricken Greece of the late 1940s, the novel focusses upon Robert Braden, an American guerilla warfare expert and professional soldier assigned to the Greek government. To Braden and a small party falls the mission of pursuing and punishing a Communist raiding band, and of rescuing their young hostages. The chase takes Braden through the rugged mountains of Greece, and eventually into dangerous Albania.

And all the while, Braden is aware that one of his own diverse group is a traitor.

But the book is slow in catching the reader's full attention. For one thing, Braden is a cold and uninteresting "fish." For another, the reader, by applying old and oft-used formula, has no difficulty discerning the identity of the "fifth communist," and thus suspense is minimized.

The best part of the novel comes late with Katcher's narration of the escape from Albania, when the book seems to suddenly catch fire and to generate genuine excitement. That and Katcher's knowledgeable use of Greek geography, where he spent a number of years as a foreign correspondent before becoming a full-time author, are the two best reasons for sticking with the story.

But this one falls far short of being "Amblerian."



TWO OF THE surviving polar bears, their numbers now reduced to fewer than 12,000 and facing new perils from hunters and oil prospectors, are pictured on the prowl along the icy shores off Hudson Bay in this photograph from Time-Life Books' newly published "Nature/Science Annual 1971 Edition" with Jerry Korn as editor. A special article and picture series is devoted to their plight. There are also articles on "Taming Earthquakes" ("science can't predict tremors — but might stop them"), the battle to preserve swamplands, the U.S. food crisis, the importance of sleep, electric power brown-outs, the Apollo 13 close call, imperiled species, the American Museum of Natural History, and a discussion by Gilbert Cant of "Is the Pill Safe?" To the last, the answer is "a qualified yes." Those are only some of the features, and Time-Life embellishes it all with its usual eye-catching use of illustrations, many of them in color. At $5.95, it's a bargain for the science buff.

The Reign Of Louis Napoleon

By DON KEOWN

IMPERIAL MASQUERADE by S. C. Burchell; Atheneum, 370 pages, $10.

NAPOLEON III is pictured in his regal finery in one of the illustrations from S. C. Burchell's book,"Imperial Masquerade."

It is one of the ironies of history that while France honors and the world keeps alive the memory of Napoleon Bonaparte, his nephew, Louis Bonaparte, who also reigned as emperor, is ignored or made a subject of derision.

Yet of the two Bonapartes, it was the latter who most influenced contemporary France and who left his indelible mark upon the metropolis of Paris.

And the two decades during which Louis Napoleon ruled France, first as its prince-president and then as Emperor Napoleon III, constituted one of the most colorful, and most intriguing eras in European history.

S. C. Burchell, an American scholar in European history, has recreated those years, 1850-70, vividly in his book "Imperial Masquerade" that stands as a splendid example of how popular history can and should be written.

Not only does Louis Napoleon emerge from its pages sharply drawn in all his paradoxical complexity and simplicity, but so does the flavor and the spirit of his time and his people.

The Second Empire, Burchell tells us, were "adventurous, contradictory and materialistic years" marked by flamboyance and extravagance, with the frivolous and the superficial valued above the serious and meaningful.

The song from the musical revue that, translated, ran "Without finery and pleasure, we must agree, life is just a stupidity," effectively stated the feeling of the times.

But it was also an era of duality — of beauty in close proximity to vulgarity, of a totalitarian government that often reacted with indecision, of people who welcomed the Empire and yet heaped scorn upon it, of a flourishing culture that ignored its most gifted artists in favor of stilted academicians, of splendid palaces, public buildings and theaters only short distances away from unbelievably noxious slums.

Louis Napoleon, himself, was very much a dual personality, a man who wrapped himself in the glory of the Bonapartes, and yet was most unprepossessing as an individual. A somewhat dreary and introverted man who yet felt himself a figure of destiny. A materialistic-minded puritan in his moral policies and pronouncements, and yet a woman-chaser who often joined in senseless revelry.

But most contradictory of all, he was a sincerely socially-conscious monarch "who believed the future belonged to the many, not the few," and who genuinely wanted to better their lot. And who nonetheless presided during a time when the gap between the poverty-ridden and the luxury-living widened disastrously.

Not by nature a militarist, despite his background, Louis Napoleon promised his people peace, yet led them into a whole series of military adventures that ended in calamity with the Franco-Prussian War which the French absurdly brought down upon themselves.

From the pages of Burchell's fine book, Louis Napoleon emerges as a well-intentioned if ineffectual ruler, not cut out for the role of tyrant, but, strangely enough, a political figure who might have been far more successful in democratic surroundings.

He left his country a great legacy in the beauty of the Paris he and his great planner, Baron Georges Haussmann, helped to recreate. And he also served, despite all the wastefulness of the France of his time, to pave the way for his nation's entrance into the new industrial, technological age. At heart, Louis Naploeon was more impressed by science than by the arts.

It is unfortunate that Burchell presents a less clear picture of the beautiful empress Eugenie than of her husband. For the Spanish-born Eugenie was a fascinating figure who at the close of the Second Empire actually wielded more power than the ailing Louis Napoleon.

And Burchell's book terminates rather abruptly, leaving us to consult the history texts for the final fates of Louis Napoleon, Eugenie and the other figures of the time. An epilogue tracing briefly their years after the fall of the empire would have been appropriate.

But still it is a marvelous book in the manner in which it brings alive the people and the spirit of the time.

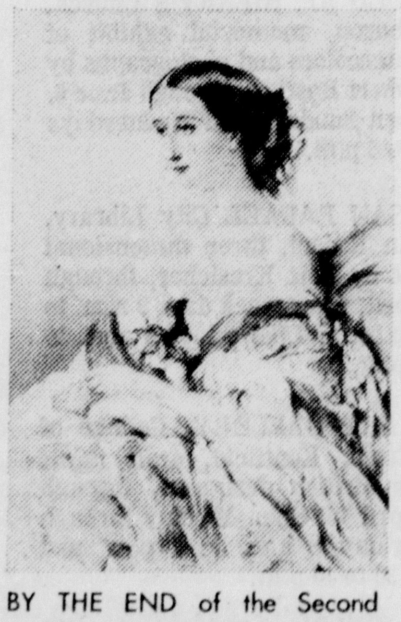
Its most memorable figures were not the popinjays of the court nor their lackeys among the intellectuals, but rather a group of young revolutionaries among the artists who despised and courageously criticized the decadence and hypocrisy of their country.

These were men like Edouard Manet, Charles Baudelaire, Emile Zola, Auguste Renoir, Paul Cezanne, Arthur Rimbaud, Gustave Flaubert, and the Goncourt brothers.

They were subjected to ridicule or to neglect, while the court and cultural decision-makers fawned upon less talented figures who avoided the reality of the present in their work and fostered the mythology of the past. A handful such as Jacques Offenbach bridged the gap. But the more solid figures within the Establishment were the scientists and engineers — the Louis Pasteurs and the Ferdinand de Lesseps.

Burchell's depiction of a time of flamboyance — "of a dying civilization" — is an exhilarating reading experience. Most importantly, Burchell has treated the times and its characters fairly, yet perceptively. He thus has created not only an entertaining book, but a work of historical scholarship that surpasses in its impact and value a great many of the more serious, "weightier" tomes. Little of Burchell's material is new. But he handles it beautifully, and evaluates it brilliantly.

More perceptive readers will note a disturbing number of parallels between the France of the 1860s and the United States of today — military adventures, rampant materialism, a love for luxury, a tendency to avoid or pervert reality, an emphasis on science, an increasingly heavy-handed government, a rebellious underground, etc.



BY THE END of the Second Empire, it was the beautiful empress, Eugenie, who was wielding the real power in the French palace.

ONE OF OUR favorite reference works, the "Guinness Book of World Records" continues to grow with each edition as man adds to his feats that range from the subline to the absurd.

The newly published 1971 edition totals 608 pages, in itself a record, up from the 544 pages of its predecessor.

Twin brothers Norris and Ross McWhirter are again responsible for the Sterling-published compendium of "firsts," "mosts," "greatest," "smallest," etc., that can only be described as amazing in its detail.

The widest bridge? The Crawford Street Bridge in Providence, R.I., at 1,147 feet. The biggest golf course bunker? Hell's Half Acre on the seventh hole of the Pine Valley Course in New Jersey. The largest palace? The Imperial Palace in Peking. The highest waterspout? Off New South Wales, Australia, in 1898 — 5,014 feet. Densest population? Macao. Most consecutive bowling strikes in sanctioned play? By Frank Caruna and Max Stein, 29 each. Newest metal? Kurchatovium. Longest-lived comic strip? The Katzenjammer Kids.

From its pages you learn that some one jammed 46 people into a small car, some one else lay on a bed of nails for more than 25 hours, and yet another passed the driver's test on the 40th try after failing 39 times.

Giving the book a local angle is a photograph of Marin's Mike Suyderhoud, credited with the world's longest water ski jump.

As always, the book is a fascinating mixture of essential information and curious trivia.

Where else would you learn so quickly the total cost of America's space exploration program? Or the name of the holder of the world's water-treading title? Or the identity of the claimant to the international bomb-defusing crown?

And all for $5.95

BEAGLE BOOKS of 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, has continued its paperback reprinting of the work of H. P. WRITER'S DIGEST has issued its 1971 "Writer's Yearbook" ($1.50) with its traditional helpful listing of potential markets plus in-depth reports on a number of key categories and such special features as an interview of Jessica Mitford, a piece by Alan Appelbaum on the business aspects of writing, an article on the obscenity question by Erich Segal and a discussion of "Does Advertisng and Promotion Sell Books?" by Sol Stein that is not encouraging to newspapers or reviewers. Many professional writers regard the Yearbook as a must.

BALLANTINE has begun issuing its popular illustrated History of World War II series in a new quality gift book format, with the first volume to be given this special treatment being "Tank" by Maj. Kenneth J. Macksey, focusing on the mobile warfare and tactics. It is profusely illustrated and offers an expert analysis tf how the armoured vehicle came to be the dominant factor in the ground fighting of the 1940s. The 160 pages are eight and a half by 11 inches, and there are 6 full-color plates.

IN THE NEW Ballantine paperback list: a reprint of Robert Franklin Leslie's delightful "The Bears and I," billed as "the North American 'Born Free'."

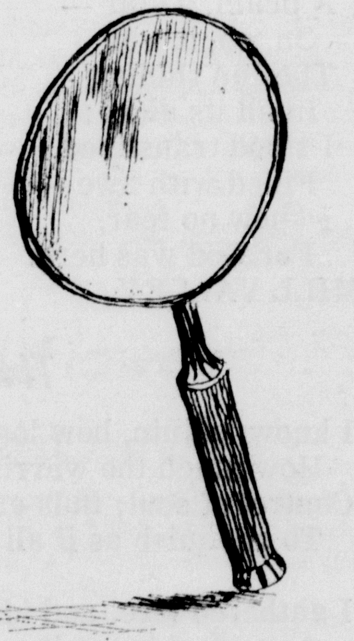
MURDER IN THE WALLS by Richard Martin Stern; Scribner's, 181 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



Richard Martin Stern, author of spy thrillers and mystery novels, has fashioned his best book to date in "Murder in the Walls."

The mystery element is low-key and offers no great surprise. But characterizations and settings are no less than superb.

In the city of Santa Cristo in the American Southwest a prostitute is found murdered in the house operated by Flora Hobbs. She conducts her "business" in one of the region's landmarks, a fortress-like hacienda dating back to the early 17th Century.

Then another body is found out on the desert.

It is up to Lt. Johnny Ortiz of the Santa Cristo police to probe the deaths for links and to bring the killer or killers to justice. He has the help of Cassie Enright, a young black anthropologist, who is also dedicated to the thwarting of a politically-motivated scheme to demolish Flora Hobbs' house to make way for a new road.

Ortiz and Miss Enright are a couple of delightful characters, and Stern develops the romance between them nicely. Other members of his cast are a colorful and interesting lot. And the mood and feeling of the Southwest pervades the novel.

Stern has produced a superior novel in keeping with his current position as president of the Mystery Writers of America.

MY EASTER PRAYER

My prayer for today is for greater
Human enlightenment and compassion;
To eliminate all wars and greed,
All selfishness and hate between
Men and nations forever.

May this Easter Day fill the hearts
Of all men throughout the world,
With a strong desire to live in peace,
And sense the spirit of Christ's
Love and mercy enter into them,
That everyone should feel
Infinite happiness by living with
Each other in fraternal peace and love.

EASTER SUNSETS

The golden hues,
Rays of light,
The blinding sun
Of day portrays,
Pauses for a while,
Out on Point Reyes,
And there,
Beauty and imagination
Awake, beautiful sunsets,
Gleaming,
For all the living to see,
Nature's glowing light.

JOY CRY

Shout it through
the shadowed valley —
And from the tip-top
mountain crest —
Separation and evil
are dispelled;
God cared enough
to send the very best!

NOVATO GLORIA TOVANI

EASTER

I got lost — I got lost
In the shadow
Of the cross;
Suddenly a ray,
A beam, a star —
On, no, it was
The sun shining
In all its glory;
I stood transfixed,
Filled with awe —
I knew no fear,
For God was here.

THE BATTLE

I know, within, how long the fight's been fought,
How much the warring factions strove to win
Control of soul; thus each side vainly sought
To vanquish as if all else had not been.

I gathered lore, and idle talk, and such
As served to exalt me among both sides
Without the slightest thought to just how much
Such dalliance with truth the truth just hides.

At long, long last — and fully seen not yet —
This distant war became so real to me;
My soul was being fought for as they met!
My eyes were opened and at last I see.

Too long a craven! Now, with shield and sword,
For Christ Jesus — my Savior and my Lord.

When Soil Warms, It's Time For Dahlias

Garden Page

As soon as the soil becomes warm in spring it is time to plant Dahlias, one of the favorite sources for summer flowers.

Your nurseryman has tubers on display now with color illustrations of the flowers.

The most popular types of Dahlias planted in California gardens are decorative, cactus and pompon. Of course, you will see many, many more types in flower shows featuring Dahlias.

THE DECORATIVE flowers are huge, sometimes almost reaching a foot across when grown by experts. The colors range from pure white through yellow, orange, pink, red, violet, and bicolor.

They may be formal in arrangement, or shaggy — in which case they fall into the "informal decorative" class.

Plants of the decorative Dahlias are robust growers and require lots of room to grow. Set them three to four feet apart and keep them securely tied to stakes. The terminal flower buds are removed, all but one, to provide the very large individual flowers.

THE CACTUS Dahlias have more slender petals and smaller flowers. The general appearance is shaggy in some and formal in others. The trend of popularity is toward the latter group, which are known as "semi-cactus."

Most popular colors in the cactus types are yellow, apricot, red, white and yellow. There are some bicolor forms that are very effective. They are easily made into pleasing arrangements and are long-lasting when you follow these suggestions.

Cut Dahlia flowers (when fully mature) in the evening, preferably a day or two after irrigation. Crush or cut the ends of the stems in several places and plunge into deep water overnight. They will be in excellent condition for arranging in the morning.

THE POMPONS are very formally arranged small ball-shaped flowers in shades of white, pink, yellow, red and blue. Plants are medium-height growers, well-branched, and carry a profusion of flowers. They make excellent small table arrangements in combination with many varieties of ferns.

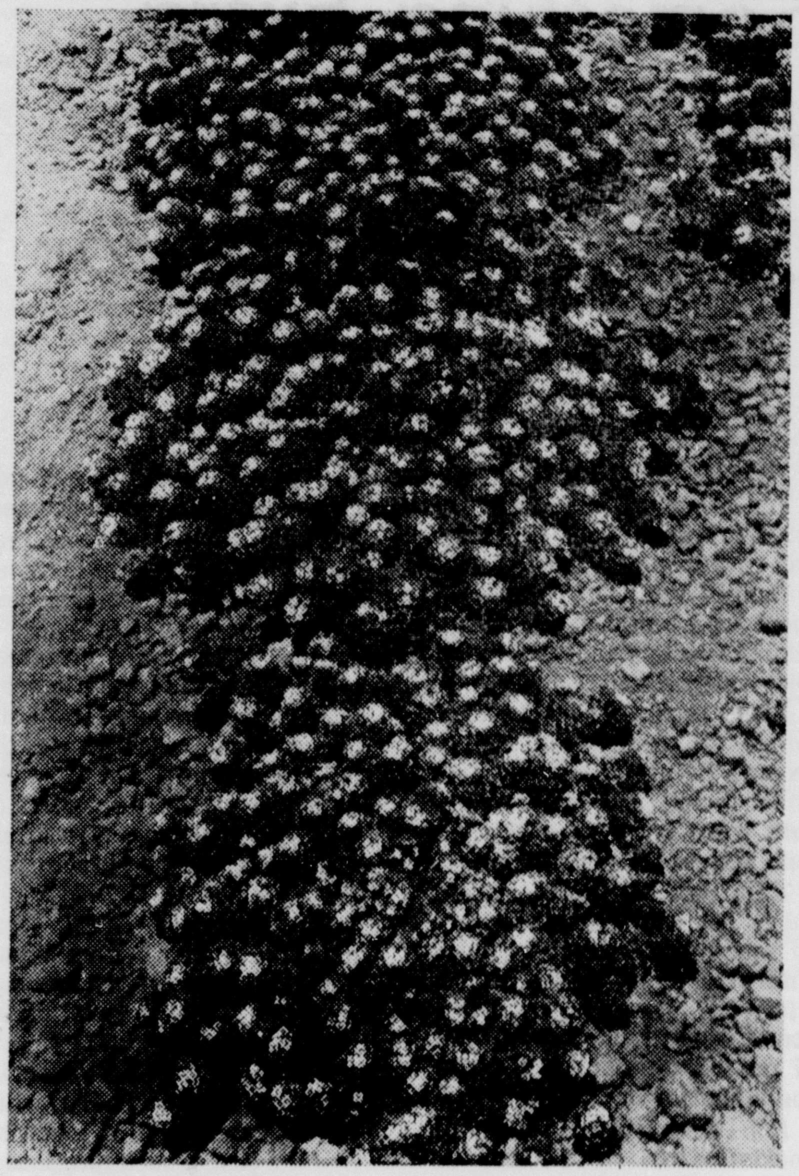
A type that is gaining in favor, and you may see on display at your nursery is the collarette.

They derive their name from the collar of broader petals surrounding a disk of smaller petaloids in a contrasting color.

After digging 10-inch deep holes and incorporating a dry food with the bottom, then add four inches of untreated soil on which the tuber is set. Place a four-foot stake in the hole and lay the tuber horizontally with the eye adjacent to the stake. Cover the tuber with two or three inches of soil and soak with water.

AS THE SHOOTS arise from the eye, add more soil until the basin is almost full. Leave a depression for adding water as required.

Be sure to keep the stalk firmly attached to the stake and increase your watering schedule as the plant grows larger and the weather gets warmer. As long as your soil is good and you have a cushion of food under the plant you will not have to add any more fertilizer.



GROUND-HUGGING, sweet-smelling alyssum is a natural as a border for a path, drive or bed. Its tiny but clustered flowers come in white, lavender, pink, lilac and purple.

Plants Make A Difference

Have you ever noticed how interior decorators feature growing house plants in their store and magazine displays?

The plants aren't for sale. They're just there because they make the tables and chairs and couches look their best.

A glossy, tubbed aralia set beside a chair brings out the wood and fabric tones. Peperomias and wax flowers, phildendrons and ivy, call attention to the beauty of a walnut finish. They make maple furniture sing, compliment mahogany and teak, and point up the charm of natural woods.

Green leaves trailing from a shelf "finishes" that shelf with taste; and a graceful little palm can add distinction to a room.

The relationship between furniture and plants is a happy one, and more and more homeowners are taking advantage of this fact, taking a tip from professional decorators and using house plants to enrich their own decor.

Here's all you have to do: Choose the plants that appeal to you most, put them in suitable containers in the kind of light they prefer, and keep them healthy with a few minutes care each week.

Suppose, for instance, you would like a tall, dramatic plant against one wall, a low, bushy one to set on a table, and a trailing vine to spill downwards from a shelf. There are dozens of plants in each category at your nursery, and from them you might choose a Queensland Umbrella Tree (tall), a peperomia (low and bushy), and a grape ivy to trail down. Your nurseryman will help you choose the right sized containers, and you can make potting easy by bringing home a bag of specially prepared soil mixture too.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant annual flowers now for late spring and summer bloom. Check what's available at your nursery — the list of colorful candidates is a long one.

✓ Tuberous Begonia seedlings can be set out now. Use them to brighten the shade garden and plant some in containers for close-up enjoyment.

✓ Plants make thoughtful Easter season gifts.

✓ Many Rhododendrons are blooming — or will be doing so soon — which means now is a good time to shop for these regal beauties.

✓ Use dwarf citrus as tubbed or patio plants. They bear heavily in containers and are ornamental throughout the year.

✓ Remember, when planting anything, good soil preparation pays off.

✓ You can give spring-blooming shrubs a light pruning simply by cutting blossoms for the house.

Ferns Don't Need Flowers To Work Magic In Garden

There's nary a flowering member of the fern family, but who's to complain? Few plants, however bountiful, have more beauty to offer.

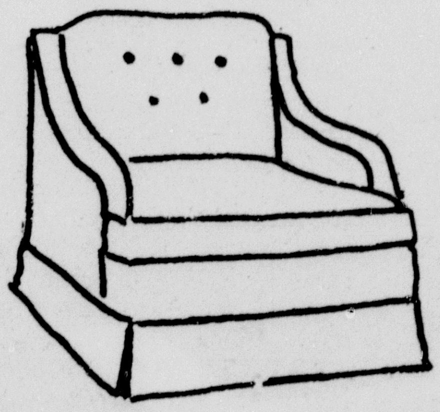
Ferns lend enchantment to the garden. Their delicate green fronds are a year-round breath of spring, a fountain of refreshment from which you can never drink your fill.

Biggest and goldest of the family — and why not start with them — are the treeferns, at least two of which are offered by most California nurserymen. There are few more striking specimen plants for an east or north entrance patio. Or you can try them in a tub for use on the open porch or terrace, or again, as an eye-catching accent in a garden background.

The two most common tree ferns in California are the Australian Tree Fern and the Tasmanian Tree Fern. Both are tropical and exotic, with the latter having more to recommend it, possibly, because of its more compact size.

Keep Them Sharp

Dull garden tools make work harder. Tools, such as edgers and shears, should be sharpened regularly.



A moderately modern chair is in good taste in any decor. We set great store by comfort. Come in and try this one.

Something Extra To Enliven Your Living Room Decor

A Build-It-Yourself Commode Lends A Touch of Elegance

By STEVE ELLINGSON

You can go all out on upholstered furniture, floor coverings and curtains, and come up with nothing if you don't finish your room with suitable, useful accent pieces to give it that extra-added attraction.

Every room needs end tables, coffee tables and the like to expand its usefulness and give it substance. Just such an accent piece is pictured at right with actress Corrina Tsopei.

THIS HEXAGONAL commode not only provides allure to your room, but you will also find it to be exceedingly functional. The doors open to a roomy storage area for all sorts of miscellany that keeps accumulating in every hoem.

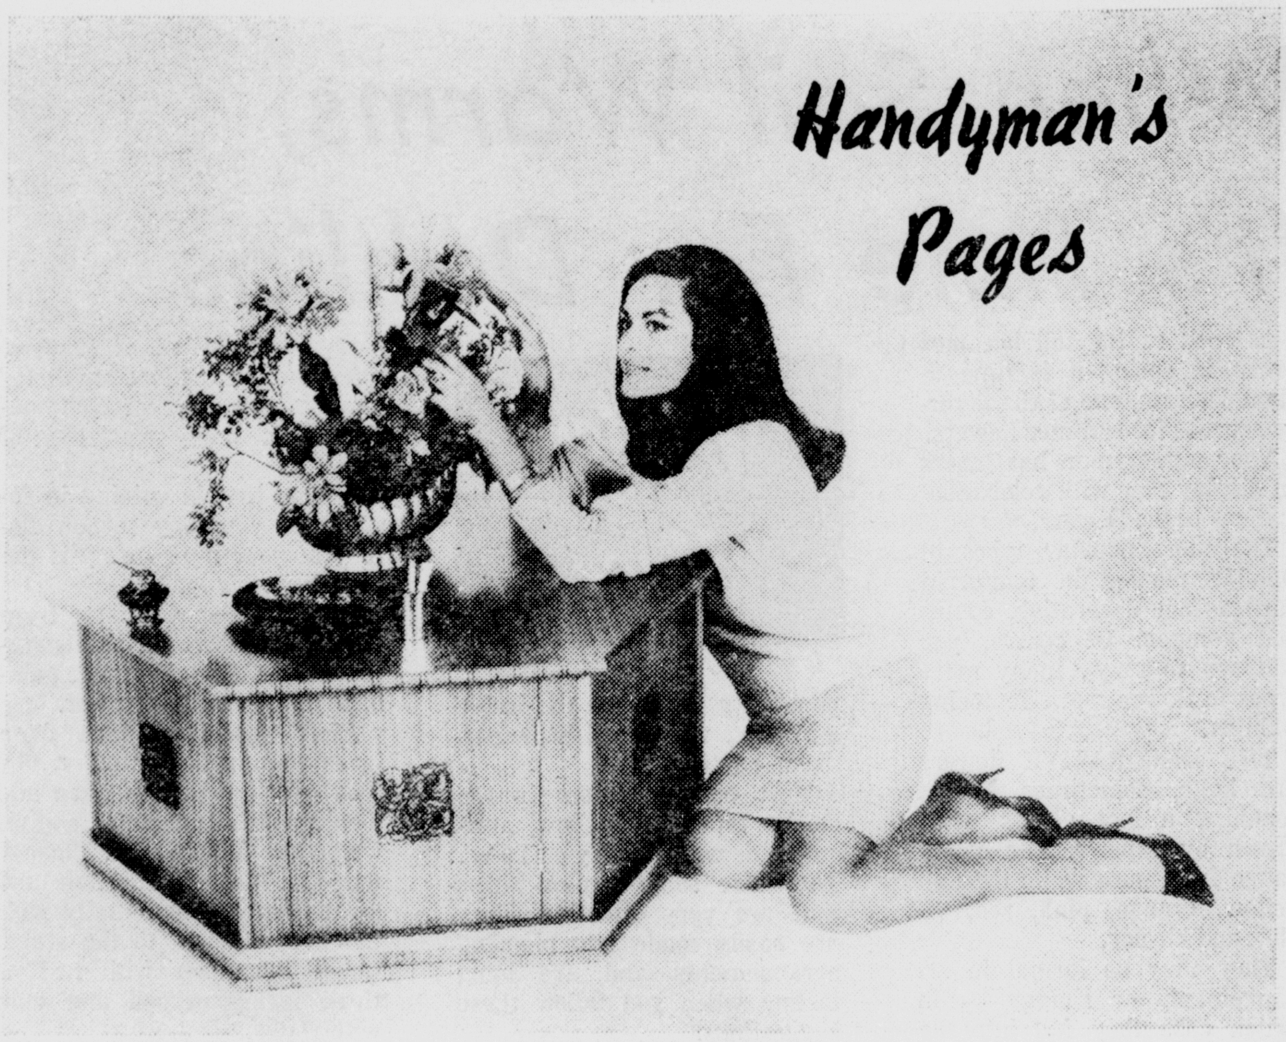
It's ideal when used as a cocktail table by a chair or sofa. It's mounted on casters and can easily be moved from one area to another, a handy idea when cleaning time comes.

It's the sort of furniture that makes things just a little easier for the busy homemaker and hostess who likes style.

Even though this commode has a rich and elegant appearance, it's something any amateur can build when he uses the full-size pattern. All you need do is trace the pattern parts on plywood, then saw them out, and finally put the parts together.

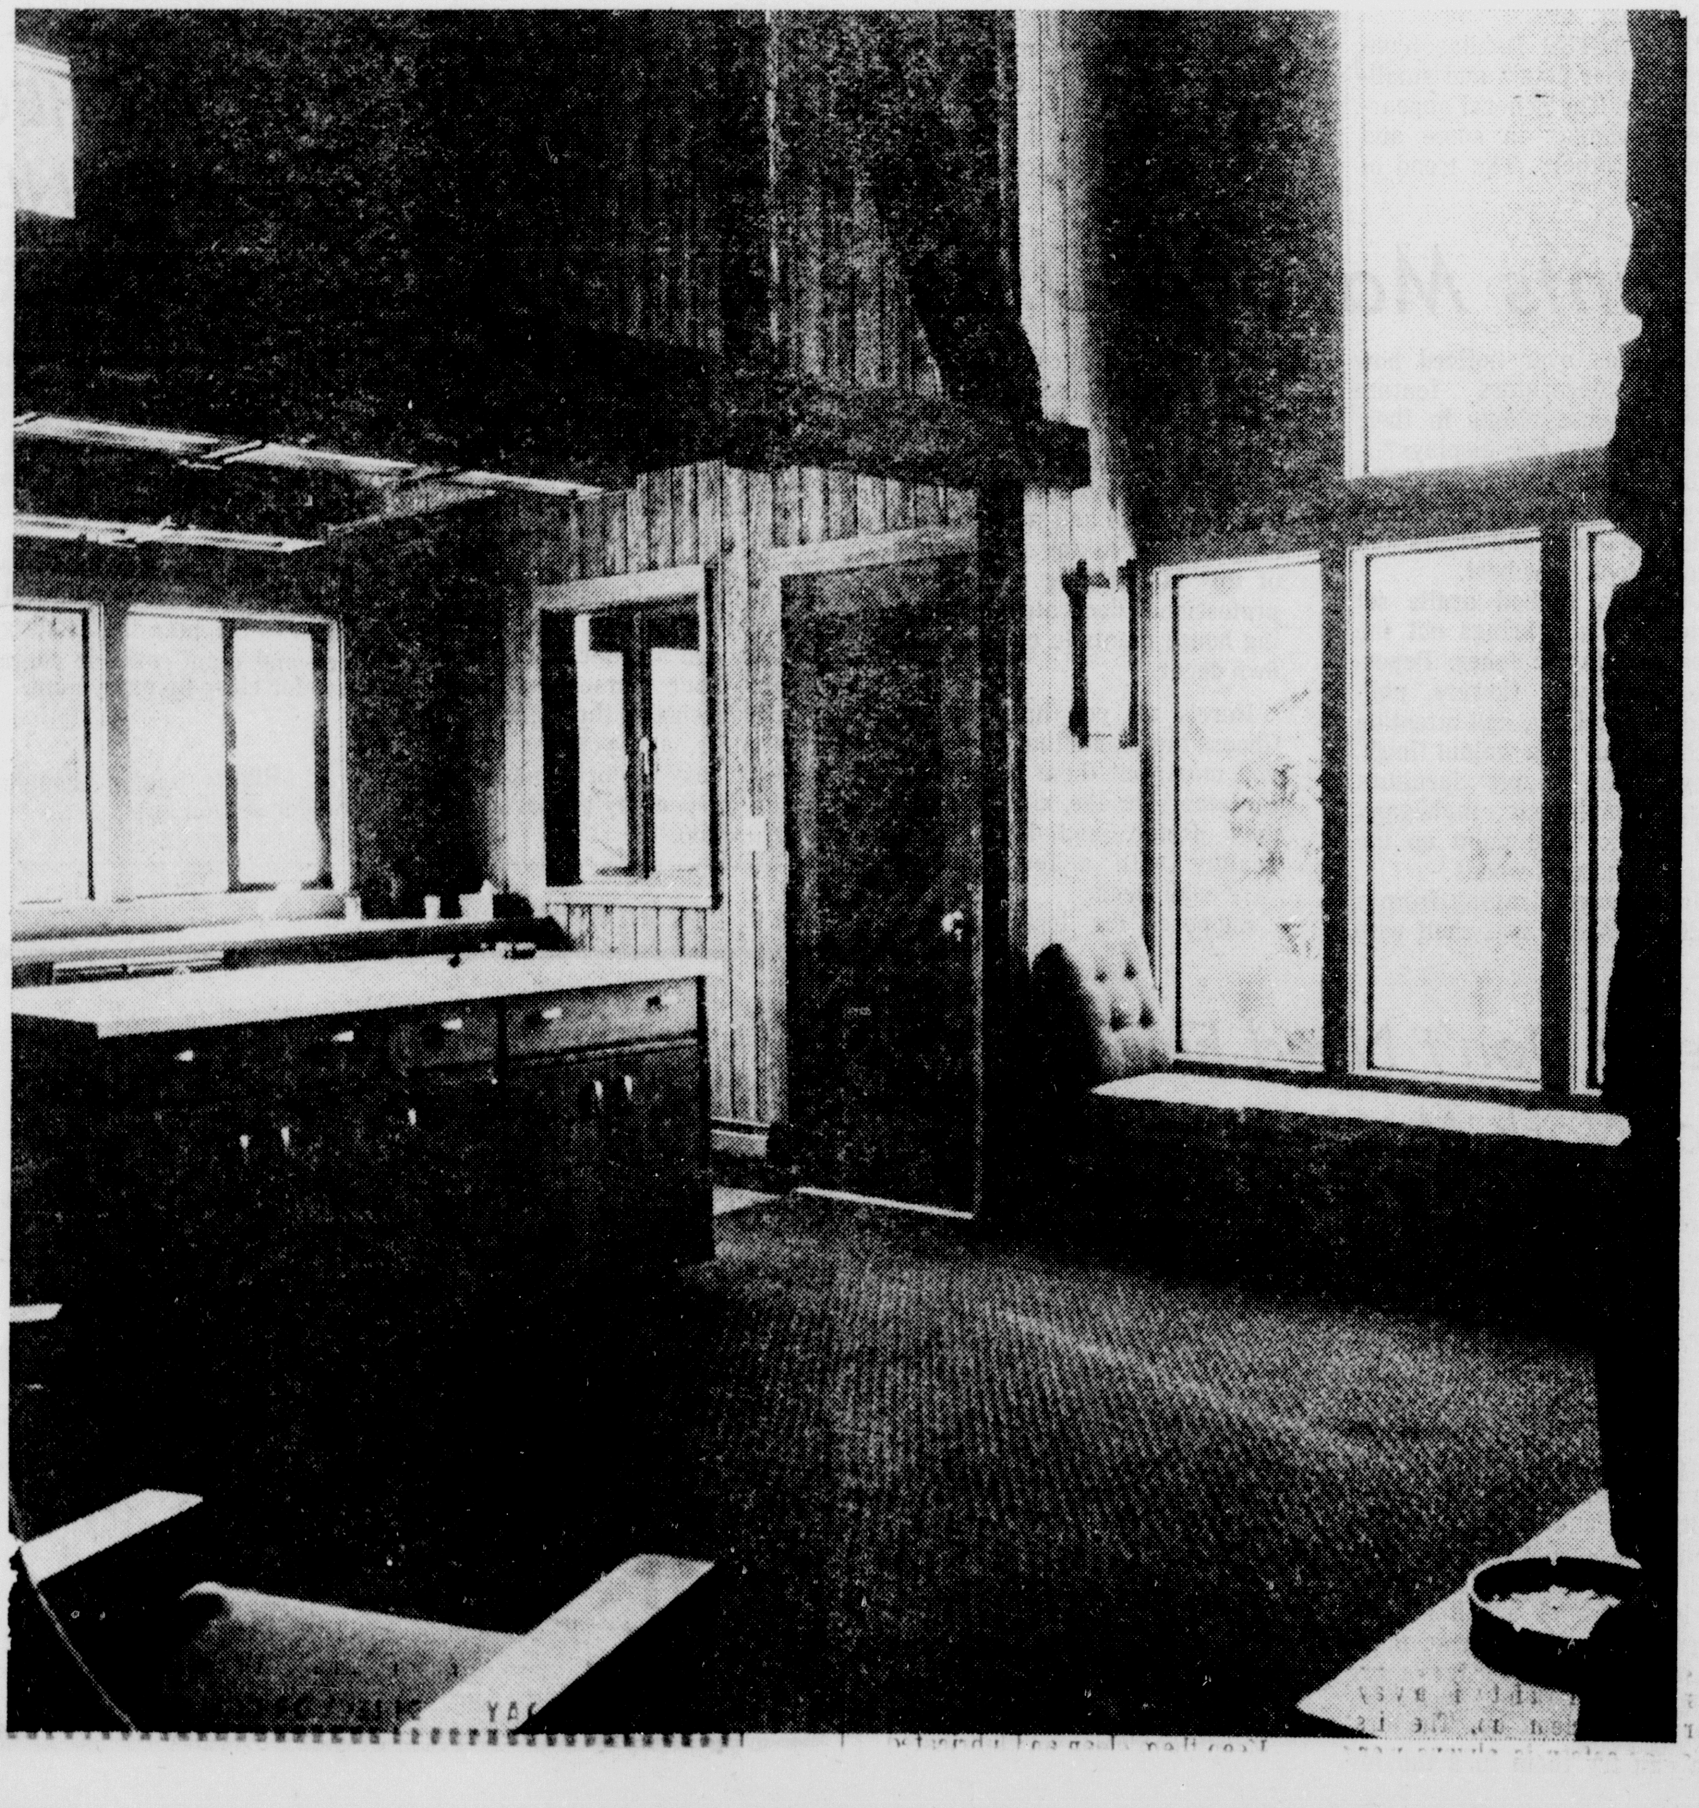
The commode shown was made of birch, but numerous other fancy plywoods are now available, should you prefer something different.

GETTING A professional finish is as simple as A, B, C when you use this type of material. And the cost of such furniture is very low when you do your own building.



THIS HANDSOME commode built by a home handyman with the help of a Steve Ellingson pattern competes for the eye's attention with the pretty model, actress Corrina Tsopei.

To obtain the full-size Commode Pattern No. 414, send $1. (Add 25 cents per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409.



OPEN LIVING IS THE THEME OF MOST "second" or vacation homes constructed in recent years. As shown here the emphasis is placed on the use of wood which requires little maintenance, serves well for years to come, and imparts a feeling of warmth and comfort. Cathedral ceilings are popular, especially when large glass areas are ed to provide view and natural illumination. The wooden kitchen cabinets have the added feature of plastic laminate tops, making them easy to maintain. Numerous plank-and-beam construction ideas can be found in a 16-page full-color brochure offered without charge by the Wood Products Industry Fund, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

The Versatile Wood Bookcase

One of the most versatile storage units possible, the wood bookcase is the simplest home furniture to build, and is available, unfinished, at lumber dealers, department or variety stores, mail-order houses and other outlets.

Even the inexperienced can build an unusual storage wall by arranging various sizes of one-or-two-shelf bookcase units in an attractive pattern, some suspended from the ceiling, others resting on the floor.

One unit may be placed on end for storing records or tall books. A record changer and speakers appropriately placed in adjoining units make the wall a music center.

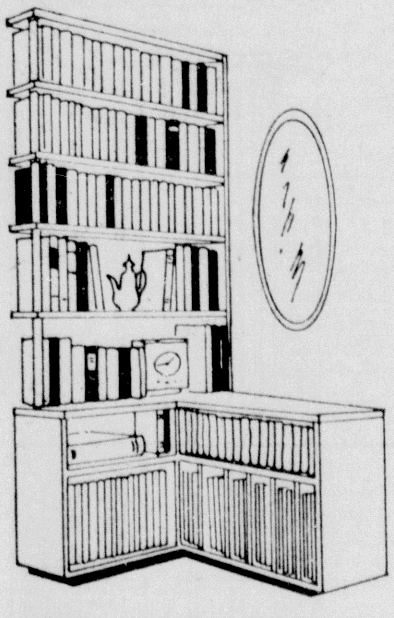
Creating a home office is simple — just add a fold-down desk-door to one of the cases at the proper height and pull up a chair.

Another approach to an inexpensive storage wall is to build a series of tall, backless bookcases of one-by-10 or one-by-12-inch pine or fir boards and arrange them along a bright-colored wall.

For a combination end table-storage unit, two bookcases may be fastened together and topped with wood or plate glass.

An especially useful trick is to convert an otherwise useless corner into a cozy nook for book shelving.

BOOK NOOK



BOOK SHELVES, cabinets of pine and fir boards all serve to brighten what was once an idle corner of a room, and provide the vital, always scarce display and storage space for such possessions as records, books and art objects. The use potential of such corners are too often overlooked in planning a home's decor and much potentially valuable space goes unused and wasted.

A Quiz On Power Tools

Remember when the advent of Spring brought forth the hammer, drill, saw and other assorted hand tools?

Spring was annual fix-it time and most of these tools remained virtually unused the rest of the year. With the variety and efficiency of electric power tools there is no longer any special season for the do-it-yourselfer.

Power tools have turned many an unhandy man and woman into everything from cabint maker to boat builder.

Still, the coming of warm weather does bring out the do-it-your-selfers in greater numbers than at any other time of the year. And, the more do-it-yourselfers, the more mishaps.

The "seasonal" do-it-yourer is more prone to accidents because he is inclined to overlook saftey precautions.

THE POWER tool manufacturers have consistently added and improved safety features on their products. However, the Power Tool Institute points out that these safety devices are no better than the man using the tool. It takes no more effort to operate a power tool safely than carelessly. In fact it probably saves time in the long run.

The rules for safe operations are simple. Spend a few moments taking the quick true or false quiz below and learn how safe a do-it-yourselfer you are.

1. The manual accompanying your power tool merely lists the places to get repairs and parts.
2. A broom, brush, dust cloth and waste-can have no place in the work area.
3. Water has no effect on the new power tools.
4. Wear what is comfortable for you to work in.
5. Tools with three-prong plugs and double insulated tools are equally safe.
6. Because of the connections within the power tools, electric cords should not be pulled.
7. Use a vise or clamp only when doing delicate work.
8. Almost all electric tools can be adapted for any job.
9. Power tools are rugged and need no maintenance.
10. Tools should not be easy to reach on a high shelf.

ANSWERS

1. (False) READ AND HEED — Don't touch a power tool until you've read and understood the instruction manual. Every tool has its own special requirements and characteristics. Find out what the tool does and doesn't do. Learn the proper applications and limitations. Get the best performance with the least danger.

2. (False) CLEAN BEFORE, DURING AND AFTER — Before you begin a project, clean up your work area. During your work, keep it clean and after you're through, clean up. The first rule for safety is always work in a clean up. The first rule for safety is always work in a clean, uncluttered area. This rule applies outside as well as inside. You won't have a more successful project from tripping over a rake or falling into a can of paint. What you will have are cuts, bruises and misery.

3. (False) IF IT'S WET, DON'T DO IT — Electricity and water don't mix. Power tools should never be used in damp or wet areas. That goes also for wet grass and hedges as well as for cellars and kitchens. If your work area isn't completely dry, wait or move to a dry area. You'll remember an electric shock a lot longer than a short wait.

4. (False) FASHION IS FOLLY — Dress for the occasion. Jewelry, scarfs, flowing sleeves and any loose clothing court trouble. Never wear anything that can get caught in moving parts. When working outdoors, it is always a good precaution to wear rubber gloves and rubber footwear. Wear a mask if you're creating a dust storm. And, for any task using power tools, wear safety glasses.

5. (True) PLUGS, PRONGS AND POWER — Unless your power tool is double insultated (and the instruction manual will say so), then it must be grounded. If the tool has a three prong plug it must be used in a three prong electric outlet. An adapter can be used that permits a three prong plug to be used in a standard two prong outlet. But, an adapter has a grounding wire that must be attached to a grounding ciruit. Don't try to outsmart the manufacturer (and yourself) by cutting off, bending back or pulling out the third prong.

6. (True) CODDLE THE CORD — The electric cord on your power tool is not a substitute handle. Do not carry the tool by the cord and don't yank it out of the electric socket. Keep the cord away from excessive heat, sharp objects and corners. You not only shorten the life of the cord, but you won't help your own either.

7. (False) FLYING OBJECTS AND FLYING OPERATIONS — Use clamps, a vise or weights to secure all your work. And, make certain you are secure too. Stand firmly and in balance. Flying lumber and metal cause serious accidents; so do flying operators.

8. (False) USE RIGHT TOOL — Each power tool is designed for a specific set of function. Do not force a tool beyond its capacities. You will shorten its life and possibly your own. Small tools are designed primarily for small jobs; don't force them to do jobs too large or heavy. We don't ask a child to do a man's job.

9. (False) TENDER, LOVING CARE — Baby your power tools and they will return the favor with long, efficient service. Keep them clean and lubricated as recommended. Use the proper accessories and attach them properly. Keep cutting edges sharp and clean. With a little care, your power tool will outlive you.

10. (True) A TOOL'S HOUSE — When you've finished, put your power tools away where they will be safe and in good condition for your next do-it-yourself session. Store them high, dry and out of the reach of children. Tools are not toys. They are also not indestructible. Put them away with care so they can continue to serve you long and well.

The correct answers to this 10-point quiz can spell the difference between pride of accomplishment and injury. Play it safe.

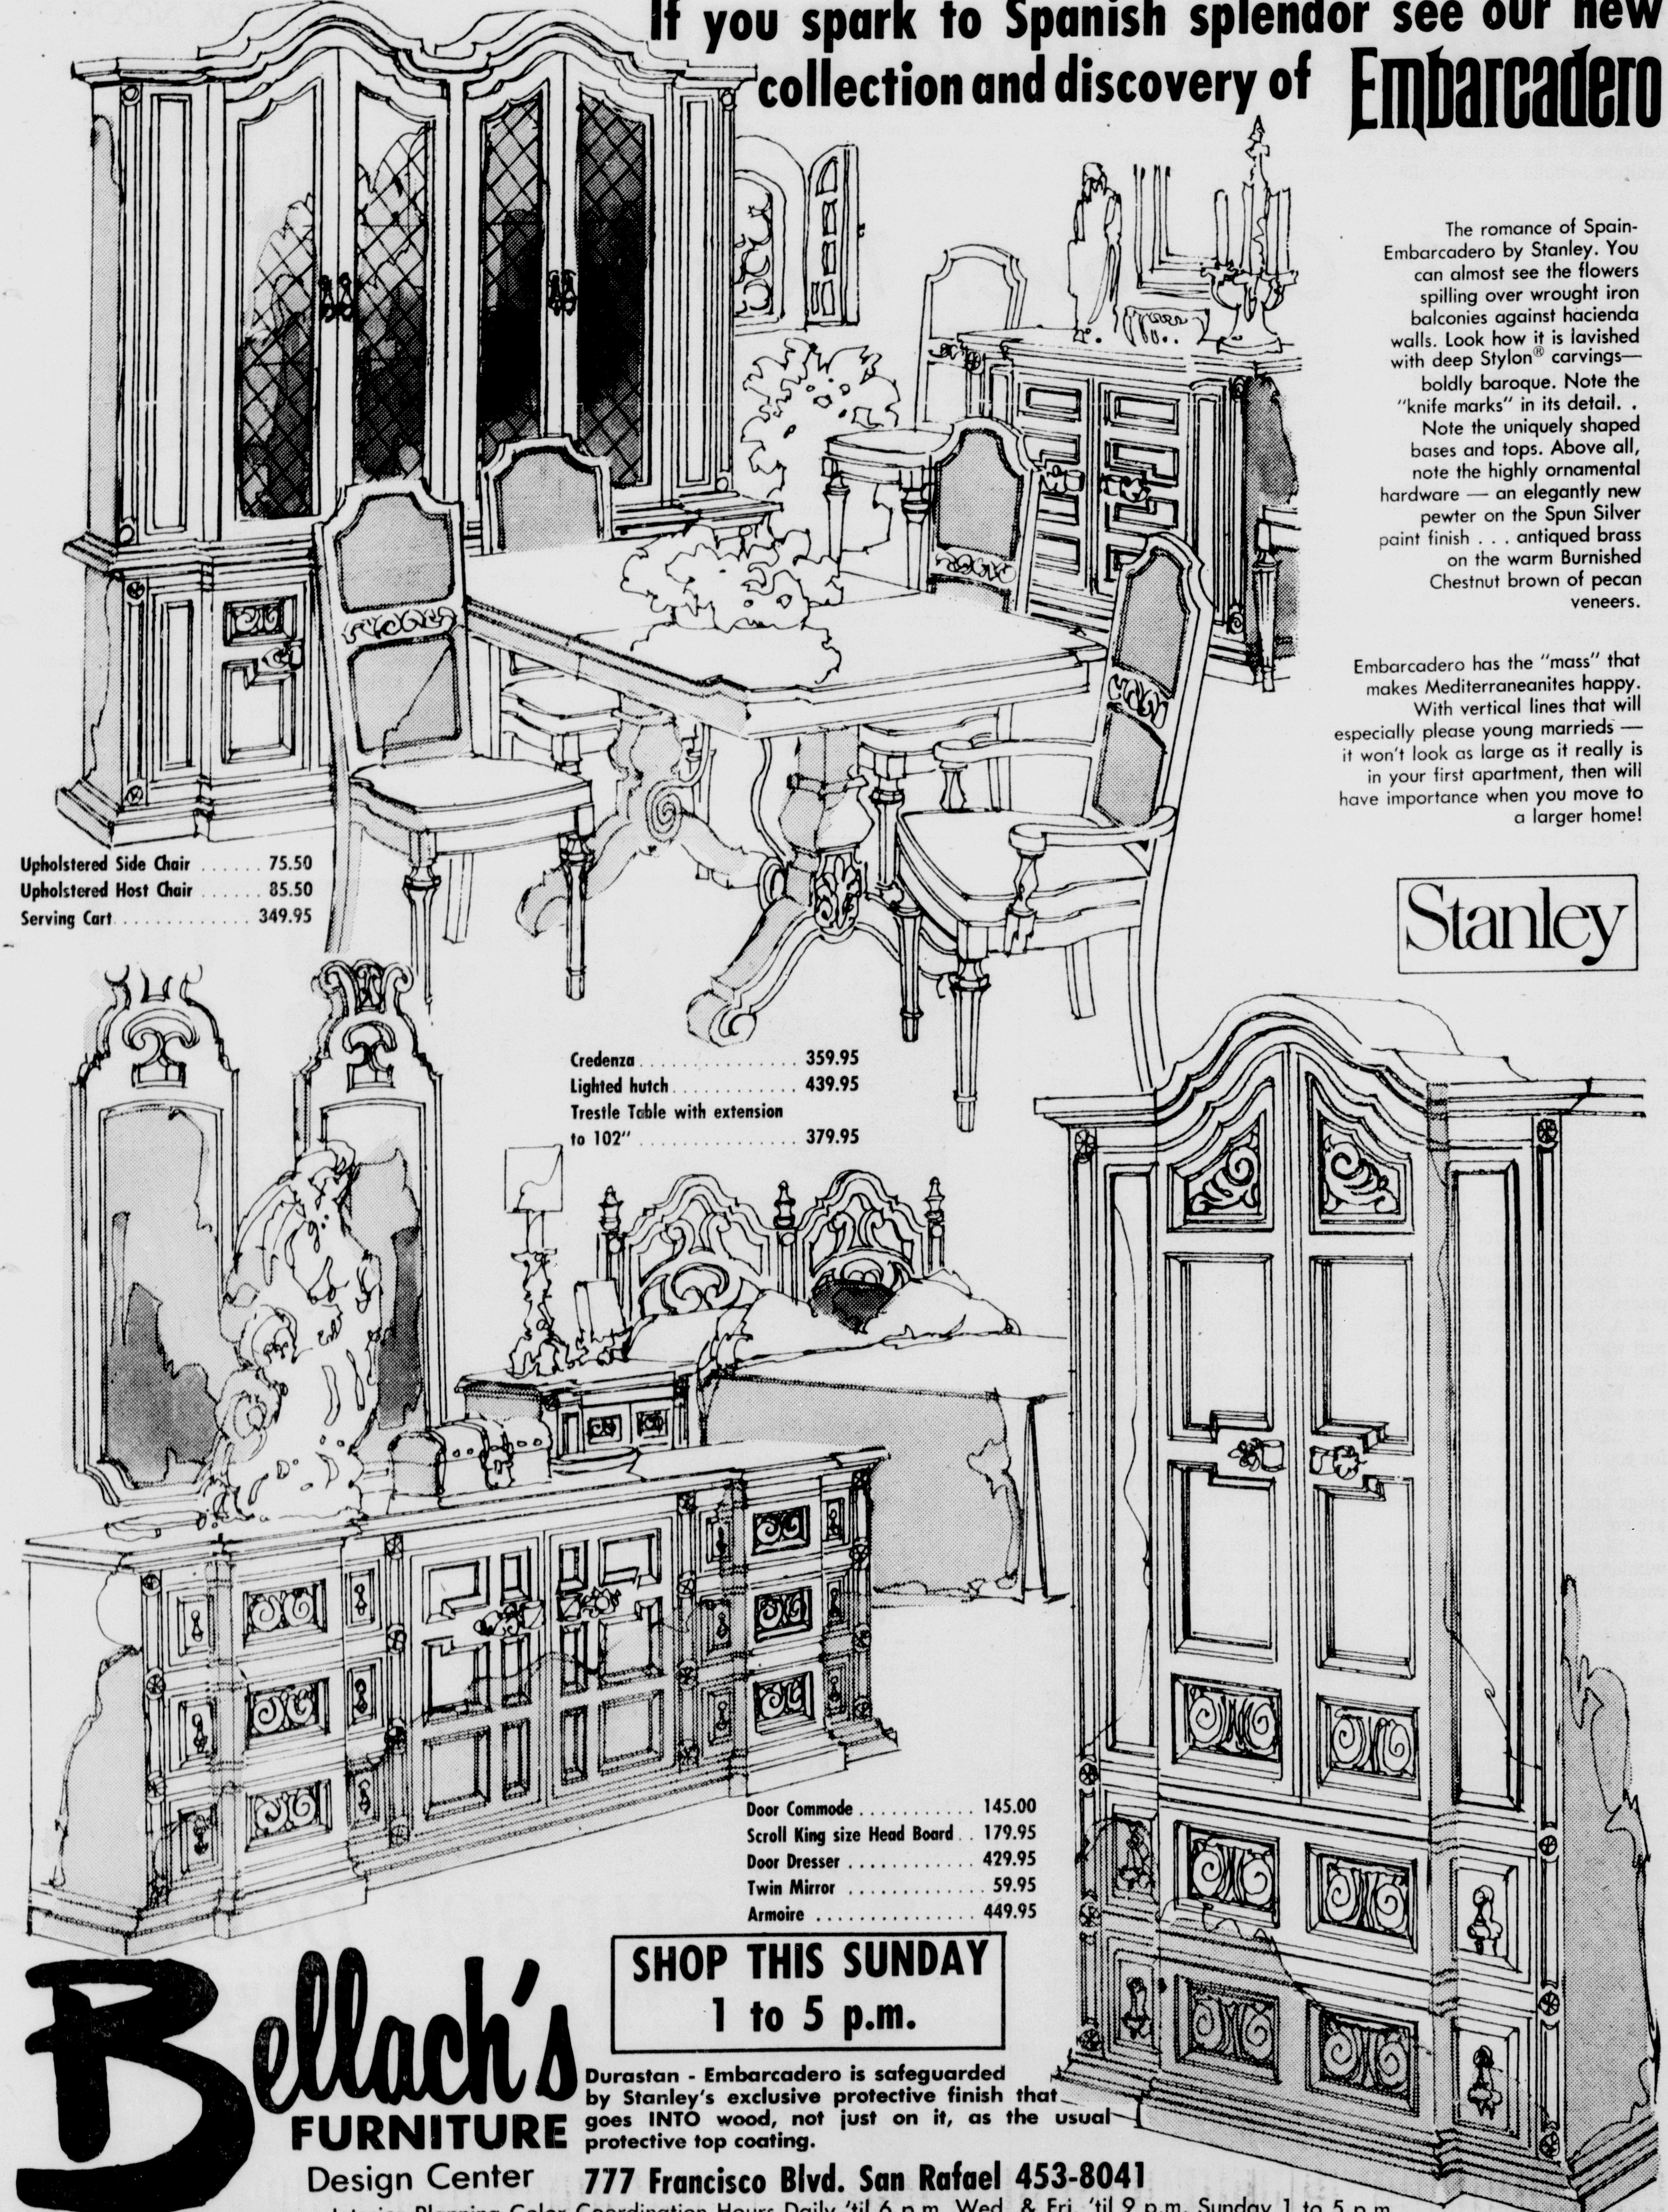
If you spark to Spanish splendor see our new collection and discovery of Embarcadero



The romance of Spain-Embarcadero by Stanley. You can almost see the flowers spilling over wrought iron balconies against hacienda walls. Look how it is lavished with deep Stylon® carvings—boldly baroque. Note the "knife marks" in its detail. . Note the uniquely shaped bases and tops. Above all, note the highly ornamental hardware — an elegantly new pewter on the Spun Silver paint finish . . . antiqued brass on the warm Burnished Chestnut brown of pecan veneers.

Embarcadero has the "mass" that makes Mediterraneanites happy. With vertical lines that will especially please young marrieds — it won't look as large as it really is in your first apartment, then will have importance when you move to a larger home!

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Can anyone remember when the network television seasons consisted of 39 weeks of fresh episodes, followed by only 13 weeks of summer repeats that could be ignored, if desired? That's almost ancient history. The gradual erosion of that ratio finds the repeats beginning now in volume in mid-March. If this keeps up, the television seasons soon may consist of 13 weeks of new stuff and 39 weeks of repeats.

NBC's "GE Monogram Series" will present a one-hour special, "Childhood! The Enchanted Years," on April 22. Specialists in the study of children will participate in this examination of the formative years of infancy.

CBS has embarked on a schedule of programs to be aired from time to time during the next six years that will examine the origins of the American Revolution as a prelude to the United States' bicentennial in 1976. The programs consist of conversations between correspondent Eric Sevareid and impersonators of various historical figures involved in achieving our independence.

Singing actress Michele Lee and her husband, James Farentino, appear in the Hollywood Television Theater production of the Paul Shyre stage adaptation of John Dos Passos' notable novel, "U.S.A." The noncommercial Public Broadcasting Service plans to offer it on May 4.

From Bus Driver, To Television Star

By VERNON SCOTT

Christopher Stone of "The Interns" was driving a tour bus through MGM studios one day and decided actors had it easier than bus drivers, or baseball players which he hoped to be, and decided to join the greasepaint set.

He gave up an opportunity to try out with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1968 and enrolled in an acting school.

Young Stone, who plays Pooch Harris in the CBS series, found little satisfaction in drama school and quit after six weeks.

HE PLAYED guest shots in "The Outcasts," "The FBI," "Mod Squad" and other shows before signing for a top role in "The Interns."

Because young actors aren't paid what they once were, Chris lives in a duplex a block above Hollywood Boulevard. He has furnished his quarters himself with a water bed, stereo set, a pair of couches, hanging lamps and a plentitude of mirrors and paintings.

It has the look of a bachelor pad.

Acting isn't quite as simple as Stone suspected it might be from behind the wheel of a tour bus. He must report to Columbia Studios at 7 a.m. and is rarely through with his acting chores until 7 p.m.

HE FIXES himself a quick cup of coffee in the morning which sustains him until lunch. At noon he eats at a lunch counter near the studio.

Almost invariably he has dinner at the Black Rabbit Inn, a restaurant which resembles houses in the neighborhood. The cooking is homelike, as is the atmosphere..

It is operated by out-of-work actors, writers and musicians.

Once in a great while Chris attempts to fix his own dinners. They consist of steak or hamburger, neither of which are recommended by local gourmets.

ON THE OTHER occasions he has his dates come up to his home to prepare dinner.

An ardent ecologist, Stone frequently spends weekends in Northern California or Baja California south of Tijuana to get away from air pollution and masses of people.

On dates he enjoys picnics in the mountains, movies or an afternoon at one of the marinas watching the sailboats ply through the Pacific.

MORE OFTEN than not, however, Stone is content to remain at home listening to his rich collection of stereo albums which range from Beethoven to Elton John. He owns most of the albums ever recorder by the Beatles.

Stone's silent protest against smog is his refusal to buy an automobile until a pollution-free automobile is manufactured.

Meanwhile he gets around town hitch-hiking, on the bus, or as a passenger with one of his dates.

"I don't mind living in California in the middle of the ecological problem," Stone says — he's a native of Manchester, N.H. "At lesat we see it, recognize it, and are working toward curing it."

Joyce Reads On Wax

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Successful writers often have been asked to record in their own voice selections from their work so that they may leave another legacy to the future.

Dylan Thomas was such a writer. And two young women who had only $5,000 saved between them gambled all of it on the belief that persons with a love of poetry would buy a recording of Thomas reading his own poetry.

Marianne Mantell and Barbara Holdridge won their gamble and Caedmon Records was born.

Now Caedmon has come forth with reproduction of some excessively rare recordings by one of the most controversial and, perhaps, misunderstood writers of all time. They may be heard on "James Joyce Reading Ulysses and Finnegan's Wake" (Caedmon TC 1340).

Joyce had a pleasant voice and his enunciation was clear. Thus it is a pleasure to hear him reading the memorable "Anna Livia Plurabelle" from "Finnegan's Wake" and a passage from the Aeolus episode from "Ulysses."

Cyril Cusack fills out the recording with readings from Joyce.

The late Dylan Thomas may be heard again on two LP's "Dylan Thomas Reading from His Works" (Caedmon TC 1342) and "In Country Heaven — The Evolution of a Poem" (Caedmon TC 1281). Another bonanza is "The Waste Land — and Other Poems" read by T. S. Eliot (Caedmon TC 1326).

Another company also has contributed to the spoken word library with "The Robin Hood of El Dorado" told by Lorne Greene (MGM YDS 303) and "Goody Two Shoes" told by Efrem Zimbalist Jr. (MGM YDS 301).

SELECTED SINGLES "My Sweet Lord" by Billy Preston (Apple 1826), "Home Sweet Oklahoma" by Leon Russell and The Shelter People (Shelter 7302), "Loving You Comes So Easy" by Melba Moore (Mercury 73183), "Waitin' On You" by Dave Mason (Blue Thumb 7122), "Love Is Plentiful" by The Staple Singers (Stax STA 0083).

TAPE DECK: American Airlines Astrostereo Popular Program No. W-70 (Kapp-Uni W-70), an Ampex tape release, is ideal entertainment for parties. It contains three hours of music on one reel and features Louis Armstrong, Roger Williams, Jack Jones, Burt Bacharach, Shani Wallis and Neil Diamond. This is a tape that may be heard on American Airlines flights.

Cassette: "Chacksfield Plays Simon & Garfunkel and Jim Webb" (London M 84151), and Ampex tape release, includes all of the major hits of these composers.
